Britain May Send Protest To Mussolini

By RICHARD D. McMILLAN
British United Press. Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin.

LONDON, April 8.—Eleven members of the Chamberlain cabinet are understood to have favored an immediate public announcement that Great Britain will fight to defend the independence of Greece and Turkey against totalitarian aggression in the Balkans.

The Italian invasion of Albania and threatening attitude toward other Balkan states in the effort of the Berlin-Rome axis to prevent the successful culmination of the "Stop Hitler" bloc is believed to be the forerunner of further acts of aggression on the part of Hitler and Mussolini, and the cabinet members in question believe that for the safety of the world Great Britain should make known her intentions immediately.

LONDON, April 8.—Invasion of the little kingdom of Albania by Premier Mussolini's black-shirted legions may result in the urgent reassembly of parliament, which only Thursday adjourned for a 10-day Easter recess.

Following a council of ministers at 10 Downing Street, at which the Albanian situation was reviewed for an hour and a half, it was announced Prime Minister Chamberlain was cutting short his fishing holiday in Aberdeenshire and cabinet ministers would remain in, or near, London for consultation.

The prime minister, guest of Lord Forbes, is leaving Aberdeen by train tonight, arriving in London in the morning. Mr. Chamberlain's decision to return is interpreted to mean the government is taking a serious view of developments.

It is expected a strong protest will be addressed to Mussolini on the grounds the military measures against Albania constitute a breach of the Anglo-Italian friendship pact ratified last November.

It also is believed the government will refuse to recognize any attempt by Italy to bring the

Airplane Is Destroyed By Fire Here

General War In Europe Predicted By April 15

By LYLE C. WILSON
British United Press. Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Military officials here today expressed the belief that Europe must face the issue of a general war between now and April 15. The latter date they set as the 'deadline' which will see Europe again ablaze with troops on the march in almost every country.

They expect the test to come when Germany attempts to seize Danzig and the Polish corridor. Secret reports received here indicate that a German thrust at Danzig and the corridor is a matter of when, not if, and that there is a strong possibility that Germany will attempt to occupy part or all of Silesia at the same time.

These reports and predictions are based on the belief that the German financial condition is becoming precarious, and that the longer Hitler postpones what is believed to be an eventuality the less money he will get. It is recalled in this connection that the absorption of Czecho-Slovakia netted the Nazis $20,000,000 cash.

Confidential reports from Europe also indicate that early action is necessary if Germany is to complete the Polish coup before the solidification of the Franco-British "Stop Hitler" campaign.

By FREDERICK OESCHNER
British United Press. Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

BERLIN, April 8. — Reliable observers reported today active German troop movements in East Prussia as well as between Berlin and the Polish border, although official German spokesmen gave assurances that there was "nothing sinister" in these movements.

The purpose of the movements is not clear, but observers believe their limited extent indicate they are not aggressive at the moment. However they are moving into strategical "jumping off" places.

The same observers report that troops have been concentrating in the southwestern corner of East Prussia in the past few days and that the old Reich garrisons on the Polish border have been greatly strengthened.

If Germany has aggressive plans they believe that the critical days will come between April 12, when large numbers of Easter leave men return to their garrisons, and April 20, when an estimated five divisions of troops are scheduled to converge on Berlin for Adolf Hitler's 50th birthday parade. Both these events offer an excellent screen for a large scale movement of troops and may be used as camouflage for another dramatic coup by the Fuehrer.

Invasion Of Albania Is Peace Threat

CORDELL HULL

ITALY ACTION CONDEMNED BY CORDELL HULL

"Violates Will Of All Peoples In The World" Secretary Says

WASHINGTON, April 8.—State Secretary Cordell Hull in a statement approved by President Roosevelt said today "the forcible and violent invasion of Albania is unquestionably an additional threat to the peace of the world."

The invasion, Mr. Hull said, "violates the will of all peoples in the world that their governments shall lead them, not toward war, but along paths of peace."

The state secretary condemned Italy's action after consulting with the President by telephone. Mr. Roosevelt is in Warm Springs, Ga.

Mr. Hull indicated an arms embargo against Italy, under the U.S. Neutrality Act, was under discussion by the U.S. governments officials.

Another high U.S. government official said that the administration considered Mussolini Albanian coup a prelude to a more serious European crisis.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., April 8.—President Roosevelt gave full endorsement today to State Secretary Cordell Hull's statement that Italy's invasion of Albania constituted an "additional threat" to peace. At the same time it was made known officially the situation presented a serious problem for the future of United States world trade.

The President told a press conference he had talked by telephone with Europe and also had talked with Mr. Hull and approved the latter's statement on the "forceful and violent" invasion of Albania.

He said the statement spoke for itself.

Tirana Falls After Night of Fighting

By CHARLES GUPTILL
Associated Press Foreign Staff

TIRANA, April 8.—Fascist Italy's troops occupied this capital of Albania without hostile manifestation today after a night of terror and disorder that attended the rout of her proud little army of mountaineers and the reported flight of her king to Greece.

The advance column of Italians rolled in from the coast, 25 miles away, just a little over 24 hours after the Italian advance began, against the bitter resistance of poorly-equipped Albanians fighting for their independence.

It was 9.30 a.m. (1.30 a.m. M.S.T.) when the first Italian soldiers entered the capital

Bersagliere on motorcycles, their faces and uniforms grey with dust and with cap feathers flying from their steel helmets, were first to enter the city.

The Italian occupation came after a night of terror in Tirana as gen-

Zog Does Not Consider Country Has Yet Fallen To Italians

By STEWART BROWN
British United Press, Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

TIRANA, April 8—While Italian troops occupied Tirana and Italian Minister Count Ciano flew here to form a new government which would be under Italian influence, King Zog, fleeing Albania, joined his girl wife and their three-day-old son, at Florina, Greece. They are preparing to move on to Salonica.

HOPES TO ENLIST AID

King Zog made it plain that he does not consider Albania has yet fallen to the Italians. He says he hopes to enlist the aid of the great powers and to return to Albania to direct guerilla operations against the Italian invaders. Fierce Albanian resistance is still being encountered in some parts of the mountainous kingdom, and the country is far from conquered.

Just before her husband arrived Queen Geraldine appealed for world aid for her adopted country. Mrs. Gladys Stewart Gjiranaith, an

Royalty Visit Will Bring $4,500,000 In Tourist Trade Here

Visit of Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth is expected to provide a tremendous impetus to tourist traffic in Alberta this year and to be the means by which business in general booms, according to estimates made Saturday.

Their Majesties visit is expected to increase tourist traffic in Alberta by 25 per cent, which will mean that during the year 750,000 tourists in 200,000 automobiles will come here and will leave $4,500,000 behind them.

The provincial government is making special efforts to provide tourist facilities and efforts will be made to have all main highways in the best possible shape to take care of the heavy influx.

PARKS ARE MAGNET

Alberta's national parks are proving an ever-increasing magnet to tourists and this year promises to be one of the biggest and best yet.

World's Fairs in the United States will lure many a tourist dollar from Canada, this summer but indications are the Dominion, chiefly as a result of the spring visit of the King and Queen, in the aggregate will gain much more than it will lose.

In fact, the country's tourist associations have turned the World's Fair at New York and the Golden Gate Exposition at San Francisco to their advantage by urging travellers to "See Canada while en route to the fairs." The geographical

PARIS VIEWS ITALY'S MOVE AS BOOMERANG

Moslems Will Co-Operate With French and British Against Duce

PARIS, April 8.—Italy's invasion of the Moslem Kingdom of Albania was reported in Paris today to have so strengthened French and British Empires in the Mediterrantean it may prove a boomerang for Premier Mussolini.

"This means the end of Italy as the self-styled protector of Islam," said a high official in the French colonial office.

In Syria, where French failure to push through a 1936 Syrian independence treaty led to disorders and strikes which French troops had to quell, the reaction was immediate.

SCATHING ATTACK

Fazil El Khouri, president of the Syrian parliament and outstanding leader of the Nationalist bloc which has led the anti-French agitation, issued a scathing attack on Italy. He indicated his bloc would now co-operate with the French.

Even as Italian troops fought their way into the little Mohammedan state on the Adriatic, the Italian station at Tripoli, Libya, broadcast an appeal in Arabic for Moslems in Tunisia, France's protectorate, to make a demonstration next Sunday against the French.

Immediately after the broadcast there were a number of Italian demonstrations by Arabs in Tunisian cities, however, and various Moslem organizations telegraphed declarations of loyalty to the French resident general's office in Tunis.

ZOG GETS SUPPORT

Meanwhile, George Peyani, leader of the Albanian opposition to King Zog's government and head of a delegation of political exiles in Paris, called at the Albanian legation to announce his unity with Zog against Italy. He had been a bitter opponent of Zog.

GERMANY WILL STAND BEHIND ITALY'S COUP

Western Democracies Are Warned Not To Interfere In Albania

BERLIN, April 5.—Germany today warned the western democracies that she was standing behind Italy's invasion of Albania, and that the inference that her might would be in readiness if anyone tried to halt her axis partner.

The warning, repeated several times by radio, could be interpreted almost as a challenge.

"Official German quarters regard news of the landing of Italian troops in Durazzo," said a broadcast official statement, "as an action within the letter and spirit of the Italo-Albanian friendship treaty of 1927 and also as an expression of deep Italian sympathy for the Albanian people."

FULL UNDERSTANDING

"Germany has a full understanding for the protection of Italian interests in this region and would neither understand nor sanction it if any western democratic powers, which have no interests there, should wish to meddle in the legally unobjectionable position and action of our axis partner."

The decision to issue the state-

RUSSIA SENDS DESTROYERS TO TROUBLE ZONE

Soviet Not To Be Caught Unawares By New Developments

ISTANBUL, Turkey, April 8.—Four Russian destroyers steamed through the Bosphorous from the Black Sea last night en route to the Mediterranean.

The movement was interpreted in unofficial quarters here as indicating Russia's close interest in the present situation in the Mediterranean and her determination not to be caught unawares by any developments following the Italian invasion of Albania.

ATHENS, April 8.—Dictator General John Metaxas marshaled his ministers and conferred with diplomats on Italy's dramatic coup in neighboring Albania.

Greek officials did not conceal their alarm over the Rome-Berlin axis drive into the strategic mountains of their northwestern neighbor.

TUNIS, Tunisia, April 8.—The Italian radio station at Tripoli, Libya, last night broadcast a violent attack on the French administration of Tunisia, and urged the natives to "demonstrate" Sunday.

Mayor Invites Scot Football Team To Visit

Invitation to the Scottish football team which will tour Canada this summer to include Edmonton on its itinerary was mailed Saturday by Mayor John W. Fry.

Writing to Sam Davidson, secretary of the Dominion Football Association, Winnipeg, Mayor Fry said that this city has the finest stadium in western Canada.

A special effort is being made this summer, the Mayor added, to "put soccer back on the map," especially among junior players.

Floating Weather Stations Provided Across Atlantic

NEW YORK, April 8.—American Export Airlines, a subsidiary of the American Export Steamship Company, announced last night the first of a series of floating weather-reporting stations across the North Atlantic would be put in service tomorrow. The stations, installed aboard 18 ships of the steamship company, will be used to obtain information necessary for survey flights between New York and Mediterranean ports, the first of which will be made this month.

Aberhart Has No Intention Visit Quebec

Premier William Aberhart on Saturday declared that he had no knowledge of a visit to Quebec to attend a conference of the Social Credit League of Canada, to be held on June 18. He said no arrangements, nor commitments had been made in regard to his attendance at the conference.

A message from Quebec on Friday declared that the premier had told the Quebec Social Credit party that he would attend.

There has been no announcement of either the premier, nor any members of his cabinet, or of the legislature attending the conference.

MARKETING ACT PROTESTED BY STOCK GROWERS

CALGARY, April 10.—Kenneth Coppock, manager of the Western Stock Growers' Association, said he was forwarding to Edmonton today a list of objections, approved by directors, to the Alberta Provincial Marketing Act, passed at the recent legislature session.

The directors, in their protest, state the act confers on stock growers men's conduct of their business, is undemocratic and tends to deprive stockmen of proceeds of the industry.

The protest draws attention that representatives of producers on their organizations were not generally consulted in drawing up terms of the Act. Exclusion of discussion of the terms of the bill before the agricultural committee at the recent session was deemed "undemocratic and not in the interests of the livestock industry."

AGRICS PLAN NON-DELIVERY WHEAT STRIKE

Saskatchewan Farmers Protest New Fixed Minimum

WILKIE, Sask., April 8.—Organization of a non-delivery strike throughout Saskatchewan unless the federal government establishes a minimum wheat price of $1, basis No. 1 Northern at local elevators, was urged in a resolution adopted at a United Farmers of Canada (Saskatchewan section) lodge meeting here last night.

The meeting registered a protest against the new fixed minimum price for wheat of 60 cents a bushel, basis No. 1 Northern at Fort William. Protest also was made against the new provincial statute, known as "Bill No. 90," which requires that farmers must pay for their seed grain and pay their taxes before they collect payment for their wheat.

Copies of the resolution were forwarded to the central office of the U.F.C. for further action.

BOMBERS APPEAR

Italian bombers appeared again in the sky over Tirana shortly after dawn today and continued to fly low over the city as the troops entered.

General Masse, commander of the column moving on Tirana, arrived soon behind the advance guard. The Bersagliere were followed into Tirana by a tank corps which rumbled through the principal square.

In front of the city hall, General Muty, commander of the advance guard, was greeted by Albanian civil and religious authorities.

ITALIANS IN COMMAND

The Italians, better equipped and of larger numbers than the defenders, were in command of the principal points along the 170-mile coast.

Durazzo, San Giovanni de Medua and Valona were heavily damaged by naval bombardments and aerial bombings before Italian occupation. Santa Quaranta, another coastal city, also was in Italian hands.

Albania had served notice she was prepared to fight until the last man was dead and then mobilize her women.

While regulars and vigilantes who had taken down their rifles and primitive weapons to fight a dogged battle, fired from behind stones, trees and mountain ambushes, the former premier, Mediki Frasheri, addressed the nation by radio in impassioned tones.

"There are 44,000,000 Italians against 1,000,000 Albanians, but there will be heroic resistance, and when our men are dead, the Italians will have to face our women."

He telegraphed to Premier Mussolini of Italy? "We prefer death to dishonor."

Good roads from the coast to Tirana, built with funds provided by Italian loans, facilitated the Italian advance toward Tirana, but only winding mountain trails led to more remote parts of the country.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, April 8.—Italy promised that Yugoslav interests would be respected in effecting the occupation of Albania, it was stated officially last night, but the government, nevertheless, closed its border with Albania.

Increasing excitement was apparent here, although the government continued to issue reassuring statements.

Permission was refused for special Yugoslav trains to depart for Tirana and from the border came reports that highway traffic across the frontier had been suspended.

Regent Prince Paul cancelled his ministers' and officials cancelled Easter holiday plans.

MOSCOW, April 8—Soviet Russia's chief interest in Italy's occupation of Albania is the ultimate effect the invasion may have on Yugoslavia. News of the occupation today caused no apparent surprise in official Soviet circles.

The Communist Party organ, Pravda, said that it was obvious Il Duce intended to "transform the Adriatic into an Italian lake," but developments also indicated "a new set of Italian-German aggression in Europe—this time directed against Yugoslavia.

"This aggression, which is a direct result of the Munich capitulation," said Prada, "creates an even greater menace to the interests of England and France in the Balkans and in the Mediterranean."

CHAMBERLAIN RETURNS FOR CABINET MEET

Ministers Say Albanian Situation Is "Still Obscure"

LONDON, April 8.—Prime Minister Chamberlain, who left London for Scotland on Thursday, will return to London tonight from Castle Forbes, Aberdeenshire, to confer with his ministers on the Albanian situation, it was announced here this afternoon.

Announcement of Mr. Chamberlain's return followed a meeting of the cabinet in London. After weighing the implications of Italy's invasion of Albania, the ministers issued a statement declaring the Albanian situation was "still obscure in regard to a number of important factors."

HALIFAX REPORTS

Viscount Halifax, foreign secretary, gave a detailed report on the Italian invasion of Albania to the cabinet.

Those attending were Sir John Lord Halifax, Lord Chatfield, minister for co-ordination of defence; Earl Stanhope, first lord of the admiralty; Leslie Hore-Belisha, secretary for war; Sir Kingsley Wood, secretary for air; Sir John Anderson, Lord Privy Seal; Hom. Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare; Ernest Brown, minister of labor; and Earl De La Warr, president of the board of education.

Mr. Chamberlain "sat in" on the meeting by telephone from Castle Forbes in Aberdeenshire.

Lord Halifax, devoting virtually all his time to close study of the Albanian situation, conferred with Sir Robert Vansittart, the government's chief diplomatic adviser, before the cabinet considered the effect of Italy's invasion on the 1938 Anglo-Italian agreement which included a pledge to maintain the status quo in the Mediterranean.

All the ministers at today's meeting planned to remain in the vicinity of London throughout the week-end to attend any necessary conferences.

ASKS HOUSE MEET

While the ministers were in session, Clement Attlee, leader of the opposition in the House of Commons, called at 10 Downing Street and left a note requesting that immediate recall of parliament. Parliament recessed last Thursday until April 18.

In view of the Prime Minister's statement in the house of commons last Thursday that Great Britain "has no political interest in Albania, but has a general interest in the peace of the world," informed quarters believed Britain would keep hands off the Adriatic war unless some neighboring country became endangered.

The government's only action so far has been to send a note to Italy by Sir Percy Loraine, ambassador to Rome, which was understood to have pointed Italy's action was out of harmony with the Anglo-Italian friendship accord of 1938 which attempted to preserve the status quo in the Mediterranean.

Italy's Italian embassy then issued a statement saying Italian troops would be withdrawn from Albania as soon as the recent disturbances are terminated."

MAY PROTEST

Some quarters expressed belief Britain might send a strong protest to Rome.

Government circles saw little possibility the Italian action would lead to general European war, however, and as a result no action more drastic was anticipated even if Mussolini eventually restored the Roman rule of more than 2,000 years ago over the Albanian mountains.

The Committee of Imperial Defence met yesterday but no special measures were announced. The admiralty said Easter leaves were not being cancelled but that it was in a position to deal with any eventuality.

The British press generally regarded Italy's steps as a reply to the Prime Minister's efforts to form an anti-aggression bloc.

The News Chronicle (Liberal) said: "The British government's distortions plays directly into the hands of the dictators. While Whitehall dithers about Russia, Hitler and Mussolini act."

Prospect Seen For Election In Tories' Activity

Prospects of a Dominion election in the late summer or early fall is reflected in the activity planned in the Conservative party ranks during the next three weeks.

On Tuesday, April 11, the East Edmonton association will hold a general meeting at the party's headquarters at which the holding of a nominating convention will be discussed.

The West Edmonton association will hold a general meeting on Thursday, April 20, to fix a date for a nominating convention for that riding. It is anticipated this date will be set for late in May.

A general meeting of the Women's Conservative Association is scheduled for Wednesday, April 12, while the newly-formed Conservative Action Club will hold a bridge party on April 18.

BOOMING OPENING

From all provincial tourist bureaus come forecasts of increased business this year, with the forthcoming royal visit expected to provide a booming opening for the season. D. Leo Dolan, chief of the Canadian Travel Bureau, summed up the summer's prospects as looking "exceptionally good."

Many a U.S. citizen will come to see King George and Queen Elizabeth, to have a peek at the Dionne quintuplets; to visit historical and scenic points in old Quebec and to hook tuna off the maritime coast. In following the Royal route tourists also will see the wheat fields, forests, lakes and mountains of the west.

Dolan says his office is handling from 900 to 1,000 letters of inquiry a day—letters from almost every section of the North American continent. The "unprecedented" flow of inquiries is about 50 per cent heavier than what it was at this time last year.

SURVEY RESULTS

Nova Scotia—"promising."

Prince Edward Island—"Another increase."

Quebec—"excellent."

Ontario—"new record."

Manitoba—"very, very busy."

Saskatchewan — "$300,000 increase."

Alberta—"25 per cent increase."

British Columbia—"all-time record."

$291,000,000 SPENT

Estimates of last year's tourist revenue are incomplete, but in 1937 an estimated $291,000,000 was spent in Canada by visitors, almost equal to the pre-depression peak year, 1929.

In Saskatchewan, 110,000 tourists visited the province last year and spent $1,000,000. This year's estimates are 150,000 visitors and $1,500,000 expenditures.

In Alberta it is anticipated 150,000 tourists in 200,000 automobiles will leave $4,500,000 behind.

More than $30,000,000 was spent by visitors to British Columbia in 1938, and government officials forecast this amount will be greatly exceeded this year. That province expects to gather in a good share of San Francisco's visitors as they turned homeward from the exposition.

Occupation Of Albania Breach Anglo-Italy Pact

LONDON, April 8—The Italian embassy in London issued a statement today saying Italian troops would be withdrawn from Albania as soon as the recent disturbances are terminated."

British officials are said to consider Albania's occupation a breach of the Anglo-Italian agreement guaranteeing the status quo in the Mediterranean.

Prime Minister Chamberlain was in Scotland on a fishing trip when the Italian move was made and the British parliament had recessed for the Easter holiday, but the prime minister and the foreign office are keeping in touch with developments hourly and if necessary parliament can be recalled in emergency session.

United Press
Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

NEW YORK, April 8.—A man in pyjamas and a lounging robe sat on a ledge on the 15th floor of the Hotel Belmont Plaza Wednesday, his feet dangling over the edge high above busy Lexington avenue.

When passersby pointed to the figure Patrolman Peter Quinn raced into the hotel and on the 15th floor he found a fire department emergency crew battering the door of the room.

Quinn and another patrolman went into the next room, darted out the window and grasped the man by the arm. They kept him from falling until firemen broke into his room and dragged him back through the window.

A house doctor was called and said the man was dead—a heart attack.

No one could explain how he got out on the ledge. In his pocket was a vial of tablets used for heart stimulation. A hook in the building wall had caught on his robe and kept the body from plunging to the street.

Albania King

American by birth, is the Queen's mother. Her father was the late banker and marshal of the Hungarian court, Count Julius Nagy-Apponyi. He died in 1924.

DRAMATIC STORY

Lying on a sick-bed in a primitive village hotel in Florina, with Skander on an improvised cot beside her, the queen dictated her dramatic story over the telephone.

"I hope world public opinion is shocked into action by this invasion against my tragic little country," the Queen said.

"I left my husband leading his troops—his poor insignificant little army—into battle. What could Albania do against such armed might as that which ground down on us?

MUST DO SOMETHING

"The world must do something for our Albania. It's brave people will resist to the end, but we are such a small country. We cannot possibly hold out for long. Help us."

Here her grandmother took up the story:

"Queen Geraldine did not want to leave the capital. She pleaded with her husband to let her stay. She begged him to allow her to be by his side to face whatever Providence should bring to their country.

FACE ANYTHING TOGETHER

"Only let me be with you,' she said. 'We can face anything together.' But to go—not knowing what is happening to you. No! No! Please let me remain.'

"The King was adamant. I know he would have liked nothing more than to have had her with him. But he ordered her to go. As war clouds were threatening, the preparations were made.

AMBULANCE FOR QUEEN

"A fleet of cars stood ready in the palace courtyard. One was converted into an ambulance for the queen and little boy—heir to the throne that is no more. The baby was only a few hours old when we started on our journey. Guns had started to boom. The King gave the order to start.

"He told my granddaughter that it was for her safety and her safety only that he wished her to leave him. She was carried by stretcher from the palace. The baby was carried by a nurse. We were all of us in tears at the parting."

kingdom under her own sovereignty by force.

While public indignation mounted and the press voiced bitter condemnation of Mussolini's Good Friday coup, Clement Attlee and Sir Archibald Sinclair, Labor and Liberal leaders, respectively, in the House of Commons, demanded immediate recall of parliament.

NO ANNOUNCEMENT

At the conclusion of the cabinet council no announcement was made of a further meeting or the possibility of parliament's recall.

When the house rose Thursday arrangements were made for summoning of parliament should an emergency arise.

FEARS EXPRESSED

Fears were expressed in some quarters the Albanian move may mark the beginning of an axis plan for a combined drive into the Mediterranean area with a subsequent thrust through the Balkans to the Near East.

The United Kingdom press generally agrees the time has arrived for a definite showdown and more vigorous organization of peace-loving nations against further aggression.

Balkan Kingdoms Are Less Confident

By ALVIN STEINKOPF
Associated Press Foreign Staff

BUDAPEST, Hungary, April 8—Little Balkan kingdoms, worried by the Albanian example of what can happen in a weak country which opposes the Rome-Berlin axis, were less confident today of the effectiveness of the projected anti-aggression bloc sponsored by Great Britain.

All foreign offices of southeastern Europe had been considering the advisability of associating themselves with the British-French-Polish front against aggression.

It appeared today, however, the Italian invasion of Albania, driving a mountain wedge between Yugoslavia and Greece, had greatly reduced the attractiveness of the British plan.

NOT SO CHEERFUL

Officially, all countries of the region — particularly Yugo-Slavia, Rumania and Bulgaria—were expressing an optimistic view of developments. But off the record comment was not so cheerful.

Many political leaders in Yugo-Slavia admitted Italian occupation of Albania's seacoast gave Premier Mussolini virtually complete control of the Adriatic. Moreover, Italian troops now were in a position to move on Yugo-Slavia's southern border while German, as well as Italian, power could be mobilized to the north and northwest.

NOT IMPRESSED

Observing themselves in this strategically precarious position, many Yugo-Slavs were not impressed by the security promised by distant powers.

The Balkan entente of Yugo-Slavia, Rumania, Turkey and Greece did not appear to be nearly the complete bloc it seemed when the entente council met in Bucharest a few weeks ago.

87 ABOVE IN LOS ANGELES; SIX COLLAPSE

LOS ANGELES, April 8.—Six persons collapsed in downtown Los Angeles Friday as the temperature rose to 87 degrees at 1 p.m. during the second day of an Easter heat wave.

The collapse of the six persons was attributed to the heat and to the large crowds downtown for pre-Easter shopping. All were removed to police emergency hospital and treated for heat prostration.

BRITISH SHIP STRIKES ROCK; CREW RESCUED

Temple Bar Wrecked Off Washington Coast Early Saturday

QUILLAYUTE, Wash., April 8.—A coast guard crew brought 23 of the 39 men aboard the wrecked British freighter Temple Bar safely into this station today and reported the rest were "safe on the beach."

The ship was called a "total loss."

The Temple Bar hit a rock about 4 a.m. today about a mile and a half north of the Quillayute Needle, a rock a mile off shore and three miles south of the Quillayute river. It sent out a frantic SOS before the crew abandoned ship.

WALKED UP BEACH

Coast guard boatswain's mate, first class, Eric Reuterorna is in charge of the station. He has 11 men with him.

"Some of the crew had gotten ashore in their lifeboats and some were drifting near the wreck in lifeboats when we reached them," Reuterorna said.

"Some of the men were badly frightened and most are still too excited to talk much.

"The Temple Bar is lying now with her bow slightly out of water and her stern awash. Her back is not broken yet, but I think it will be soon and it will go to the bottom."

The coast guard planes from Port Angeles flew over the wreck scene shortly after daybreak.

The Temple Bar sailed from Port Everglades, Fla., March 14 for Yokohama, Japan, and was bound up the Washington coast to Commox, B.C., for bunkers to refuel. It had a cargo of scrap iron aboard for Japan. L. W. Tucker is master.

NONE INJURED

None of the crew was injured in striking shore.

The weather was clear last night when the vessel went aground.

The Seattle coast guard reported the SOS was picked up at 4:07 a.m.

The coastline on which the vessel hit is rock-studded. The wreck scene is between 30 and 35 miles south of Cape Flattery.

Sylvan Lake Youth Hurt While Hunting

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

SYLVAN LAKE, April 8—Donald Wickware, 15-year-old son of Dr. A. B. Wickware of Sylvan Lake, was shot through the right foot recently while hunting rabbits. A .22 rifle discharged in his hand as he drew back the bolt, the bullet passing cleanly through his right foot The wound is healing.

CABINET HAS HEAVY BURDEN DUTIES AHEAD

Implementing Of Legislation Will Make Work For Government

Following the session of the legislature prorogued last Monday, a heavy program of activity awaits the government, in implementing action taken in legislation passed at the session. It is expected that next week the cabinet will get down to the serious business of putting the legislation into effect.

One of the main items awaiting attention is the formation of a government fire insurance branch, with appointment of a manager. This branch was authorized by an act and it provides for the government entering the fire insurance business in competition with other companies. A manager is to be appointed for the branch.

INSPECTION

Another matter engaging attention is the appointment of inspectors or investigators under the lands act. Under the new set-up when an application is made to take out land, an inspector is sent out to determine whether the land applied for is suitable for agricultural purposes.

Still another feature awaiting attention is the appointment of a director of the central purchasing agency for all government departments, which was authorized in a bill put through.

Appointment of the remaining members of the central marketing board is an important matter awaiting action. George Clash has been named as chairman of the Alberta Marketing Board and the act provides for the appointment of a board of five. This leaves four members yet to be appointed. It is expected that, with the act through the house, the other members will be named in the near future.

Provision was made at the recent session, by legislation, for establishment of a commission to study cancer and this commission will be of not less than three, nor more than five. Early action is expected on this.

Another act, amending the Eastern Irrigation District Act, provides that a plebiscite may be taken to increase the board of trustees of the district from three to five.

VACANCY

A vacancy exists on the Social Credit board as a result of the death of W. E. Hayes, Social Credit member of the legislature for Stony Plain. As members of the board were appointed by legislation, this vacancy may not be filled until the next session. An appointment might be made by the executive council and ratified at the next session.

Rimbey Farmer Kicked By Horse

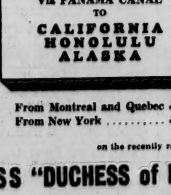

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

RIMBEY, April 8.—John D. Keith, farm hand just west of Rimbey, sustained serious injuries to the jaw and side of his head Thursday evening, when he was kicked by a horse as he entered the stall to feed a team. He was saved from more serious injuries, when he was dragged, unconscious, beneath the kicking animal by his wife who was nearby at the time of the accident. He is in a critical condition.

Mr. Keith, who is in his middle sixties was reported to be resting comfortably Friday.

The boy was in critical condition Saturday morning it was learned from the Royal Alexandra hospital. It would be 48 hours before he would be definitely out of danger, an attending physician said.

U.S. WEIGHING LIKELY MOVES OVER ALBANIA

Cordell Hull in Close Touch With Roosevelt, Albanian Minister

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The United States administration weighed last night a series of actions that may be taken in consequence of Italy's invasion of Albania.

Cordell Hull, secretary of state, kept in close touch by telephone with President Roosevelt a Warm Springs, Ga., and conferred with his chief advisers and with the Albanian minister, Faik Konitza. Hull said at his press conference he desired to assemble all the essential facts in the case before taking an attitude.

Americans in the Tirana, Albania, region are gathered at the American legation, Hugh G. Grant, the minister, cabled Hull. The secretary said he did not believe the number of Americans in the danger area was sufficiently large to warrant sending warships to Albania. There are 203 Americans in all Albania, the state department said.

The administration faced decisions on three points:

1. Whether Premier Mussolini's invasion constituted a violation of the Kellogg anti-war pact.

2. If so, whether the United States government would so proclaim it.

3. Whether the United States would continue its legation in Albania should the country become a protectorate, rather than an independent state.

There was no talk among officials here of any economic reprisals such as followed Chancellor Hitler's move into Czecho-Slovakia.

MERCY FLIGHT IS COMPLETED BY L. BISSON

Pilot Louis Bisson was successful in his mercy flight to Walker Bay, the world's most northerly mission, from Coppermine to pick up a sick native boy, it was learned here Saturday, and he has continued for Letty Harbor, on his way to hospital at Aklavik.

The flight to Walker Bay and return was made without advent under perfect weather conditions. With him on the flight went Bishop Fallaize, acting head of the Roman Catholic missions in the north during the absence, in Europe, of Bishop Breynat.

It is expected that Pilot Bisson will arrive at Aklavik sometime Saturday. Besides the sick boy he brought Father Bulliard from the lonely post.

Varsity Students Starting Annual Spring Job Hunt

Annual spring "job hunt" by university graduates and undergraduates will get under way immediately after completion of final examinations to take place soon at the Alberta seat of learning. Nearly 1,600 students will be seeking permanent or part-time employment and board meetings of university officials at recent meetings have considered possible openings for students from all faculties.

Part of the employment problem has been solved, word coming from the International Nickel Company of Canada, Ltd., at Sudbury, Ont., that 36 mining students will be employed there. Half of that number will remain permanently in the east while the remainder will return to the University to continue studies next fall. Most of the other graduates have been assured of positions with other mining companies throughout Canada.

City May Enjoy Fair Easter Day: Forecast Is Mild

Following a trace of rain during the night and early Saturday morning after what had remained cloudy most of Friday, citizens cast apprehensive eyes skyward before leaving home and thought twice before venturing forth without rubbers and raincoats. The weatherman, however, was quite cheerful, predicting fair and mild weather for the day, and there's a possibility this forecast will hold good for the Easter parade.

Temperatures held above the freezing line over the holiday, rising as high as 41 Friday and sinking to 34 during the early hours of Saturday. Reading at 8:30 a.m. was 42 above.

Far north readings scaled upward from zero at Ft. Smith to 34 above at Aklin.

Mrs. E. M. Misener Burial Service Is Held On Saturday

Funeral services for Mrs. Ester Melvina Misener, 84, of 11013 90 avenue, who died Friday, were held from the Hainstock and Son chapel Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Misener had resided in Edmonton for the past 11 years.

She is survived by a daughter, Dr. Geneva Misener of Edmonton; four sons, Hartford at Niagara Falls, Frank at Winnipeg, L. Blake at Los Angeles and William Elson at Toronto; and ten grandchildren, including June and Yvonne of Edmonton.

Remains were forwarded to Niagara Falls, where interment will take place.

PEDESTRIAN HAS FRACTURED LEG DUE CAR MISHAP

Tom Fox, resident of the Cumfo rooms, 101 street, received a fracture of his right leg and cut on the face when he was knocked down by a car driven by Harry Remble, 1305 third street east, Calgary, on 111 avenue between 96 and 97 streets at 10:40 p.m. Friday.

Remble told police he was driving west on 111 avenue, between 15 and 20 miles an hour, when he saw Fox crossing in the middle of the block. He blew his horn and swung to the right but Fox darted toward the north curb. The driver put on his brakes and swung left, striking the pedestrian. An eyewitness confirmed Remble's statement and said Fox apparently had been drinking.

Gerald Bain of Whitecourt, riding a bicycle north on 97 street at 3:55 p.m. Friday, was knocked down by a car driven by Lambert Riopel, 9 Dominion bock, but was not injured. Bain told police he was riding north at the side of the road and decided to ride between the street car tracks. He turned his head and thought no car was coming but when he swung his bicycle, he struck the right front door of Riopel's car, which was passing him.

EXHIBITION OF INDIAN WORK IS PLANNED HERE

Anthony Walsh, who for the past five years has been doing research work on the Inkameep Indian reserve at Oliver, B.C., in the Okanagan Valley, will give an exhibition of Indian art at St. Joseph's College on Monday and Tuesday and at the museum in the Civic Block on Wednesday and Thursday.

The exhibition includes Indian paintings, wood cuts and plaster of paris plaques. The work being displayed has won several prizes in Europe, while the British Broadcasting Company has requested the use of the exhibition for a special television program in 1940.

Mr. Walsh has done research work on Indian art at the Ottawa museum, New York, New Mexico and at Berkeley University, California.

The exhibition has been made possible through the League of Red Cross societies.

Col. J. H. Woods Gets Honor For Boy Scout Work

In recognition of his work for the Boy Scouts movement, Col. J. H. Woods, Calgary, commissioner of Alberta Boy Scouts, will be presented with a Silver Wolf, high honor in Scouting by Lord Tweedsmuir, governor-general of Canada at a ceremony in Calgary, Saturday.

W. J. Dick, Edmonton, president of the provincial council, Boy Scouts' association, will read the citation of Col. Woods's contributions to the movement in the province during the past eight years.

W. S. Backman, executive provincial secretary, accompanied Mr. Dick to Calgary for the presentation ceremony.

Col. Woods will be guest of honor at a reception to be given Sunday afternoon at the home of C. W. Jones, Calgary, vice-president of the provincial council.

MAYOR REQUESTS FOR BROADCAST HOCKEY MATCH

Mayor John W. Fry appealed Saturday to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to have Monday night's hockey game between E.A.C. Roamers and Oshawa Generals at Toronto for the Dominion junior championship broadcast from coast to coast.

If the CBC has not already decided to do so, the mayor said, it would be considered a great favor to hockey fans across Canada and especially in the home cities of the teams to hear the broadcast.

LONDON, April 8—As unusual as a man biting a dog, a government dinner was held here and no speeches were made. Press representatives voted it the best banquet they ever attended.

Grout Presiding At Council Meet On Monday Night

City council will hold its regular meeting Monday evening in the council chamber, City Hall, when Ald. D. A. Grout, as deputy mayor in the absence of Mayor John W. Fry, will preside.

City Hall employees will be at work on Monday as the Civic Employees' Federation made an agreement with council some years ago that they preferred to work on Easter Monday in order to receive a holiday on Arbor Day, the first Monday in May.

MRS. W. R. MAY IS WINNER AT CALGARY MEET

Mrs. W. R. "Wop" May of Edmonton captured the ladies' riding horse class and the E. L. Richardson trophy at the annual Calgary horse show at Calgary Friday night, with a magnificent ride on "Dynamite," entered by L. O. Chambers of Airdrie, Alta.

Another Edmonton horsewoman, Ruth Stevenson, placed fourth Friday night to enter the finals of the "handy" jumping event. She was riding "Scotsman," owned by Bellalta stables of Calgary. Scotsman, who tied for third place Thursday night, had only eight faults against him.

Rated one of the most outstanding motion picture films of all time, Cecil B. DeMille's two million dollar religious production, "King of Kings", is being shown in city churches this Easter. "King of Kings" was first released in 1928 as a silent film and was shown in Edmonton at that time in the Empire theatre with an orchestra playing appropriate music.

Since the advent of sound, the film has been provided with a sound track and with somewhat accelerated action is now stated to be more impressive than ever. The sound accompaniment is a beautifully recorded background of orchestra and chorus with sacred and other suitable music.

Arrangements for the film and its projection during the present series were made by the Department of Extension, University of Alberta, and showings are scheduled as follows:

First Presbyterian Church, Thursday, April 6; McDougall United Church, Easter Sunday; Holy Trinity Anglican Church, Monday, April 10, All Saints' Anglican, Tuesday, April 11; Knox United Church, Wednesday, April 12.

Funeral Services Are Held In City For River Victim

Funeral service for Kenneth William Bayley, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bayley of 10013 87 street, who was drowned in the North Saskatchewan river when he slipped from ice along the river bank into open water late Thursday afternoon, was held from Foster and McGarvey's chapel Saturday afternoon.

He is survived by his parents; one sister, Audrey Carol; his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Bayley, and Mr. W. Mason, all of Edmonton.

Interment took place in the Beechmount cemetery.

Varsity Year Book Nears Completion: On Sale Here Soon

"Evergreen and Gold," annual publication of the Students' Union of the University of Alberta, is being rushed to completion and will go on sale at the University book store in the Arts building in about two weeks' time, it is announced by James Corbett, law student of Calgary, one of the student executives in charge of the publication.

This year's issue is expected to maintain the standard set by previous year books produced by the Students' Union. It follows a covered wagon theme throughout. For work done in connection with the annual, Evergreen and Gold "A" awards have been made to George Mowatt, Edmonton, Delmar Foote, Didsbury, and Aylmer Ryan, Edmonton.

Bureau Makes Progress In Welfare Activities: Needy Folk Are Helped

Working quietly and efficiently with very little of the praise they deserve for their efforts, the Edmonton Emergency Welfare Association, with headquarters at 19 Sandison Block, are well into this year's work with an impressive record of welfare work to their credit during the year 1938.

During last year, the association working voluntarily and with voluntary contributions only for financial support, gave help and advice to 416 needy cases, supplied 67 emergency food helpings and distributed over 900 pieces of clothing.

Board of the association, which is non-political and non-sectarian, for the present year are Mrs. F. K. Hartt, president, Mrs. A. McLeod, Mrs. J. J. McLean, Mrs. Ellstock, and Mrs. C. M. King. Fourteen volunteer workers complete the association.

The association, chartered in February 1936, has found in its work that the class of people needing help most are those known as borderline cases and unemployed and wayward youths.

Social legislation now being urged upon government authorities by the association consist of:

1. Establishment of a children's aid society and home, in conjunction with the provincial government and the city of Edmonton, to be controlled by a board of directors.

2. Indigents and aged people to be placed under the supervision of the department of health.

COMMUNITY FARM

3. Establishment of a community farm centre for boys aged seven to 18 years. Requiring 15 to 20 acres on the outskirts of the city, the project would consist of a regular school, facilities for sport, technical training, and also an experimental farm for work with fruits and poultry.

4. Establishment of a domestic relations board by the attorney generals department to deal with needy cases.

5. A provincial and city educational health centre for young women, for the benefit of unemployed girls, which would consist of a lecture hall, library, domestic training kitchen, sewing class, gymnasium, and employment bureau, to be controlled by a board of directors and to be closely affiliated with city churches.

6. Appointment of a woman police magistrate in Edmonton.

7. Establishment of a separate section for first offenders in all jails.

8. A home for aged persons, controlled by a board of directors.

9. Old age pensions for all those who reach the age of 60 years.

MAN ARRESTED CHARGED WITH TWO BREAK-INS

David E. Braun was arrested early Saturday morning by Detective Sergeant Bert Petheram and Detective Murdo Munro on the South Side and charged with breaking and entering.

Two break-ins last Wednesday night are charged against Braun, that of Payment's Grocery, 8632 118 avenue, and Schaufele Motors, 10971 101 street. Loot from Payment's grocery was found in a disused boiler at Chester Gainer's packing plant, North Edmonton, Thursday.

Spell Holman Holmes Now

Locked gates and uniformed special policemen maintained strict seclusion for Libby Holman and her new husband, Ralph Holmes, at her estate near Greenwich, Conn., following the couple's surprise secret marriage in Washington. The toren singer, 32, is the widow of tobacco heir Smith Reynolds, and the 33-year-old bridegroom is a brother of Phillips Holmes, actor-producer.

Naval operations against Tripoli in 1803-05 completed formation of the United States navy and gave it a high standard of heroic conduct to look back upon with pride, and to uphold in future.

SEVEN CITY SKIERS MAKE JASPER TRIP

Alpine Club Members Are Spending Nine Days At Tonquin Valley

JASPER, April 8—Heading into deep snow country, high above Tonquin Valley, 25 skiers of the Alpine Club of Canada left Jasper Saturday morning bound for Memorial Hut, 1939 headquarters for the annual ski camp. At the end of the motor road they were to don skis for a 12 mile climb which leads to the very base of long Alpine slopes above the timber line.

Guided by Reg. Rault, Edmonton professional, who skied into Jasper from the Kremlin Valley Friday, and Morris Taylor, prominent member of the club, the party was expected to reach its destination early Saturday evening and remain in the fields until April 17. Provisions were packed in by guides last week, and seven women were among the rucksack-laden skiers who arrived here Friday, principally from Chicago and points in Western Canada.

Skiing varying from the thrilling runs of the Mount Fraser group to the safe, undulating slopes of the Tonquin will be their lot for nine days. Several of the downhills are two miles long and lead to the Chalet door.

Alberta was represented by Miss K. Neilson, Miss P. Nichol and D. Hoskin, and W. Rook of Calgary, and the following from Edmonton: Misses S. Service, M. McIntyre, D. Hartley, J. McDonald and M. Buckley, and Dr. MacLean. From British Columbia were Miss E. Gale and Dr. W. Mitchell of Victoria; Miss S. Cassels from Duncan, and Mr. and Mrs. N. Brewster and A. J. Cooper from Vancouver.

Mussolini Takes the Lead

In cold-blooded treachery the invasion of Albania surpasses the crushing of Czecho-Slovakia. The Czechs at least knew that Hitler had designs upon their territory. But as late as Thursday the Albanian ambassador at London said there was no truth in a rumor that Mussolini planned to infringe the sovereignty of that state. The next day Italian troops invaded the country, under orders to occupy it completely in 48 hours. If there is such a thing as a peerage of treachery, Il Duce by his latest coup takes precedence over Der Fuehrer.

Albania is a war-born state, like its late companion in destruction, composed of former Greek and Turkish territory. Its claim to protection by other countries rests upon its membership in the League of Nations. As that claim did not cause the member-nations to rally to save China or Ethiopia, or Czecho-Slovakia, or Spain, the probability is they will do nothing for Albania. Nothing, that is, beyond calling on Britain and France to assume their entire collective responsibility and make good their joint undertaking at the cost of British and French blood and money.

The Herald Of Spring

To the Christian a symbol of resurrection from the dead; to the Jew a memorial of delivery from captivity; to everyone the Eastertime signifies the arrival of spring. The name comes from Teutonic mythology, Eostre being the name of the goddess of spring, to whom the month of April was dedicated, and in whose honor a feast was held at this season.

Easter is always a popular anniversary in Canada, as it must be in any country where winters are long and cold. In lands where summer conditions prevail practically throughout the year and spring means little more than that the time has come to tear another page off the calendar, Easter may signify little aside from its religious associations. But in countries where leafless trees, brown or white earth, and heavy wrappings have been the order for several months, it is welcome also as marking the turn from the season of sterility to that of life and production.

The past winter has not been particularly severe in this part of the world. It was mild until Christmas, colder from that on, with a couple of "dips" to the lower levels of the thermometer. But the leaves fell from the poplars in October, the ground has been brown or white ever since, and winter clothing has been required for safety when not for comfort. Six months of this palls even upon those who admit the salubrious effects of a "rigorous" climate, and make Easter's message that spring is here a very welcome one.

The Listener Comes First

Owners and would-be owners of private radio stations want the CBC to let them establish a chain of stations to compete with those of the corporation, exploit short-wave, television and facsimile broadcasts, play gramophone records all evening, and quote prices in advertising announcements.

The directors of the CBC should rather welcome this opportunity to tell the owners of private stations a few things they need to be told. When the CBC was organized as a public service the understanding was that its programs would be available in all parts of Canada during the entire broadcasting day, being carried over private stations where corporation stations could not reach.

That understanding has never been made good. Private stations, in parts of the country which CBC stations do not serve, seem to use the corporation broadcasts only or mainly for fillers, when they can't put anything on the local air for which they can get more money.

When the time comes that CBC programs will be available over CBC stations everywhere, there will be something to be said for the proposition that private stations should be allowed to broadcast their own programs, exclusively if they please. But until that time comes the CBC owes it to the owners of receiving sets to tell the private station owners that they must carry its general interest programs in full—and will be paid for so doing—in sections of the country which CBC stations do not reach.

Why There Are Death-Traps

The province is seeking financial help from the Dominion to dig subways or build overhead bridges at three points where highways now cross railway tracks on the level. There is every reason to suppose the help will be forthcoming. Blame does not rest with the Dominion that better progress has not been made in eliminating level crossing death-traps all over Canada; but with provinces, municipalities and the railways.

For years on end parliament annually voted $250,000 to assist in this work, finally got tired posting money that was not being used and cut down the allotment. The reason the money was not used was that provinces, municipalities and railways were not enough interested in making travel safe to put up their share of the expense. The Transport Commission has funds on hand to assist such undertakings as the other parties concerned are willing to contribute.

The net result of inaction has been the development of new danger points as cars have multiplied and traffic become more dense. In all parts of the Dominion there are grade crosings which are standing invitations to tragedy, and their number has been growing. It is high time for a general movement to revive interest in the crossing menace.

Editorial Notes

The wife of the U.S. ambassador at Berlin has "fired" the household servants, as from May 1st. From which observers infer that the ambassador is not going back "till it's over" over there. There is nothing to suggest Washington will grieve if Herr Hitler retaliates by removing his chief propagandist from the United States.

The New Brunswick legislature refused to set a speed limit for motorists in that province, leaving drivers responsible for driving in a "safe, sane and reasonable" manner. That may work all right in New Brunswick. In most other provinces the legislators think, not without cause, that some motorists need to be told in set terms what is the outside limit of safety, sanity and reasonableness in the matter of speed.

A son of President Roosevelt says the United States will never again take part in a war in Europe. Peace-time guesses as to what any country or person would do in war-time are interesting rather than convincing. A predecessor of President Roosevelt was re-elected because he "kept the country out of war" in Europe, but afterward decided the United States might better fight for its freedom in Europe while it had help than fight later on, perhaps at home, without help.

Good Advertising

Congratulations and great credit is due the officials of the Lacombe Farmers' Horse Sales for the capable manner in which they conducted one of the largest, if not the largest, horse sale of its kind in the world. Over 1,000 head of horses were auctioned off at the Central Alberta Pavilion last week in three days of fast selling, and through it all, the clerking staff attended to the minutest detail. Buyers from all over Canada and many points in the States attended the annual event, which brought a great deal of favorable advertising to Lacombe and its district.—Lacombe Globe.

Freedom From Whom?

This country, we think, ought to make up its mind whether it believes in free speech and wants free speech. Because many Canadians, judging by what we read and hear, don't seem to be clear about the question. Their idea about free speech even when they profess to believe in it, seems to be free speech for their own creed or cause. No one giving loyalty to freedom should want Canada to be victimized by subversive influences. But we think that in Canada any attempt to combat subversive influences should not be let to slip easily into a denial of freedom, becoming an attempt to cast out devils in the name of Beelzebub, prince of devils.—Ottawa Journal.

As Things Stand

What is the situation as things stand? The Czech nation, proud and independent, it seems, only yesterday, trying against odds to hold its place before the world, has been eclipsed, obliterated. It has been bound to the German chariot wheel, and any money sent for its goods will go, not to help a struggling Czecho-Slovakian nation but simply to add power to the next German drive against the next small country.

For years the cry has been that Czecho-Slovakia as a nation was unjust to minorities, to Sudeten Germans, to Slovakians, to Ruthenians, to Hungarians and Poles.

Now Germany assumes those minority problems. The Czechs are now a minority under German domination; so are the Slovenians and Magyars and Poles within the areas that have been pulled into the German orbit. Gradually Hitler is assembling a patchwork of racial minorities that is something like the one pinned together by the old Austro-Hungarian empire and which plagued every moment of its life.

Thinking "In Decades"

Benito Mussolini is a courageous and intelligent man. While we might abhor his political philosophy, we cannot deny some of the benefits he brought to Italy during the earlier years of his leadership, in the way of national discipline, public works and the increase of production.

He has grown to be a comic opera figure, not because of his organizing genius, but because he has embraced a vicious political doctrine that has thrown him into the arms —or under the feet—of the fanatical Hitler.

That something still remains of his original patriotic purpose and sense is seen in his statement that he is "ready to wait" for the adjustment of his differences with France, that Italy is not going to jump into any overnight and impetuous conflict but is "thinking in terms of decades."

Now there, at last, is a dictator who speaks partly in our own language. For it is only by thinking in terms of decades and the future that any orderly solution can be brought out of the present mess of world politics.

There is a tone of moderation, restraint and dignity in this utterance that we have not been accustomed to hear in the voice of Fascism.—Vancouver Sun.

The Retreat From Reason

To speak of research in the field of international relations in such an anxious and disillusioned hour as this may seem almost like a jest. Everywhere reason is on the defensive and we live in danger that mass hysteria will completely overwhelm it at a time when it is most needed as a safeguard. If there have always been wars and rumors of wars, never before has there existed the possibility of such material havoc and cultural disintegration. It may be, as a recent writer has said, that this arid period in which we are living is the watershed between two forms of civilization, and that the future beckons to a Promised Land more pleasing than we dream. This optimism is creditable, but for the moment at least the world is facing a cultural crisis in which reason is everywhere in retreat.

Never has there been a greater need of intelligent understanding of the social forces that are moulding the future. Such an understanding must be based on realities, and not on intuition or wishful thinking. If the problems arising out of human relations are to be solved at all, it will be through the same scientific approach to facts, made in the same dispassionate spirit of inquiry, which has given man command over his physical environment. That this course presents infinite difficulties no one will deny, but along this road lies the only ultimate hope.

Acting upon this faith, which to some may seem to burn with a feeble flame, many devoted organizations throughout the world are working directly on the problem of international relations, and the Rockefeller Foundation has been glad to continue its support in this field. Its grants have been limited to objective research, for the most part in connection with institutions to which it has contributed for a number of years. It has proceeded upon the theory that even in a time of misunderstanding and hate, facts can be used as powerful leverages. Facts of course have their limitations in any attempt quickly to mould the course of human events. Thomas Huxley once remarked that there is nothing more tragic than the murder of a big theory by a little fact, but he hastened to add that nothing is more surprising than the way in which a theory will continue to live long after its brains have been knocked out. So in the area of international affairs outworn theories and old patterns survive in the face of their demonstrated inadequacy. However, unless those of us who think of the human spirit in terms of freedom are to adopt a defeatist attitude, there must be faith to believe that the cumulative effect of an intelligent and informed democratic participation in foreign affairs may change the dark picture of the future.—Raymond B. Fosdick, president of the Rockefeller Foundation.

There will be no real peace . . . until there is again respect for the given word, until the idea of honesty is re-established, until the principles of individual and international liberty are secured.—Dr. Edvard Benes, once president of the Czecho-Slovak Republic.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

Whatever the outcome of events in Europe, subject to change in a few hours' notice as they are, British ministers have greatly handicapped the work of the democracies by their weak and stupid policy of ham-stringing the Loyalist government of Spain. These simpletons seemingly believed that once the war was over Italian troops would depart and the lure of English gold would bring France over to the side of England and France. It came as a surprise when Franco rejected the offers of British capitalists and made Marshal Petain, the French ambassador and victor of Verdun, cool his heels while he consulted with his German and Italian advisers.

GUESS THEY'RE SORRY NOW

France lost no time in making it clear that he is determined to link up the destinies of Spain with the Fascist nations of Italy and Germany.

Hope now for democracy in Spain rests with the people—Nationalists as well as Loyalists. Revolts were frequent among Franco's Spanish officers at the authority assumed by German and Italian military leaders. As true Spanish Nationalists, they feared lest Spain should become a vassal state of the Fascist masters. Senor Manuel Nogales, former Madrid editor, who left that city four months after the outbreak of the civil war because he was out of sympathy with the loyalist government—a man who describes himself in his writings as "anti-Fascist and anti-revolutionist," in a copyrighted article predicts that a new civil war will come in Spain. True Nationalists and Loyalists will unite against foreign domination, he predicts. Perhaps that is why such extraordinary powers to sentence Loyalists to death have been conferred by Franco upon his military courts. Possession of a radio receiving set will justify the death sentence. France will rule with the same ruthless disregard of human life and rights as Hitler and Mussolini, his models.

NATIONALISTS WERE TRICKED

Mussolini, who has been tricked by Reich leaders on many occasions when they got the plums after he took the risk, has been outtricked by the Germans, according to Senor Nogales. Mussolini sent army divisions, the Germans sent only technicians. When Mussolini paraded the Italian numbers, the Germans worked under cover. German agents, well disguised, are in the Spanish tongue and tradition, when driven out of Chile and Argentine, with airmen who had seen service in South America, were sent as Gestapo agents to Spain. Spain is governed today, says Senor Nogales, through the Gestapo, the secret police of the Third Reich, forming as they do the advisers to Franco and the Burgos government.

GESTAPO IS REAL RULER

It's another of life's ironies, that the democratic powers are now counting upon the Spanish people, then ham-strung in the civil war, to overthrow the Fascist dictator whom they helped to place there.

If someone had told you on March 31 a few years ago that a 15 hour cross-Canada daily airplane service was to start next morning, you'd have been justified in crying out "April Fool!" When Mr. Mackenzie King, then premier of France visited the Wright Brothers flying field little over a quarter century ago he summed up the case saginently by saying, "The airplane may possibly have some value in war, but it will never be used for civil transportation". At that he wasn't so very far behind the eminent astronomer Simon Newcomb who wrote a book demonstrating by physical considerations that it would be impossible for an airplane to lift itself from the ground. "A tiny model that could be placed inside a watchcase might do it," he admitted, "but nothing that will carry a man will ever be able to fly." He'd prefer to see the leviathans of the air that cross oceans and span continents today.

NO JOKE THIS ON APRIL FIRST

April first was really a day of good omen to start the cross-Canada passenger service. We get the name April from the Latin verb "Aperire" to open. The Romans named the month in which the buds opened and a new season of growth came to pass. Perhaps it was the stirring of the impulses after the lethargy of winter that made our grade forefathers find an outlet for their awakened energies by playing practical jokes on the first of April.

Religion Day By Day

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS

TWO KINDS OF PASSENGERS

On every passenger ship, and every through train, two types of passengers are noticeable. The first are the restless ones, frequently moving about, seeking some diversion. They must explore and experience everything possible. It is for them that ships and some trains have hostesses, to keep passengers amused.

Others are of the quiet sort, usually the more experienced travellers. They settle down to a leisurely enjoyment of the journey and of their books. At sea, they are most of the time in their steamer chairs. They are the ones who arrive rested and content.

So it is with the journey of life. Some of us remain to the end as restless as children, ever seeking something to beguile the time. Others, wiser find their strength in quietness and confidence. They know that a heart at peace is better than any amusement.

Forgive our restless, dissatisfied inquietude, O Lord; and teach us to live through the days serenely, knowing Thy peace. Amen.

Read 1 Thessalonians 4:9-12.

Minorities In Poland

Editor Bulletin: From time to time we see printed articles in the city daily press concerning the terrific and diabolical treatment that Poles are supposedly administering to their so-called Ukrainian subjects. That these at times go unchallenged is because no one but the Ukrainians themselves place any foundation of truth in them.

According to the Central European Times, Zurich, Switzerland, a neutral pamphlet was published in 1937 stating the population of Poland, etc., minorities, its religions and places of learning.

In Millions
Polish	22.0	68.9%
Ukrainian	3.2	10.1%
Jewish	2.7	8.6%
White Russians	1.0	3.1%
German	0.7	2.3%
Czechs	0.06	0.1%
Lithuanian	0.06	0.3%
Ruthenian	1.2	3.8%

Religions

The constitution of Poland guarantees absolute religious tolerance to all creeds. The constitution declares that the Roman Catholic faith, being the religion of the great majority of the nation, occupies a leading position in the state among other religions, all of which however enjoy equal rights. The relations of the state to the Catholic church was determined by an agreement with the Holy See in 1925 and the church was organized in 20 dioceses. The Greek Catholic church was organized in three diocese and the Armenian Catholic church in one.

The Greek Orthodox church of Poland has been constituted as an autonomius church with five diocese. The Lutheran and Calvanistic churches, the Jewish Communities and the small Mohamedan community enjoy similar autonomy.

According to Sir Edward Bernard Pares, in the Toronto Star, March 25, 1939, the Ukrainian population in Poland is approximately 4,000,000. The Zurich publication states that 472,000 Ukrainian youth receive their education in their own language. This again proves that Poland is very tolerant with her minorities.

To correct any false impressions that the ordinary Canadian may have entertained from articles and news printed in the daily press concerning the treatment that the Poles have meted out to their minorities, we hope the above facts will portray a true and just picture.

There is but one minority that seems to be continually dissatisfied, but whose claims were not even considered at Versailles in 1919. The League of Nations later totally exonerated them of the false accusations of this minority.

False Hitler propaganda has been rife in Europe and it has been proven that the Feuhrer has used this minority in Poland as a tool to cause strife in Poland, so that he may further his plan, "Drang nach osten."

The pity of all this is that this minority (not all of them, however) are continually creating an ill-feeling in Canada. They stop not at any means, foul or false, to defile Poland and Poles in Canada. It would seem that their European nationalistic ambitions is closer to their hearts than their fellow Canadians. At one time they are working on Sigh; 200,000 strong for Britain, and at other times they possess the colossal nerve to challenge Chamberlain and the British parliament and at all times they weaken England's stand in eastern Europe and further the cause of Hitler.

The Pole ever since he migrated to Canada has always tried to be a good Canadian and to live in peace with his neighbors. In the war of 1914-18 he fought for the Allies. He organized voluntary Polish battalions in Niagara on the Lake. He has always fought for freedom which he highly cherishes and extends the same to others. It is harmful to this fair Dominion and the British Empire for which the Pole fought to have propagandists define and belittle him falsely in this country. Therefore in defence of this liberty which we all enjoy let us not besmirch it with calumny and detraction of others.

It behooves each and every nationality which has come to Canada to strengthen rather than to strain friendly relations with all peoples in this great Dominion.

By FRED WILLIAMS

Hindsight is always the best sight our forefathers used to say, and more often than not they were right. When in the early years of the century the agitation in the northwest for self-government of a more responsible character than that in use became strong, there was no difference of opinion as to the advisability of dissolving the old North West Assembly with its subservience to the interior department at Ottawa. Everybody agreed that the growth of population and the development of the country demanded full legislative freedom. But there was a division of opinion as to the course to be adopted. One school, that in control at Ottawa, with an eye to the patronage which would be afforded, especially in Liberals, wanted the Territories divided into two provinces. Another school, composed mostly of old-timers on the plains, men who knew the country and its vicissitudes, believed that it would be sufficient, at first at least, to create just one province, with one government and one set of officials.

On April 8, 1902, the North West Assembly then under control of Hon. Frederick Haultain, passed a resolution asking for provincial autonomy but only as one province. They met with some opposition from a minority group headed by men who later played a leading part in federal politics, which stood out for two provinces, both on grounds of size of the proposed one province and that there were religious and racial factors to be considered.

In the end the minority won. The Territories were divided into Alberta and Saskatchewan, each complete provinces with lieutenant-governors, cabinet, supreme courts and all the other surroundings implied, creating the provinces as they stand today.

A countryman visiting an art gallery, inspected the picture with more or less interest, finally stopping before a portrait of a man sitting before a high-backed chair. A small white card attached indicated that the picture was "A portrait of E. H. Smith, by himself." "What fools these city folks are!" the visitor murmured with a chuckle. "Anyone can tell at first picture would know Smith's by himself. There ain't anyone else in the picture!"

Major And Minor Notes

By John Oliver

Announcement a few days ago of the five events that will make up the 1939-1940 series of five Celebrity Concerts presented by the Women's Musical Club confirms the high standard of attractions this organization has sponsored since it entered this field. Already a long list of front rank artists stands to the credit of the Musical Club and with five more concerts to main tain the standard next season, the foundation for next year already is laid. Efrem Zimbalist, noted violinist, will open the series. His position in the violin world is secure and his appearance will be awaited with interest. Alexander Kipnis, bass, is another who stands in the forefront among singers of the day. It will be his first visit to these parts. The two piano team of Vronsky and Babin is rated highly and will prove, no doubt, as popular as that most excellent duo, Robertson and Bartlett, that appeared here during the last season.

Hertha Glatz, soprano, will give one of the concerts. While her name is unfamiliar to many music lovers, she only has to be heard to be appreciated. And it must be remembered that not all of the best singers are on the air or in the pictures. Richard Tauber, Benjamino Gigli, Kirsten Flagstad, Jan Kiepura, Lawrence Tibbett, Lily Pons, Grace Moore are a few of the top notchers who have appeared in films and who have drawn top radio engagements. But there are many other fine artists who have not.

Film popularity, looks, acting ability are matters that count heavily in the movies but do not weigh as heavily at the Metropolitan. Some of the most popular movie stars and most high priced in the celluloid world are to be found among the lower priced recording artists.

The fifth attraction is a Spanish Ensemble of dancers, piano and guitar. This type of attraction will appeal to many, although the appeal probably will be more to the eye than to the ear.

Entries have closed for the Edmonton and District Musical Festival which takes place in the week of May 1. Herbert G. Turner, the secretary, reports that entries are heavy and that competitions promise to be of the "keen" variety.

There is a strong likelihood that the choral recitation competitions will have the benefit of an unexpectedly good adjudicator, in the person of Marjorie Gullan, of London, England. Miss Gullan, who is the founder of the Speech Fellowship and Speech Institute of London and former lecturer in speech training at the Institute of Education, University of London, is touring Canada under the auspices of the National Council of Education. From available information, will be here at the time the music festival will be on and negotiations are under way to have her as adjudicator in the choral recitations class.

Most people have one thing in common with Adolf Hitler. Die Feuhrer finds himself playing a lone hand with the rest of the world in most matters, but in one thing he finds the world as a whole at one. This bond that ties with people the world over is that his favorite opera is Franz Lehar's The Merry Widow. Hitler is reported to enjoy the unending flow of melody in this opera, as in no other.

And it is not surprising. Hitler was born near Vienna, where, in the historic Theatre an der Wien, in 1905, The Merry Widow first burst upon the world.

Since then such gems as Vilia; Maxim's; I Love You So; Silly, Silly Cavalier; Women; Love in My Heart and other gems have enmeshed and held the world. Today 34 years after The Merry Widow is still the world's most popular light opera. Year after year in number of performances in Europe is outdistancing other operas light or grand and in Vienna, Berlin, Paris, Rome London, New York, Tokyo, Cape Town, Santiago, Cairo or wherever you go, the strains of Lehar's undying melodies are played as they were in that now far off time when it established a new peak in musicianly light opera scores that has served as the mark for all successors to shoot at.

How would you like to be Paderewski? Well, most people would like to be able to play as he does and those who would not like that distinction need not be considered in this paragraph.

When the 78-year-old pianist, composer and statesman recently arrived in New York for his first American tour in six years, he found no fewer than seven of the best grand pianos made awaiting him. He chose three to remain in New York to meet possible emergencies and the others were shipped to points where appearances were scheduled. However, he brought with him his own piano stool, which was made for him in Europe more than 40 years ago and which he uses for all his concerts. Incidentally in his tour, he is travelling in a car specially assigned to him. He is accompanied by his manager; the tuner who has accompanied him on all his American tours since 1913; his personal secretary, a valet a chef and two porters.

Easter is a season not only for parades of new fashions, but a time when a feast of music is given, church choirs, orchestras and other organisations on Good Friday and on Easter Sunday put forth special efforts. Those who listen in on the air were given a genuine treat in hearing the magnificent Brahms Requiem by chorus and orchestra from New York, under the baton of Dr. Percival Noble for the last 26 years director of music at St. Thomas' church, Fifth avenue, New York. Dr. Noble was formerly organist at York Minster and was adjudicator at an Alberta Musical Festival held at Calgary. From Montreal on Good Friday, also came a splendid performance, that of Faure's Requiem. In bringing programs such as these the CBC is continuing to perform excellent service.

Music lovers will welcome the announcement that Jacques Jolas of Cornell University, Mount Vernon, Iowa, will give a two-weeks master course in piano in this city from July 17 to 29 inclusive. Enjoying an international reputation he is an affiliate of the Juilliard Foundation of New York and recently he made his first trip to western Canada and was a member of the staff of the Banff School of Fine Arts.

The course to be given here will be open to all music lovers and will deal with the music of Bach and his contemporaries; style and psychology of the music of Mozart and Haydn; Beethoven; early sonatas, discussion and analysis of Sonatas Opus 109, 110 and 111. This course will continue through the music of Schumann and Brahms. Playing of contemporary music also will be discussed. It will include material dealing with the concerto form and hopes to deal with Bach's Art of the Fugue.

Your Health — By Dr. Frank McCoy

The average person of middle age has such a dread of cancer that if he thinks he is developing it, his very fear of receiving bad news will make him put off being examined. In the event that he has no cancer, the policy may work out all right, but in the event cancer is actually present, the delay in seeking medical aid will only make the news worse when he does receive it.

As cancer is most likely to be successfully treated in the early stages, the great problem is to teach people to recognize possible symptoms of cancer as early as possible.

Some of the symptoms suggesting cancer which should be investigated when they appear are as follows: A sudden change in form, or the rapid growth, of a mole or wart; the presence of a sore which refuses to heal, particularly when found in the mouth or on the lips; persistent digestive difficulty in those of middle age, especially when associated with loss in weight and a dislike of meat; the appearance of a discharge; and the presence of a growth or lump.

Insofar as the cause of cancer is concerned, we know comparatively little; however there is a strong possibility that continued irritation may act as a cause. In the mouth, for example, an irritation may be produced from defective teeth or dental work, or from continued use of a clay pipe. Certain irritating substances, of which tar is one, apparently may act as the irritant which brings about cancer.

Cancer cells, which band together to form a tumor or growth, seem to be different from normal cells chiefly because there is no control of their growth. These "wild" cells, or cells which are unchecked, push their way among normal cells near-by, thus interfering with cells doing a useful work in the body.

As the group of cells forming a cancer have no blood vessels of their own they are forced to feed upon whatever inter-cellular lymph they may arise upon. If the tumor becomes large, the cells on the inside are starved and must do without, while the cells making up the outer layer continue to eat.

One of the questions about cancer very frequently asked comes from those who have had a parent die of the disease. Naturally the children worry lest they develop the same disorder as they grow older. Generally speaking, the children are in no greater danger than children of non-cancerous parents. However, to be on the safe side whenever there is a family history of cancer it is wise to be especially vigilant.

Another inquiry which comes in with great regularity has to do with the possible connection between cancer and the use of aluminum cooking pans. It is my belief that aluminum ware does not cause cancer.

I find that many people have the idea that cancer always causes pain. This is not true, as pain is absent during the early stages in many cases. Generally, pain is one of the later symptoms, except in cases of cancer of a bone or cancer of a nerve tissue.

The diagnosis of cancerous growths on the inside of the body is usually best made with the X-ray, as an illustration, cancer of the stomach is often found in this way. In advanced stages the physical examination of the patient will frequently afford a good clue to the diagnosis.

Because cancer is potentially so serious a disorder I do not attempt to give any advice regarding it by mail and strongly recommend that if you are worried lest you have cancer, you see your own physician as soon as possible.

Dr. Frank McCoy's great book, "The Fast Way to Health," gives you the mechanics of health in plain, easily understandable language.

A limited supply is on hand at The Bulletin. A copy will be mailed postpaid on receipt of $1.05. Just address The Bulletin.

If it is desired to communicate direct with Dr. McCoy, readers are requested to address communication direct to Dr. Frank McCoy, 888 South Ardmore Ave., Los Angeles, California, and replies will be mailed direct from that address.

Rainmaker

Guaranteeing to break a drought that was wilting orange and grapefruit trees, Miss Millie Stoate, self-styled 61-year-old rainmaker, was given full credit for the 2½ million-dollar rain that fell in the Florida citrus area recently. Miss Stoate claims that all she has to do is sit by a body of water a few feet from shore and rain will soon fall. She used her "peculiar powers" for three days to produce rain to save the citrus crop.

Moslem Aid Is Pledged Albania If Italy Resisted

LONDON, April 8—The executive committee of the Pan Arab Society in London last night adopted a resolution declaring if Albania resisted Italian invasion the whole Moslem community would go to her aid.

The resolution was voted following discussion of the conquest of the Italian stroke for the Moslem world.

Mohammedan circles declared that invading Moslem Albania, Italy has struck a severe blow to her own ambitions to play the role of "protector of Islam."

According to dispatches received in London, indignation spread over the Moslem world with news the Fascists invaded Albania, four-fifth of whose population are followers of the same faith professed by the natives of Palestine, Iraq, Egypt, Saudi Arabia and other Arab states.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE

Three Pioneers Rocky Mountain House Area Die

Three pioneers of the Rocky Mountain House area died recently. J. C. Jenson of Dovercourt, Herbert Fagg of Beaver Flats and John Sever of Strachan.

Mr. Jenson had been a resident of the district for 29 years, coming here in 1910 from South Dakota. His wife predeceased him in 1914. He is survived by a son, Carl, at Olds, two daughters, Mrs. L. Hamilton and Mrs. H. Radeau and eleven grandchildren. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. M. Rittenhouse and burial took place at Dovercourt.

Mr. Fagg came to the district from England 30 years ago. Rev. J. F. O'Neil conducted the funeral services. As far as is known he has no relatives in Canada.

John Sever came to Stettler forty years ago and during the past eight years he had resided in the Strathan area. He was 75 years old. He is survived by two sons and two daughters all living in the Rocky Mountain House district. Rev. J. F. O'Neil conducted the funeral services.

The Board of Trade here has sent a letter to the Federal government protesting the 60-cent wheat peg. The farmers in the district are joining the boycott movement to refrain from buying new machinery until the price of wheat is altered.

J. Buresh of Evergreen was appointed Reeve of the Raven Municipality at a recent meeting of the council. H. McCabe, H. Harand H. Taylor, elected as councillors for this year, subscribed to the oath of office. L. M. Colpitts of Sylvan Lake was appointed auditor.

TROCHU

The Trochu - Huxley district's Youth Club held its organization meeting in the Florence school recently, with a large audience present. It was decided to combine the features of the movement sponsored by Dr. Kelloway of Calgary and the Youth Training program.

W. Anderson was elected president, M. Steinback vice-president, Miss Fagg secretary-treasurer. A committee for finance and program was named as follows: Sandy Gabb, J. Findlay, C. McArthur, Miss E. Cummings, Miss I. Scheunert and A. Heer.

Regular meetings will be held every second Wednesday in each month. The next meeting will be held in the Elks hall, Trochu, on Wednesday, March 10.

About 50 guests attended the Easter party held by the Trochu Valley High School recently. Games, contests and bridge were followed by a splendid lunch served by the high school girls.

RIMBEY

Harry Jeynes, Jack Ralston and M. B. Tuckey, Rimbey's three grain elevator agents attended the first meeting of group No. 2, of the Western Grain Elevators Association, held at Lacombe on Wednesday evening. Others from this branch of the C.P.R. line that attended were J. Tollock, pool agent at Hoadley; R. Douglass, Alberta Pacific agent at Bluffton, and Alex McNevin, U.G.G. agent at Forshee.

F. W. Griffin of Lacombe was elected president. R. A. Butterworth of Clive, vice-president, and M. B. Tuckey of Rimbey, secretary of the group. The organization is the first of its kind in the west. It is province wide. It was organized early in March at Calgary.

RED DEER

Scouting had a great night in Red Deer on Wednesday when Scouts, Rovers, Cubs and fathers, numbering 170 in all, sat down to a father and son banquet in the Elks' hall. The mothers of the boys were in charge of the supper and put on an excellent meal and was smartly served by the Girl Guides.

Mayor E. S. Hogg acted as chairman and opened the program with a toast to the King. W. D. Trimble was at the piano for community singing. While the mayor had not taken part in Scout work in the city, he said he was 100 per cent behind the movement and paid high tribute to H. E. Callender, Scoutmaster for 20 years.

During the evening a demonstration of fire lighting without matches was given by the First Red Deer Troop and the Second

How to Plan a Formal Pool

If you are planning a pool to be placed in the center of a formal garden, or in the center of a level lawn area or formal court, the design for the pool must be formal.

In this Garden-Graph the correct and incorrect types of pools in formal garden settings are shown. Figure 1 shows a square-shaped pool of correct proportion in a square-shaped garden area. Figure 2 demonstrates the awkward appearance of an oval-shaped pool when wrongly used in a formal garden area of square design.

Before excavating for a pool, stake out its shape and size. Then study it for size and proportion. It is an easy matter to adjust the position of the stakes until the correct position and proportion of the pool have been attained.

S. C. MEMBERS WILL OPPOSE WHEAT POLICY

WINNIPEG, April 8—Social Credit members of parliament will oppose the government's new wheat policy calling for a minimum price of 60 cents a bushel for No. 1 Northern wheat at Fort William and an acreage bonus scheme, according to Jos. Needham, member for the Battlefords, and E. G. Hansell, Macleod.

The two Social Crediters arrived here Thursday en route to their constituencies for the Easter holiday recess.

FLOUNDER LIVES FOR 18 HOURS OUT OF WATER

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., April 8—Police Chief Peter Bruce tells a story about a fish that lived 18 hours out of water.

"I caught a flounder in the Fraser river and took it home and put it out as cat food," Chief Bruce said.

The following morning—eighteen hours later—he found the fish on the porch and put it in a bucket of water where, he said, it showed signs of life.

"I took it to the river and it swam away," the police chief said.

PRESS FREEDOM INTERFERENCE DANGER SEEN

London Journalists View With Concern Action Of Premier

By CLIFFORD L. DAY

British United Press, Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

BRISTOL, Eng., April 8.—The central London branch of the National Union of Journalists announced Thursday it would propose a resolution expressing grave concern regarding the danger of interference with freedom of the press in England.

The resolution, in connection with the government's efforts to suppress a statement by Earl Stanhope, First Lord of the Admiralty, regarding naval precautions, said:

VIEWS WITH CONCERN

"This annual meeting views with concern action of the Prime Minister in attempting to secure suppression of a speech by a cabinet minister who had full knowledge that representatives of the press were present. It considers the action of the Prime Minister if not challenged by public opinion would establish a principle which constitutes a grave inroad on freedom of the press."

A warning that the press is in danger was given by E. S. Bardsley, their president, at the union's meeting last night.

WATCH DANGER

Bardsley said that Britain must watch the danger that Totalitarian press practices are "coming to be regarded with favor in our own country. There are people among us who are attracted by the prospect of holding the press in the hollow of their hand.

"They also would like to get the press to stifle its voice and blind its eyes and paralyze its activities generally. These enemies of the press have not yet dard to come out in the open but they are lurking—waiting to spring. Woe betide the press if the wolves ever get it down."

Convention Called

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., April 8.—The Lethbridge Federal Liberal Association Thursday night decided a nominating convention in the Lethbridge constituency will be held here May 6.

GREAT BOOKS IN BRIEF

By ELIZABETH COATESWORTH JAMES

"Hamlet, Prince Of Denmark"

By WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

"Who's there!" came the sentry's challenge out of the black night. The relieving soldiers gave the watchword to their uneasy comrades. The soldiers were afraid.

It was the thirteenth century in Denmark. These men were guarding the castle of Claudius, newly crowned king, who had married his brother's widow. King Hamlet, recently deceased, was said to have been bitten by a serpent as he lay asleep in his garden. The soldiers whispered of these things.

They called to Horatio, a scholar who conversed in Latin, the language of ghosts. Horatio advanced and saw the ghost of the dead king dressed in full armor. But the ghost refused to talk with Horatio and indicated that his wishes had not yet been divined. The soldiers prepared to summon Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, son of the dead king, to meet his father's ghost the next night.

So it came about. The following night Hamlet waited in the shadows until almost dawn, before the figure appeared and beckoned him to follow. His friends were afraid for him to leave their sight with the man from the other world, but the Prince would not be stopped. Listening to the anguished commands of his father's spirit he learned that Claudius had poured a vial of poison into the ear of the sleeping king. That Gertrude, wife and mother of the two Hamlets, had been unfaithful to her husband. That the late king even now was serving his penance in Purgatory because his unnatural brother had given him no chance to pray before sending his soul into eternity.

The ghost commanded three things of his son: "Revenge my murder." "Taint not thy soul." "Harm not thy mother."

The young prince left this interview troubled beyond power to express. His nature was one of peaceful thoughtfulness. he was a philosopher. Revenge, violence, death were hateful to him. He thought of the ghost. Perhaps the ghost was really not his father but an evil spirit come to tempt him into sin. He must be sure! If he could only see guilt on Claudius' face.

The Prince had not meant to kill the father of his sweetheart; he grieved to see Ophelia overwhelmed at the death of Polonius by Hamlet's hand. Then came Laertes, son of Polonius, seeking revenge for the murder. He was restrained when he found the prince had done the deed .

Back at court Claudius thought to insure the removal of Hamlet without taking the step himself. So he filled Laertes with false tales about Hamlet and caused Laertes to issue a challenge for a fencing match with the prince. Hamlet accepted, not knowing that Laeries' lance would be poisoned so that a prick would kill him. Claudius made doubly sure and poisoned the chalice from which Hamlet would drink between rounds. All was set for the death of this troublesome step-son-nephew.

The match began. Strained excitement held the spectators. Laertes made a touch, the lances were knocked to the floor, and in picking them up, the men changed them. Hamlet then pricked Laertes. Claudius held his eyes on the fighters and looked up to see his wife drinking from the cup prepared for Hamlet. His cry to stop was too late. Then the poison brought the fencers to their knees in agony. As the challenger realized what a dupe he had been, he told Hamlet the truth. The Prince stabbed Claudius. Three members of the royal family lay dying, while Laertes and Hamlet forgave each other.

Hamlet commanded Horatio to spread his story abroad to vindicate his honor. Watching his friend die, Horatio cried "Now cracks a noble heart."

On the shield of the warriors, Hamlet's body was borne away, while the perfidious couple lay where they had fallen.

Calgarian Suffers Fracture Of Skull

CALGARY, April 8.—Trevor Williams, well-known Calgarian, suffered a fractured skull last night at the Calgary Horse Show when his horse, Lorelei, fell during a jumping competition and was the second person seriously injured in three nights. Sydney A. Smith was kicked by a Clydesdale stallion Wednesday.

Spring is the time for BUILDING and REMODELING

METHOD GIVEN ON PROCEDURE IN HOME LOAN

Two Ways Shown when Advances Desired for House Improvements

Two methods of procedure are open to those desiring a Home Improvement Loan.

Plan A—To be used when the owner desires to negotiate directly and complete the transaction with the bank.

1—The owner should determine the amount required to finance the work contemplated. This can be done by securing prices from one or more contractors or sub-contractors. Or, if the work is of such a nature as to warrant the services of an architect, the owner may consult his architect as to cost and the best method of carrying out the work.

2—The owner should apply to his bank for the required loan and fill out the application form which the bank will provide, giving all details and information required by the bank.

3—When notified by the bank of the approval of the loan the owner is in position to arrange for the purchase of the material and to employ the labor or award contracts.

4—On completion of the work or when the Home Improvement Loan note is signed, the bank will be in a position to pay the money to the owner or to the contractor, vendor or sub-contractor on the owner's order.

Plan B—To be used when the owner desires to have a contractor or vendor act as his agent in negotiating and completing the transaction with the bank.

1—The contractor submits his tender (Form H.I. 101)* to the owner.

2—If acceptable to the owner he signs the acceptance at the bottom of the tender form which authorizes the contractor to negotiate the loan.

3—At this time the owner fills in the application for the loan addressed to the bank selected by him.

4—The contractor then sends or takes the tender and the application to the bank together with whatever other credit information is required.

5—If the loan is approved the bank then notifies the owner and the contractor. The agreement between the owner and the contractor is now in effect and the work may be proceeded with.

6—On completion of the work the owner gives the bank a completed copy of Form "C" and signs the Home Improvement Loan Note provided by the bank.

7—The contractor completes the waiver of lien (Form H.I. 102) and presents same to the bank.

8—The bank is now ready to pay the contractor and the transaction is completed.

Loans up to $2,000 can be made on any private dwelling, including duplexes, apartments and farm homes. Loans can be repaid in equal monthly instalments including principal and interest. The period of repayment can extend to 36 months. Loans can be made for repairs, alterations and additions, including built-in equipment.

The maximum charge for the loan is three and one-quarter per cent discount for a one-year loan repayable in equal monthly instalments which is approximately six and one-third per cent per annum. No service charge of any kind may be made.

Build Costs To be Obtained From Architect

While literature published under the label of the Dominion Housing Administration board is comprehensive, it does not go into the question of costs for very obvious reasons. These reasons should be kept in mind when planning a home selected from the plans offered by the board.

It would be unwise, the board points out, to set down a schedule of costs of construction of the various designs. Houses built in the east and in the west from the same design would vary greatly in their cost. The same applies to houses built in various parts of any province and certainly in Ontario.

Houses built of materials suitable for the smaller towns may be disqualified by local building restrictions in the larger cities. Moreover as a large percentage of the expenditure upon any house is due to the cost of plumbing, heating, electric wiring and other equipment as well as the cost of the interior finish, the requirements of individual owners will influence the total amount spent upon each house to such an extent as to make general estimates of costs misleading.

The advice of a resident architect or builder should be obtained on building costs in your city, town or village.

The fashion of glove wearing was introduced in Europe in the 11th century, when the Doge of Venice, Domenigo Silva, married the daughter of the emperor of Constantinople. The lady always wore scented gloves in public, and the fashion soon spread to France and Spain.

Whatever your home improvement problem may be, there is a solution for it. You need go no further than our own community to find experts to modernize an old structure: to build a new one: to repair wear and damage: to finance home ownership.

EQUIPMENT IN PLUMBING HAS NEW WRINKLES

Manufacturers Turn Out Ideas At Fast Rate For Improvements

Manufacturers in the plumbing and heating field have been turning out new ideas, despite depressions, at the rate of "thirteen to the dozen," writes Evan Parry in The Sanitary Engineer of February 15, 1939.

The advent of the kitchen laundry, the writer thinks, is so worthwhile that housewives are wondering why it was not done before. There can be no question that it is a vast improvement over the basement laundry, he says.

"A room immediately adjacent and connected from the kitchen, fitted with a streamlined tub of porcelain finish, easy to clean, is a convenience to housewives which would be hard to best. This, with washer and ironer, electrically operated in cabinet model would make it more than difficult for moderns to resist.

PROTABLE WASHER

"While speaking of laundries there has recently appeared on the market a portable electric washer 18 inches high and weighing only 17 pounds. The motor operates quietly with AC current. For apartment dwellers it is a god-send.

"The combined bath and shower with a 'deviator spout' supplies a long-felt want. At the lift of a button the water can be directed from the bath to the shower and vice versa. Automatic control prevents any sudden dousing from the shower after the bath is over, by inadvertently turning the water on.

"The bath of today is as different from that of pre-depression days as chalk is from cheese. It is 17 inches high; has a raised tiling ledge to prevent water creeping between walls and the top and to round it off for good measure, has a wide rim over the front panel for sitting purposes.

"Grab bars are available to meet all requirements, either on the wall, as an integral part of the bath, or vertical for hoisting oneself up. For elderly or infirm persons, these facilities, when bathing, are invaluable.

DANGER AVOIDED

"Many accidents are laid at the door of slipping in the bath. Before the flat-bottomed bath was developed, one was constantly hearing of such accidents. But such incidents also happened on the bathroom floor. With a non-slippable foot-sure bathmat, the risk is negligible. It is made of rubber with suction cups on the under side."

From the simple Cape Cod cottage shown in the circlet, was developed the English house in the larger illustration—by adding two wings; one for garage and one for enclosed porch. The roof structure was also altered by the addition of upper story window frames, and the lower part of the house was worked in stone.

Always Comes Resurrection

A Bulletin Short Story Complete On This Page Every Saturday

By Ida M. Evans

EASTER TIME! It comes but once a year. Then its high flood of white lilies inundates and cleanses the soiled world.

The city of New York holds the Empire State building on one corner of importance, and on another the Hannibal Hasch florist shop. Both are temples wherein are practiced the latest rites.

People there are who mention lightly the Empire State building —"Just another high shack. So what?"—but who speak the name Hasch with reverent indrawn breath. The purple, the white, the gold-flecked Hasch orchids! The price of a Hasch orchid! The price of Hasch freesia! Of Hasch apple-blossoms!

For such people, old Hanny Hasch has a benevolent disdain. Poor creatures. What do they know? Or feel?

Orchids—pah!

For profit and overhead, old Hanny sells orchids to old or young men and women about Manhattan. Freesia is sentimentalists. Roses to more solid citizenry. Daffodils and lilac to any one who wishes to assist in kicking poor old man Winter from the drives of Central Park or from the benches of the Battery.

But he trafficks in Easter lilies for his soul's pleasure. To old Hanny, all seasons lead to spring.

"Instead of just flowers, they could be human, the way they look at you," he argued to Virginie Wharton, his girl Friday for three years.

Virginie agreed. They were her favorite flower, too.

No Girl Anywhere Overlooked Alec

They had been her favorite for three years, from the time that March day when she looked across the rear delivery and packing room, over-filled with white flowers in pots and sprays, and saw Alec Gowan, assistant manager of the Caronne Island Nurseries, forty miles to the east of Fifth Avenue.

Alec saw her at the same moment. Alec overlooked no new girl in a florist shop. Or anywhere else, for that matter.

No girl anywhere overlooked Alec Gowan, from graduates of secretarial schools to rich old women who specialized in rare bulbs. He had something.

He was tall. He had black hair, blue eyes, and a cleft chin. So have plenty of young men upon whom women don't get a bit excited.

Virginie, later, knew that it was his eyes and arms.

The cool hardness of the first hinted faintly at hidden tenderness. The hard muscles of the arms seemed to say, "Here is that security and protection for which you women hunger with age-old instinct."

The first time Alec Gowan put his arms around Virginie—and that was five short hours after he saw her—she thought dreamily as her slim body swayed to the swing music, "This is my home. Where I belong always."

That day, Alec Gowan had worked fast.

It was a year of unusually tall and prolific lilies. The demand was heavy. Extra vehicles had promised to lift. A city was optimistic. The Hasch shop was a tornado of satin ribbon, fluted paper, green wire velvet chalices, scented fountains, messenger boys and exacting customers.

Alec had shouted at his delivery men: "Get that truck load on the move," and had made instant way to old Hanny's office on the side balcony.

Voluble with exasperation, old Hanny had returned with him.

Hanny, just tell this child that I'm nothing a girl can't fearlessly take home to show her mother."

"Virginie, you turn him down cold! He is already so conceited it's funny he don't walk on stilts."

But Virginie's gold-dust eyes had become brilliant. Her blood even then had begun to race.

Alec Gowan had reached and wiped yellow pollen from her cheek.

"Better wash your face. Tonight you and I are going places."

Old Hanny had thrown his arms out in dismay. "Then he had shaken a fist at Alec. Then he had pleaded.

"Alec, take another one. She's the best girl I ever had—"

"I believe you. You could put some fluted gold paper around her and tie a yard of mauve satin ribbon, and customers would buy her."

Alec Gowan Was A Fast Worker

For three hours, Virginie had worked with fever and speed, rushed home, and changed to a flowered red chiffon dress, which matched her hair and stressed her black-silk eyelashes.

Alec had raced his truck and helped-haste to the Caronne Island nurseries, checked the day's lily deliveries, and changed from heavy gray sweater, corduroys and high trousers.

At 7:30 he had been back in New York City, waiting in his car, parked in front of the shabby old brick apartment building in the West Sixties, where Virginie and Jinks and a roomer to help out. The Wharton apartment was four floors up. Not a front apartment. Five rooms for seven occupants. Small-ish rooms. Gray-haired Marcia Kerrick, a city employee, did not mind renting a small room.

Alec had met Virginia's mother, her two sisters and two brothers. Virginie was the eldest. She was 21. Dennis was 16, quiet and dark-eyed. Doris was 13, with her elder sisters' lovely mouth but brighter hair. Jinks was 13, by nature both serious and freckled. Neatby was 11, thin and a little sulky. Mrs. Wharton was thin and worried. She might have been a pretty girl long back.

Virginie's father had been dead for four years. Flu. He had been a draftsman.

Very nice family, Alec had thought. They had been polite to Virginie's caller, who had perceived no strain in the atmosphere.

Alec had taken Virginie to a gay place. Gay means expensive.

Virginie knew that she had never really danced before, never enjoyed food or drink or orchestral music.

"If I'm stepping on any other fellow's toes, let me know," Alec had murmured, lips on her hair while Ali Baba Swing went on.

"Why?"

"So I can tell him this is my stepping ground from now on, my child."

A fast worker, Alec Gowan. But he had known what he wanted. So had Virginie. Long before midnight, her heart had lightened with the ache that was to last for years.

Long before midnight she had known all about Alec Gowan. He was twenty-eight and single. His father had been old Silas Carronne's foreign bulb buyer. Alec liked out-door work. He wore high boots because the Caronne Island fields were rich and black. He owned a sixty-foot boat on Long Island, five miles from the hot-houses which were his chief care. He planned to build an English brick house on the lot. Dormer windows in front and a rose hedge behind.

His eyes were tender. His arms were hard and tight. His words came more rapidly. Alec Gowan being changed to Benny Runy Ru jitter-time.

Virginie had let him talk on, plan on, hold her more, tightly, murmur almost incoherently.

"Easter Sunday I'll drive in for you, take you out to see the nurseries, the hothouse, and my lot. Is it a date?"

"Yes—yes!"

"Listen, Virginie, you haven't known me long. Does that matter, honey? It's all right, isn't it?"

She had not known him long. It did not matter. It was all right. Long before midnight she had known that Alec Gowan was going laugh and love in a hurry. But he would never let a girl down.

But she had let him down. Long before midnight.

Virgy Disclaimed Any Desire For Marriage

Afterward, desperate and self-defensive, she had asked what else could she have done?

Can a girl in the first ten hours tell a young man that she can't marry for years and years because her family needs her earnings?

Might have said, "Marry what?" Or, with surprise and, then, a faint smile, "What gave you the idea I'm that hurrying mood?" Or worse, "Suits me!"

While she danced that first night, wishing never to have to stop, and, at times, she had been sickishly conscious of the home atmosphere.

Oh, they'd not be saying a word to each other about Alec Gowan. But their silence would be loud, like surf.

If Virginie, who kept them together under one roof, got married—

Virginie disclaimed any desire for marriage.

Many times Mrs. Wharton had said hopelessly, "It isn't fair. It's not fair to you, Virgy. I shouldn't have brought the others into the world."

If thought storks brought 'em and the parents couldn't do a thing. Oh, forget it, Mum. Don't worry. I don't want to get married! It's more fun to go out with several."

"Some day there'll be one different, Virgy. You'll break my heart."

For the mother remembered too well her own gay young wedding. Neath Bowers had been a church singer. She remembered Garry Wharton's eager passion, the gay ride to Connecticut one midnight in May, the fragrance of the woods through which they raced, the flush of dawn over Central Park on their return to boarding-house and apartment-hunting.

Virginie, the first child, had Gary Wharton's generous mouth, gold-brown eyes and thick bright brown hair. Two other children had died. Parents had died. But nothing had been like the nightmare of Gary's sudden death when Virgy was in her third year at high school. She graduated from the high school, had known the manager of a florist supplies' wholesale house. There old Hanny Hasch had liked her.

Hanny paid well, lifting a wounded upper lip at any minimum wage for girls capable of handling his stock.

It would be different if Virgy had any special talent. So that in Virginie's early forties, or forties, a career might grandly compensate for robbed youth.

Dennis now—give Dennis a few years—would be pretty blonde cashier's ready smile at Alec and his flicker of returned friendliness.

To be sure, Alec smiled at stray cats and dogs and babies.

Later, at a filling-station, a girl in a car opposite, with lovely eyes whose lashes looked artificial, had almost backed into a red pump looking back at Alec.

A week later, Alec had had an accident on a road near the greenhouses. The woman driving the other car was loud and furious. Important as a gold eagle. Heavy-jowled as an over-fed Doberman. Virginie knew her by sight. By inheritance, she owned a chain of dress shops. She had grandsons.

But there had been nothing grandmotherly in the look she gave Alec, after a minute or two. Nothing subtle, either, in the change from heavy to heavy honey.

"Oh, I expect it was mostly my fault. What say we split the damages?"

"I'm insured. Let the insurance people fight it out," Alec had said briefly.

Later, in Virginie's ear, he had commented, "Old fat fool. Damn right she was to blame!"

Virginie had loathed the woman. But she had thought dreamily that it was lovely to ride with Alec. He was equal to any mess.

She had told them at home that Alec was willing to wait for years. He—he owed money.

Dennis had been skeptical. "Does he, Virgy? How much?" Doris had said quickly, "If I have just a few more lessons, Virgy——" Her mother had said, "Alec's a good boy, Virgy. I wonder——"

Virginie had guessed. Later she had timidly asked Alec who did not take to the idea of living with Virgy's family. Too far from the nurseries.

So she had said timidly, "Alec, would you mind if I kept on working?"

It was a year of especially tall lilies.

Denny's stuff. He says it's good."

"He did?"

"Colbert's temperamental. Likes his own ideas and expects you to. But he's useful right. You'll be pleased with the layout."

"The—the layout?"

Her voice had been wavery, frightened. Oh, the lovely summer. Gone! No lovely summer to follow, next year?

"The house won't be finished before mid-November. But can't we get married next month? We can live cheap in my quarters and take our time to buy furniture."

"Oh—Oh, Alec!"

"What's wrong?" he had asked, sharply.

"I can't marry you."

"What?" He was as shocked as if a black burr came from a white lily bud.

"Not for years. It wouldn't be fair for you to wait."

She had wanted to cry. To creep away. The day has turned dark. The golden asters which Alec had brought her—new variety, not yet named for the trade—had turned to straw in her lap.

"How many years, Virginie?"

"Five. Maybe six—seven."

Alec Gowan had considered the situation, frowning. Then:

"Why should you be the goat, Virginie?"

"I'm no goat!" Great loyalty had bred great indignation. "They—don't like it, either. My mother hasn't anything. Jinks asks only two years more to study—he has genius——"

"At your expense. And at mine."

She had been hurt. His voice had not been kind.

"And Denny. Doris—Mother wants to keep them together."

"Naturally." His voice had been softer.

"You see, Alec, I had the breaks. I had a happy childhood. My mother was alive and didn't know what it was to—to fear daily the loss of home, roof, even bed and food——" Tears had broken.

Alec had put his hard strong arms about her.

"My poor darling. Guess I'm dumb. Wish you'd told me sooner. Oh, because of the loan. That's all. I can wait, dear."

"Alec, I love you so." She had begun to cry. "It had never mattered before about my wanting to marry any one——"

"You darling! Now I can see why that man Jacob waited. Until now he seemed to me a dumb ox."

Second April Lacked Ecstasy Of the First

But it had not been the same in April.

Even that day, leaving the green-shaded inn, Virginie, with jealous eyes, had seen the pretty blonde cashier's ready smile at Alec and his flicker of returned friendliness.

To be sure, Alec smiled at stray cats and dogs and babies.

Later, at a filling-station, a girl in a car opposite, with lovely eyes whose lashes looked artificial, had almost backed into a red pump looking back at Alec.

A week later, Alec had had an accident on a road near the greenhouses. The woman driving the other car was loud and furious. Important as a gold eagle. Heavy-jowled as an over-fed Doberman. Virginie knew her by sight. By inheritance, she owned a chain of dress shops. She had grandsons.

But there had been nothing grandmotherly in the look she gave Alec, after a minute or two. Nothing subtle, either, in the change from heavy to heavy honey.

"When we're married? And hand the money over to them?" Voice was harsh. "Get up early mornings to get to the city grind?" Scornful. "All tired out when you get home at night? Thanks." His face had darkened. "Virginie, to be frank, I don't want the care."

Her head had gone high. She had not again made a would-be help-ful suggestion. Yet under all the strain had been happiness for her and him, for a long while. They had been together most evenings and Sundays. They had ridden, danced, kissed.

But the second April had lacked the ecstasy of the first. And in the third they had quarreled as two who love should never quarrel. Alec had sold the half-finished house. Said they'd build again.

It had been a rushed month. The depression had made even well-to-do people buyers peevish. Old Hanny had lost two of his best salesgirls in a week. Unexpected marriages. Virginie had worked overtime and she had tired unexpectedly. So that Alec had walked through the soggy wet leaves and bruised blooms on the floor of the rear room to find her sucking a wire-ripped thumb.

"Say, are you hired here to make wreaths for the dead gangsters?"

"Alec, please! Hanny's nearly ill. And it was a busy funeral."

"Dennis like his job?"

"Oh, Alec! Yes! But he isn't a full-fledged draughtsman yet. Alec. He can't get big pay and a chance to learn——"

Alec had strode across the room to a baby-faced new girl whose last name Virginie had not yet learned. "Want to go places today, baby?" The girl was quick on the uptake. "With you, Santa Claus?"

"Sure!"

"I'll say I do."

Then Gretchen Goranin had worked feverishly, watching the clock. At closing-time she had snatched hat and coat from a locker and raced out.

But afterward, Alec had been remorseful.

"Virginie darling, I did it from pure meanness. Sorry. Don't have a headache and a bore. Virginie, I love only you!"

So Gretchen had not mattered. Nor her existence. Nor the brief pouting campaign. Nor the bright-eyed little hat-check girls. Nor pretty cashiers. Nor that lovely Polish blonde. Habel from whom and for whom Hanny's men customers liked to buy orchids. Nor wealthy old women with greenhouses. Nor a scattering of debutantes with lovely hunting eyes.

None of them—until Bemby Keats hove into view, in January.

Terror Comes To Virginie

Bemby was the ex-debutante granddaughter of old Mrs. Keats of the railway, banking, mining Keats estate. The Keats estate on Long Island was photographed even for London magazines. Mrs. Keats's clothes were ridiculous, legendary—or a dozen other adjectives.

Bemby was modern. She was pale rotten hair and ice blue eyes, which perhaps had seen too much in Bemby's twenty-five years.

Old Hanny was as pleased to get her as a kindly rat for unexpected cheese. He liked rich girls who liked to play for a while with shop work. Like his remarkable jade fountain in the second reception room, they brought comment and profit.

Bemby said, "Hello, Alec," when he appeared on her second day.

"Hello. And what are you doing here, my child?"

"I'm working, Big Boy."

"I see."

It seemed that Alec had known her when she wore socks and white shoes and refused to allow her nurse to carry her sand pail and shovel from the Keats terrace to the Keats private beach.

Her grandmother's hobby was rare bulbs. Alec's father on his trips to Holland and Africa had kept an eye open for rare bulbs for old Mrs. Keats.

He had not spoken to Virginie of the granddaughter. But Virginie recalled that on a day in that first June, they had passed a huge white stone house with acres of terraced sward, and she had pointed a finger and remarked, "Those greenhouses, my pet, hold America's finest collection of hybrid lotus."

Along with Bemby in this slushy January came terror to Virginie. Bemby knew what she wanted. Did Alec?

Bemby would be a prize wife for any young man. Beauty, money, poise, personality.

Along with the queer terror in January came what once would have been a wonderfully good news. Triple good news.

Dennis got a raise, besides a chance to work on the side for what a successful architect who had been attracted by a blueprint entered by Dennis in a contest. Dennis had finished high school and was engaged as assistant manager in a neighborhood vocal studio. Oh, a sort of glorified errand girl. But Doris was ecstatic. Marcia Kerrick had gone to school with the head of the institution.

And Marcia Kerrick herself, gray-headed and wiry, but pensioned off by her employers, had thenceforward she would assume half of the expenses of the Wharton apartment.

"Because it is the only home I'll ever like," she said matter-of-factly to Virginie and Doris. "And your mother doesn't look well lately. I don't want her to die of worry. Where would I be? Homeless and lonely. So, Virgy, you can tell that good-looking Alec he can set the day. You've been a good girl, Virgy." Then, "Where's Jinks? Out a hasty handkerchief and went into her own room.

And Virginie wished that she could die!

Tell Alec she was free to marry? Tell him when?

When he laughed with Bemby Keats who in the Hasch black and primrose crepe uniform, looked like a sleek idle doll? When he was dating her up—or she was dating him up—for dance or late news reels?

Or when he was promising Bemby a new Easter lily, freak variety, not yet named for the trade, with a fleck of rose in its white?

She did not tell him in January. Nor in February, cold and rainy. Alec was in love. He watched month, to nursery trucks and corsage makers. Yet unmistakably Alec avoided Virginie when Bemby was in the room. He volved. No pronounced avoidance. Just reasonably.

In the week before Easter Sunday, old Hanny saw nothing but lilies and more lilies. Men from Mars might slaughter his whole block and he would just shrug. "You fool! Those are laid away for the chancel of St. Peter's!" Or "Look, sheep's head, I'm busy. Go so a debutante's tea should be talked about for its second-grade flowers?"

One day, Bemby laughed to a group, "Hanny doesn't understand debs. A lot they care for the flowers. The stag line counts."

Virginie heard. She understood Bemby. And she wished that Bemby had appeared sooner. Then the pain might have begun by now to lessen. Or would it ever lessen?

Oh, it was not fair. And she knew why. Alec Gowan, Alec Gowan was not a one-man woman. Any good-looking young chap, with an unusual background, might have pleased that forceful girl.

Forceful—over that word Virginie winced. If she had somehow been more forceful, would even-thing have been different? She had failed life—or life had failed her. Which?

It was, however, Bemby's forcefulness which shortened matters.

Hanny Purrs Over Delora Siciliano

Several days before Easter Sunday, Bemby graciously allowed Hanny to learn that her whim was over. She had shopping of her own to do, and she was bored with early rising.

Two other girls had the flu, and the head salesman had been knocked down by a taxi. Hanny threw up both hands and, pleaded with Bemby, then phoned all employment agencies.

The result, among others, was Delora Siciliano, a sloe-eyed darling who looked as if she belonged among lilies. She stopped, leaned over her, well pleased, hardly hearing when Bemby said that she had changed her mind and would stay on as a favor.

Virginie suspected that Alec had told Bemby to wait. Bemby would leave Hanny. She felt hopeless, tired.

She paid little attention to Delora whose sloe eyes caressed men customers. That was Hanny's business. Soon enough, say in three days when Alec was absorbed in churches and He is Risen no more in hourly sweet reverence from radios, Hanny would sternly deal with Miss Siciliano.

But tired, unhappy Virginie was mistaken. Hanny did not get that chance.

Late in Saturday afternoon, while the Hasch chimes rang softly Resurrection, a lean young black-haired Levantine entered the shop, prowled swiftly like a panther past fountains and tall fragrant vases, through heavy-scented showrooms and flower crammed workroom and found Delora in the packing room with an armful of roses for a fussy old broker.

Virginie was checking violets for delivery boys in Park Avenue. No one paid attention until a soft voice cut through the clamor, like steel through a petal:

"Get hat and coat, my little sister."

Delora half screamed and dropped the long-stemmed roses as if they were too thorny.

Bemby was there. It was Alec's usual time to drop in, with the last Caronne truck.

Delora said like a scared baby, "I won't! I won't! I like to work in a shop!"

"Get them!" he repeated, softly. "I will not my social security card," she argued.

"Your marriage tonight will be your social security, my sister!"

Bemby spoke, using unfortunately much the same tone she might have taken toward the bullying husband of a rowed bridesmaid.

"How absurd: Are you her owner? This is America. Miss Siciliano will give you a card to a good legal firm."

The brother looked at Bemby—at the perfect cut of her crepe uniform, at the magnificent lustre of her coiled hair, at a five-carat square emerald on her left hand. And, looking, he spat.

"Oh, no, Tony," cried Delora, and giggled. "She is a rich girl. She does not need to work."

"She can keep you, maybe bread from some one who is poor?" Again Tony spat.

There seemed nothing for any one to say. Bemby was annoyed, but amused, too.

Delora put a thumb in her little red mouth.

"Will Ferro buy me diamond shoulder clips?" she bargained, as if that had been an obstacle.

"Probably," said her brother, with disapproval.

Then he spoke to the group.

"She has been more trouble to me than all the other seven of my sister's daughters," he said, simply. "She works to make contacts, as she says. I tell her to such as her that is a word for doubled-cross. It is a good man. But he is tired of going on his knees to her." He

'MRS. DOC'

CAST OF CHARACTERS

ALAN WARREN—Ambitious young country doctor.

EMILY WARREN—Alan's wife.

ERIC KANE—Construction engineer.

DR. FARRELL—Alan's early associate.

Yesterday: Eric says goodby to Emily while Alan is out. He is going to stay with Alan. Second later, a man rushes up to Alan's porch and calls, "Mrs. Doc." He explains that he needs help, that his wife is dying.

CHAPTER XXII

DR. WARREN isn't here now," said Emily, her voice in sharp contrast to the man's excited pleading. "I don't know where he is."

"You've got to find him. Send him right away. He knows me. Bill Bower. He said he'd come when we needed him."

"Quiet hysterical parents." Farrell's words came to Emily as if he were speaking them at her side. That must include husbands, she thought.

"I'll get Dr. Warren, send him as soon as possible." The man's relief was immediately evident. Something prompted Emily to find out more.

"Your wife, what's the matter?"

"She's going to have a baby. She's all alone. She's in terrible pain. Oh, Mrs. Doc, can't you do something?"

Could she do something? This half-hysterical youth was appealing to her. Could she really merit the "Mrs. Doc" he had called her?

"I'll come with you," Emily decided swiftly. "Just a minute, while I call the hospital. I'll have him find Dr. Warren or Dr. Farrell."

A few seconds later, they were in Alan's car, speeding toward the Bower home. The man was calmer, quieter. He has confidence in me, he suspects me of skill, he has found something for him and for his wife, Emily thought. Grimly, she determined she would do just that.

"My wife, my Angelo, she is so young to have a baby," the man was saying. "She said it would be all right. Nothing to worry about."

Emily nodded, intent on her driving. "Nothing to worry about," she repeated, trying to make her words sound convincing.

She directed her along streets that led into Sumner's slum district. Past squalor Emily had never quite realized existed. Past dilapidated, a row of tiny, tumble-down shacks, unpainted and dingy.

"Here it is," he said, indicating the corner house. Emily stopped, followed him into the house. Even before she stepped through the doorway, Emily could hear the girl's agonized moans, punctuated by sharper cries.

Loneliness of the little place impressed Emily. There were only two rooms—a combination kitchen and bedroom, and a tiny bedroom. The girl, Angela, was in the bedroom. Bower dropped to his knees beside the bed, his arms around his wife.

"It's all right now, honey, it's all right. Here's Mrs. Doc. And Doc will be here in a minute." The girl looked up at Emily with wide, brown eyes, tried to smile. She was, as her husband had said, quite young. Hardly more than 18, Emily judged, and trying, trying so hard to be brave.

"Don't worry, now, Mrs. Bower," Emily said, hoping to keep her own excitement out of her voice, trying to sound reassuring, like Alan. "Dr. Warren is coming right down. He'll be here any minute."

"I'm not so worried—now," the girl said. "Now that you're here. But I was so scared—all alone. Oh!" She clutched at Emily's soft hand, her nails digging into the flesh.

"Billy was scared, too," the girl went on. "We just moved here last month. We didn't know anyone, only Dr. Warren. He's been so nice to us. He'll be here soon, won't he?"

Emily talked on, quieting and comforting this girl and her husband. Her heart went out to them, so alone, so terrified at this great mystery of life.

Her thoughts raced ahead. What would. Alan's mother have done? What would Alan need? Lots of boiling water, to sterilize instruments, gloves, she remembered, and sent Bower to the kitchen to fill every pan that stood heating. Fresh, clean sheets, a table near the bed.

Emily glanced around. The light from the solitary window was far from adequate, and the single bulb, hanging from the ceiling failed to dispel much of the gloom. Suddenly Emily knew what she should do.

"We'll take your wife to the hospital, immediately," she called to Bower. She placed her own fur coat around the girl's shoulders.

"My baby's things, in a box, in that drawer," Mrs. Bower said, indicating the dresser. Emily found them, all neatly ironed and rolled, a box full of tiny white garments. How many meals did they do without to buy these? she thought.

Accepting Emily's order without question, Bower hurriedly wrapped his wife in a blanket, lifted her from the bed and carried her to the car. Emily followed.

Not too fast—not too slow, she remembered as she turned the car around, headed back toward the hospital. "Oh God, make Alan be there," she said as she got there in time," she prayed.

It seemed like it would take hours to reach the hospital. Emily drove as fast as she dared, trying to hurry, yet trying to avoid all unnecessary jerks and bumps. Angela sat, tight in her husband's arms, biting her lips to keep from crying out.

An attendant met them at the ambulance entrance.

"Obstetrical case. Dr. Warren or Dr. Farrell. Mrs. William Bower," Emily said tersely. The attendant lifted the girl from the car, carried her inside and on to a waiting elevator. Bower followed. Emily parked her car, then hurried up the stairs to the office.

"Is Dr. Warren here?" she asked the girl on duty there. "Were you able to find him? If you can't get Dr. Warren, Dr. Farrell will be all right. I'm Mrs. Warren," she added.

"We are unable to locate either Dr. Warren or Dr. Farrell, just now," the girl replied. "We'll keep trying. Did you wish Mrs. Warren? Right in the next room, please."

"Thanks. You'd better have some one examine Mrs. Bower. I just brought her in. She may need a doctor right away."

Emily paced the floor of the waiting room. She could not sit still. If anything should happen to Mrs. Bower's baby. Emily knew she would always feel that it had been her fault. If she had never had any such crazy notion of doctoring Alan, he would have been at home when Bower came for him. Oh, why can't they find him?

"We've located Dr. Warren and Dr. Farrell," the office girl said from the doorway. "They are on their way here now."

It seemed like hours, but it was only a few minutes later when she heard the big door open, and then the sound of Alan's feet on the steps. She would recognize that footstep anywhere, day or night. And Farrell's soft, low whistle as he mounted the first steps to the obstetrical ward. Alan paused at the desk.

"Mrs. Bower is in, Doctor," she heard the girl say. "And Mrs. Warren is in the waiting room."

"Mrs. Warren?" Alan asked sharply.

"Yes, we have all the door, looking at her, incredulously.

"Emily, what are you doing here?"

"I brought Mrs. Bower. Her husband came for you. I went with him. I thought she had better be here.

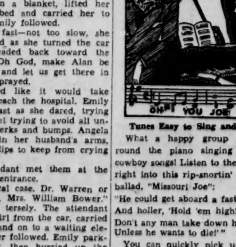

"Emily!" Admiration echoed in the word.

Have a Gay Song-Fest With Western Ditties

Tunes Easy to Sing and Play

What a happy group gathered round the piano singing popular cowboy songs! Listen to them swing right into this rip-snortin' two-gun ballad, "Missouri Joe":

"He could get aboard a fast express
And holler, 'Hold 'em high!
Don't any man slam down his hands
Unless he wants to die!"

You can quickly pick up words and tunes when a songbook is handy —join in gaily on such romantic ditties as, "The Border Affair"; learned Spanish from a girl Who lived down Sonora way, Sparkling eyes as black as jet, Hair as fine as softest spray."

Or you may prefer a good old-fashioned song to bring folks together! A real heart-warmer is "When the Ozarks Kiss the Sky"; "Let me live, let me die in Arkansas,
Where the Ozarks kiss the sky . . .
Where the neighbors help each other,
Where friends never pass you by."

Give the crowd a treat they'll clamor for again and again—an evening of their favorite cowboy songs. Our songbook has 19 hits, right in the spirit of the old frontier days. Complete with words, music, piano accompaniments.

Send 15 cents in coins for your copy of "Popular Cowboy Songs" to The Edmonton Bulletin, Home Service, Edmonton, Alberta. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

New People, Not New Parties

By Nellie McClung

(Copyright Reserved)

I MET the throng coming out of a meeting in the Chateau Laurier just now, a serious-faced company of women, alert, intelligent, and puzzled. I overheard their comments, as they passed me.

"It was a wonderful speech," one woman said, "but it left us dangling —we know there is something wrong—everyone knows that—but how are we to begin to set it right? He did not tell us one practical thing—I want to do something!" I know the sort of speech they had been listening to. Eloquent, and obvious. Full of beautiful phrases, but nothing on which anyone could bite. The sort of speech that Anatole France described as "filled with a foamy eloquence, which glides but does not penetrate."

STERILE ELOQUENCE

In contrast to this type of sterile eloquence, I recalled what a woman in Virden said to me, when I was there last week. We were speaking of the Youth Training School, which is being held there, and the many ways the people of Virden have helped the 37 students from the country round about. Many have opened their homes and given meals. The woman to whom I was speaking said, "I had no room that I could give, but on Saturday I wash and iron shirts for two of the boys. I am doing something which is real."

Seeing how the town of Virden and other places are contributing to the success of the schools encourages the belief that there is one great resource in Canada that has been scarcely touched.

The Youth Training Schools have been going on since 1937 across Canada—very quietly, but efficiently. About fifty-five thousand young unemployed have gone through them, and been taught various trades and crafts, in addition to the general English subjects. The object of the school is to prepare young people for positions. About 22 per cent of all the students have found employment, as a direct result of their training.

RESULTS VALUABLE

This is a good start. Some of the incidental results are even more valuable. In many of the places where schools were set up the people have shown a fine spirit of co-operation. No boy or girl was denied the training for lack of funds. Virden is a good example. I would know that Virden would rise up and be generous. One look at this beautiful little town with its tree-shaded streets, and lovely gardens reveals the character of its people. Even then in winter, it had a homelike welcoming look. The houses are not crowded together.

More homes were offered in Virden than were needed, and the school became a real community project. These schools are set up by the Dominion and provincial governments who share the expense. Two directors are supplied by the provincial government. In addition to the regular instruction, given by two men who are graduates of the University of Manitoba, the people of Virden have done something for the young students. A bank manager has given them a course in finance. One of the ministers has given lessons in public speaking. Expert machinists have demonstrated farm machinery and shown how repairs can be made with ordinary tools.

BUTTERMAKING

Lessons in buttermaking have been given at the creamery. The flourmill has shown how wheat is ground into flour. In addition to all these practical aids to farming, the cultural side of life has not been forgotten for lessons in English, history, social usage and business correspondence have been given.

One student summed it up: "We've learned a lot," he said. "Not only about farming, but about living. I see the farm in a new way. It is more than just a place to work; it is a place to live. A farmer can be a nation-builder. I've just been someone's hired man since I was able to hold a plow. Now I want a farm of my own."

The Youth Training Schools were begun primarily as a remedy for unemployment, and they are succeeding, but there is a by-product which surprises even the directors. It is the spontaneous reaction of the people, their generous help and co-operation which has opened a door. This is the natural resource, which has not yet been mined!

SMOULDERING DISCONTENT

Now an ordinary Work Camp, where unemployed men live and work, is not a cheerful place, even though they are comfortably housed and well-fed. The unemployed, even under these conditions, feel themselves men set apart from their fellow men. Between them and the normal life of men there is a gulf fixed. Who can wonder that in their hearts are the smouldering embers of discontent and rebellion?

I thought of this when I spoke to one hundred men in a camp on Vancouver Island last February. As camps go it is one of the best, and the men are fine specimens of Canadian youth. But there was a sadness in their faces. They told me in a week they would be out of camp looking for work again, while another hundred would come in, and go on with the road they have been building. Again they will be ringing door-bells! They will have a little money, but no plan, no security!

PATHETICALLY BRAVE

They are pathetically brave, but I could see the specter of fear in their eyes. One man, a young Swiss, can speak seven languages. "I still have hopes," he said, with a wan smile, "of being an interpreter. In the meantime, I have been grateful for this shelter." The ideal camp would be a place where work, play and instruction could be combined and where other people besides the unemployed would come. There are roads to be built in Canada. One often wonders, after driving over the wide American highways, well made and well kept, why so many American motorists come to us. Our roads are poor in comparison. We need a great program of road building. Better roads will mean more tourists, and increased tourist travel brings money as well as other advantages.

The highways could be made beautiful with trees and flowers. I heard a fellow-traveller tell about the highways in New Hampshire where the CCC have made the boulevards so beautiful, the drivers slow down to drink in the trees and color. We could make our mountain roads as lovely as the roads in Switzerland, where thrift and tidiness delight the eye. Every building painted, every little corner growing flowers, not a weed, not a sign of neglect.

WOOD IS WEALTH

I think of the waste wood, which litters our roadsides in the mountains, rotting uselessly. Tons and tons of fuel! I think of the prairies where wood is wealth, where men draw it from long distances. Could not this wood be gathered, cut and shipped to places where fuel is needed? Surely there is work for human hands here! Then some of the ambitious towns and cities could employ men to lay out parks and gardens. Wood lots could be planted with seedlings, as a certain mayor of San Francisco once gave work to his unemployed and now these trees are a national asset. We could find work projects, if we seriously set ourselves to the problem.

The remaining hours of the day at the camps could be given to play and instruction when the young people would recognize what the lean years have robbed them of—their love of fun, their humaness, their creative imagination.

LEARN TO WORK

Such a camp might be a place where young men could go for a holiday. People often complain to me that they would like their boys to work in the summer. They say there are no chores to do in these electrically equipped houses. No ashes to carry out, no wood-box to fill, and their boys are soft-muscled and indolent. They wish there was some place where they could learn to work, and feel the dignity and joy of labor. They speak of Hitler and how he has mobilized German youth by setting them to hiking, marching and mountain climbing all for the Fatherland!

Are we less patriotic? We, who have so much to live and work for?

We have made a start. Now all we need is more people, who have the vision of a new Canada. People who know unemployment is not a problem, but a sin, a sin of selfishness. We let it develop, because we were selfish. We can cure it by being unselfish. We do not need new parties in Canada. We need new people, which is to say new hearts! and a new willingness to serve, just where we are.

Strike Tax Rate

SASKATOON, April 8.—Saskatoon's 1939 tax rate will be 46.45 mills, an increase of 1.05 mills over last year's rate, according to figures tentatively approved by city council. The increase represents the approximate amount of the deficit inherited from the 1938 council.

Careful Planning Keeps Garden Costs Down

Here's how a backyard looked after the owner had spent $60 in a three-year period.

By DONALD GRAY
Bulletin Landscape Consultant
Second of a Series

HOW to plan a garden that will cost little but will give satisfaction and pleasing results:

The picture here was taken of a back yard. The space of ground is 60 feet deep and 30 feet wide.

When the owner began he knew nothing about growing plants or what effect he wanted. He had only a few dollars to spend but here is how he went about planning his garden.

He asked himself what he wanted to make this area. He had small children so he wanted some place where he could play and he had to have some place where his wife could hang clothes. This decided the fact that the centre of the plot ought to be clear of shrubs, trees, or flower beds so this area became a lawn. His requirements directed him in good design.

He wanted a wall around his outdoor room and he wanted to screen out his own and his neighbor's garage. For this reason he planned a row of shrubs in the rear and sides and vines for the garage. He wanted shrubs and small trees that had good foliage in the summer, ones that flowered at different times of the year, and ones that had berries for the winter and would furnish food for birds. (His best insect eradicator in the summer.)

Instead of planting evergreens that cost one to five dollars apiece he bought good varieties of small trees and shrubs at 30 cents apiece. It didn't take many plants to give him a wall of green so he could afford to buy good varieties in small sizes.

He wanted to grow a few perennials, some annual flowers, and have a small pool for a water lily and some fish.

So he bought seeds of perennials at 15 cents a package and grew his own plants that would have cost him that much for each plant. With little expenditure he bought annual flower seeds at a dime a package and sowed them in the open ground.

He made the fish pool by buying cement, sand, and gravel, and filling the bottom with the mixed concrete. He filled the pool with water from the garden hose and the fish keep the water fresh.

What did this garden cost in dollars? It's hard to answer exactly because this garden wasn't built in a day or even a year. It has been three years under construction. There was good topsoil to begin with and by adding nature and some commercial fertilizer there is now good growing soil. The total cost of the original shrubs and trees was $25. Grass seed and flower seeds another $10. Incidentals another $25 or a total of about $60 during the three years. He did his own labor. What is the garden worth today? You guess. It might cost a thousand dollars if it had to be duplicated by contract.

Professor of Philosophy, Dalhousie University, and Editor of Dalhousie Review.

IS it for repetition in respect to France of what was done at Munich in respect to Czecho-Slovakia that certain British and French publicists are preparing us? The precendent has its discouraging aspects. What was done at Munich on September 29 last was probably in the circumstances as then existing, necessary lest a worse should befall. But it was a dreadful choice, not to be made again unless the like circumstances—products of indescribable folly—shall have been allowed to recur. And we have yet to be convinced that any such compulsion exists for France.

The Munich agreement has now had six months of sequel, so that observers are better able than they were on that fateful night last fall to foresee what will come of that sort of bargain with that sort of people.

In his long-awaited speech, Mussolini ridiculed those who want to maintain peace in the world; pointed out that Czecho-Slovakia destroyed its overthrow as every state does which encounters a stronger one (Might and only Might being Right, in the eyes of all competent people); and branded as hypocrites those who pretend any other rule of national life than that of taking advantage of everyone weaker than yourself.

It was to be expected of a powerful and proud nation like the French that their spokesman would answer as Premier Daladier answered within three days. If Italy feels that she has a grievance against France, let her specify in precise terms what she thinks it is, and what remedy would satisfy her. The remedy, M. Daladier is careful to add, must not include cession of any French soil or surrender of any French rights.

It is of interest to note that certain demands, lately so loud in the Italian Chamber and louder still in the eloquence of the streets of Milan, do not appear in the Duce's manifesto. Nothing is there about Corsica, about Nice, about Savoy. Obviously when he speaks of the Suez Canal, he cannot mean that he wants complete Italian control over it; so when he mentions Djibouti and Tunisia, in the same sentence, apparently considering the three together, he may well have in mind the internationalizing of the former and joint Franco-Italian Protectorate in the latter. But against anything of the kind the spirit of the French is rising fast. Can we wonder at this, or can we blame any Frenchman for being obstinate about Tunisia and Jibouti, when we remember how a like proposal of appeasement was tried six months back with Italy's axis partner, and how its chief result was to make her stronger in insisting on new and wilder demands?

There is no unfairness in such a way of thinking. If anyone blames a French or a British negotiator for distrusting a Nazi or a Fascist promise, the answer is plain: I distrust them not because I am suspicious, but because the dictators own avowal of contempt for their word has changed initial doubt into definite and constant disbelief.

Perhaps a fight has to come. Of the two possibilities it is better that it should come before rather than after the fortifications of the French and British imperial rule in Africa have gone the way of the mountain frontiers of Abyssinia. But I have not yet given up hope of a pacific accommodation.

HEN LAYS EGGS IN BREAKFAST NOOK DAILY

MONROVIA, Calif., April 8—Other hens might take a few pointers from the one owned by Ivan Martin. This hen, folks, not only lays eggs on schedule, but lays them in the breakfast nook, on a chair. "It's always the same chair," says Martin. "For the last 11 days she has laid the egg promptly at 8:30 a.m."

According To Culbertson

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: Recently you published a letter in your column from a grateful correspondent who told how he had saved the day by making a play that you had written about the week before. This must have been a gratifying experience for a teacher. Here is another side of the picture, which illustrates, if anything, Alexander Pope's couplet:

'A little learning is a dangerous thing;
Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring.'

"All of which is prompted by an adventure in duplicate. North was a woman who had evidently been sipping lightly from said spring. I sat East.

"West, dealer.
"East-West vulnerable.

"The bidding was:
"West: One spade.
"North: Pass. (Here is my chance to use one of those 'trap passes' I've been reading about.)
"East: Pass. (I'm afraid anything I say will be used against me.)
"South: Pass. (Guess we're lucky our opponents didn't get to game. We ought to get a top on this one.)

"But South was wrong. We went down four and got clear top on the board, since every other North-South pair got to game and made it, which, with the game bonus, far submerged our opponents' 400.

"If you should publish this letter, please use only my initials, otherwise North, who has given up trapping, may take up shooting.

"W. R. Buffalo."

North's trapping ambition in this hand was a shade optimistic. As I have frequently pointed out, there are times when a player holds too much to justify the hope that the opponents will go on and hang themselves. North's spade holding alone made it inconceivable that East would be able to raise spades and, as for any other "hold open action" on East's part, North's strength in hearts and diamonds made this almost equally doubtful.

The fact is that for tapping to be successful the trapper must not carry too big a gun. In this case North would have been much better advised to have entered the bidding immediately with a double. Technically, of course, this double would be for a take-out and there would be no chance that South would be able to leave it in. But at least North would have taken the first step toward reaching a game of his own. After such a double South would have the value for a jump to three hearts and, although this might possibly encourage North to the point of trying for a slam, he should avoid that danger by bidding three spades. Then, with South's next bid four clubs, North would see the great "duplication of values" and would be satisfied with a mere four hearts, which, of course, would be a laydown.

But although I disapprove of North's trapping action with this particular power house, I must point out that it should not have been fatal. South should not have dreamed of letting the vulnerable opponents play one spade. Far from feeling that he could save a game by passing, South should have considered that one spade might easily be made, whereas he himself could make two or three hearts or clubs. Moreover, from South's point of view there was a chance that North actually had been "trapping" when he passed and South certainly should have given his partner a little protection by reopening the bidding. South could not quite step his values to the point of doubling (which would have been manna on the desert to North), but her certainly would afford to reopen the bidding with two hearts. In the final analysis, therefore, it was not North's over-emphasis on trapping as South's timidity that led to the horrible North-South result.

Society And Sports' Folk To Be Present At Opening Of Edmonton Spring Show

FEATURED by a spectacular full-dress musical military ride each evening by 24 members of Lord Strathcona Horse, the Edmonton Spring Show will be officially opened on Tuesday by Brigadier G. R. Pearkes, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., Officer Commanding Military District 13, and will continue on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Just 30 years ago, a woman, Dr. Cora E. Hind of Winnipeg, officiated at the opening of the spring show and at that time and since the annual spring show has claimed the eager interest of club and society women in Edmonton.

Tuesday evening will be military night, Wednesday evening Service Clubs night; Thursday evening, Citizens' night, and Friday evening, Gymkhana night.

One of the most interesting features of the show will be the children's beef calf-feeding competition, which will be judged on Tuesday evening with ribbons awarded at a quarter to eight o'clock.

Judging of commercial cattle will feature the opening of the spring show at half-past nine o'clock on Tuesday morning and at a quarter past ten o'clock, breeding classes of horses will be judged. Judging will be carried out throughout the day in the barns and the Arena.

Highlight for Wednesday morning will be the selection at ten o'clock of the best beef animal and on Wednesday afternoon at half-past one o'clock there will be a sale of children's beef calves and commercial cattle.

The public is invited to attend the day-time show free of charge.

MISS KAY McKEE

Stenographer at the Snowflake Laundry and Dry Cleaners, was born in Sedgewick, Alta., but has made her home in Edmonton for the past ten or eleven years.

She received her early education at King Edward Park Public school, and later attended Strathcona High school. Her business training she acquired at the Pitman Business college in Vancouver.

She has occupied her present position for the past three years.

"After-five" recreations of Miss McKee include reading, sports and dancing. Sports of which she is fond are swimming and hiking.

She is fond, too, of travelling.

Religion: Anglican.

Residence: 318 Alberta Block.

Equipment Is Purchased By Hospital Aid

Success of the hospital bridge arranged recently by the Royal Alexandra hospital aid, may be measured in the purchase of 12 wool blankets, 37 bed jackets and 6 baby harnesses, as a result of funds raised at the bridge party. Report of the undertaking was given by Mrs. Victor Horner, convener, at a recent meeting of the aid in the Nurses' Home.

A committee of three, Mrs. C. A. Manus, Mrs. Larue Smith and Mrs. G. Turner, were appointed to look after arrangements for the graduation tea which will follow the exercises in McDougall church on April 28.

It was decided to present a prize of $25 to the nurse obtaining the highest standing in general proficiency.

Formal Frocks Are Simple Or Feminine

LONG, full - skirted shirtwaist dresses for little evenings and feminine, frothy, less casual but still pretty modest gowns for important post-Easter balls are the brightest stars in spring collections of clothes for after seven.

For buffet suppers, dining at home or dining out with a few friends, or formal supper dancing, the floor-length shirtwaister is a veritable uniform.

It comes in all fabrics from sleek silk jersey and tissue thin chiffon wool to lace, and almost invariably has long, rather fullish sleeves, a swirling hemline and a simple V-neckline.

Gowns for truly formal evenings are less nude looking than formerly. Strapless models still are shown, but my bet is that you'll be happier this season in a frothy, ultra-feminine dress with covered shoulders than in one of the strapless types.

Tunics are mentioned again. And one of the nicest is a fluffy, starched chiffon and lace affair which reaches to the knees over a rather slim skirt with side slit.

The slit in one of the few straight and streamlined gowns to be seen is faced with scarlet taffeta—another example of the influence turning-of-the-century modes have on this spring's styles. Suggestions of bustles, taffeta-faced slits, velvet bands, about the throat and the like—all are reminiscent of the days when the music hall reached the height of its popularity.

If you are young and slender, bouffant gowns of lovely sheers, crisp materials like organdy and eyelet batiste or tissue taffeta will be flattering. The prettiest ones have snug bodices with fullness starting at the waistline, and puff sleeves with low decolletages belying the demurely modest effect achieved by the sleeves.

Femininity prevails as it does throughout daytime collections. Fluttering, figure-molding lines,

Grades 5 and 6—First, Marion J. Watson, Mackay Ave. School; second, Mary Romano, North Edmonton School; third, Marion Kulak, North Edmonton School.

Tunics are mentioned again. And one of the nicest is a fluffy, starched chiffon and lace affair which reaches to the knees over a rather slim skirt with side slit.

Club Activities

Plans for a Thanksoffering tea to be held on Tuesday afternoon, April 11, were discussed at a meeting of the Norwood United church W. M. S. recently. Mrs. H. Curtice announced that the Mission Band concert would be held on Friday, April 14.

Mrs. H. Layton gave an outline of the last chapter of the study book and the devotional period was taken by Mrs. B. L. Willis. Mrs. H. Curtice, Mrs. J. R. K. Graham, Mrs. E. Grozinski and Mrs. R. Kingsbury.

soft bands of shirring, ruffles and lingerie straps and trimming are important. Even semi-formal shirtwaisters are feminine and flattering rather than severely tailored as the shirtwaist dresses of a few seasons ago were. Lace is widely used, and so is chiffon—both pretty and fragile and feminine.

Edmonton Pair Are Feted On Silver Wedding Day

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Giles were complimented on the occasion of the silver anniversary of their wedding on Thursday evening when members of Western Rose lodge, I.O.B.A. surprised them at their home at 7840 Jasper avenue.

WED IN CITY

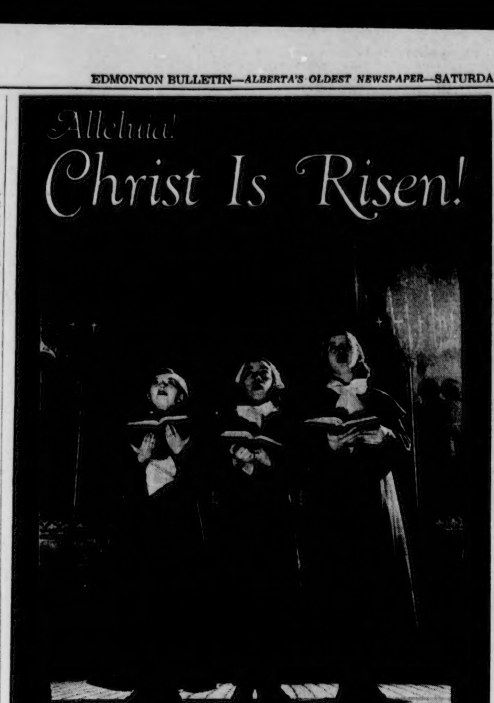

Married in Edmonton a quarter of a century ago, Mr. and Mrs. Giles have resided here since and have won for themselves a warm spot in the hearts of their many friends. Both are well known in club circles and Mrs. Giles has been an active member of Western Rose Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association for many years.

Lovely spring blossoms decorated the reception rooms of Mr. and Mrs. Giles' home for the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Giles were made the recipients of a lovely silver flower basket, presented to them by Mrs. A. Gilfillan on behalf of the gathering.

CARDS ARRANGED

Cards were enjoyed during the evening with honors going to Mrs. A. H. Scollan, Mrs. J. Peterson, Mrs. W. Watson.

Gilfillan, Miss Vera Porter, Miss Edith Murray and Miss Edna Giles.

Something of the beauty and lasting loveliness of the ever-new Easter story must live forever in songs and singing. Since that first Easter morn when to mourners saddened by the death of Our Lord came news of His resurrection and the knowledge that many of His followers had seen Him in the person, people have lifted their voices in songs of joy and thanksgiving at this happy season. Possibly no happier season, save that of Christmas, exists in the Christian church today, for the story has become for Christians a symbol of their belief—of new life coming out of old, of the possibility of new life and work and hope rising from the bleakness of winter and despair. The season of Easter coming at the threshold of a new season of beauty in every natural object, is a particularly happy time for all Christian folk. Soon the rains will come, the winds will blow, and the flowers will deck the earth—and so it is that Easter will always be a season of joy—a season when little children and little children grown big, will lift their songs of praise, as did the children of old, in sweetest Hosannas. "Hosanna! Christ is Risen!"

Mayor Fry to Open Artists' Exhibition

His Worship Mayor John W. Fry will officially open the annual exhibition of the Edmonton Art Club which is to be held in the Corona hotel, commencing on Monday evening. Final arrangements for the exhibition were made at a meeting of the Edmonton Art Club in the Cottage Tea Room on Thursday evening when it was decided to donate a picture to the permanent collection of the Edmonton Museum of Arts, the picture to be selected by public vote from the display in the annual exhibition.

Miss H. Vincent Foster presided at the meeting.

Mr. George Brown was the critic for the evening and Major F. H. Norbury gave a most interesting address on Human Anatomy for drawing and sculpture.

Others present at the meeting were Mrs. C. D. Willis, Mrs. F. W. Lowe, Mrs. P. G. Fleming, Mrs. G. J. Walker, Mrs. S. V. Kaufman, Mrs. A. Card, Mrs. A. Armstrong, the Misses B. Mercier, E. Wright, E. Cruickshank, M. Mercer, M. Hunter, M. Miller, M. MacLeay.

Many Items Make Lodge Meeting An Interesting Affair

Four candidates were initiated into membership in the Women of the Moose Order number 833 at a meeting in the Moose Temple on 102 street.

During the evening Mrs E. Johnson, homemaking chairman, gave an interesting report of homemaking at Mooseheart, where every child is given small tasks to do, training them to take their place in the world. On Saturday evenings a movie or lecture is arranged as entertainment and on Sunday the children go to church. At Mooseheart, there are 17,000 cans of vegetables and 2,000 quarts of jelly preserved each year.

Mrs. F. Feather, Mrs. M. Freeman and Mrs. E. McHardie gave reports at the meeting of recent card parties. Social service report was given by Mrs. J. Groves.

An interesting feature of the meeting was a travelogue by Rev. C. Storey of the Glasgow exhibition and scenes throughout the British Isles.

First Ladies Of Two Lands Choose Blue For Washington Reception In Summer

NEW YORK, April 8.—Without knowing what the other would choose, Queen Elizabeth and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt decided on blue for the gowns they will wear when they meet in Washington in June—and the two shades they chose harmonize. Their attire will symbolize goodwill between the two countries. The soft summer wool that is to make their dresses is being presented to each of them by wool growers of the other's country.

PRESENT

A packet marked for delivery to the Queen at Buckingham Palace, containing the American-woven fabric, gift of more than 500,000 wool-growers of 34 states, was placed aboard the S.S. Queen Mary yesterday.

Mrs. Roosevelt said on seeing the samples: "We were wise without knowing it. The two shades go so well together."

QUEEN'S BLUE

Queen Elizabeth, who prefers pastel shades, chose a pale one to be called "Queen's blue". Mrs. Roosevelt chose azure, a shade similar to that of the dress she is wearing Easter at Hyde Park.

The new blue dresses will be for daytime, the Queen's designed by Hartnell of London, and Mrs. Roosevelt's by Clarepotter, an American designer.

Banquet Ends C.D.L. Annual Convention

"Oh, Canada, we stand on guard for thee . . ." familiar words to every Canadian boy, girl, man and woman, which became the basis of a most timely and interesting speech by Mrs. William Barrington, national president of the Canadian Daughters' League of the Dominion, given at the banquet of the C.D.L. in Edmonton in the Royal George cafe one evening this week, which brought to a close their annual meeting.

SIGNIFICANT MEANING

As Canadian daughters, said the speaker, they have a particular and significant meaning to us. They mean we must support Canada as a whole, faithfully and patriotically, and working for the best interests of the whole.

There are problems—unemployment, old age problem, and others which we must face if we are truly to "stand on guard" for Canada, she concluded.

TOASTS

Toast to the King was proposed by Mrs. J. A. Stinson; to Canada, Mrs. William Barrington; and to the provincial council by Mrs. J. Chesterfield Edmonton. Mrs. W. T. Walker, the new president of the League, who was introduced at the sessions earlier in the week, and who presided at the affair, replied to the toast to the council.

Entertainment was provided by Mrs. J. E. Warren, who sang, and Mrs. Gerald Rice, who gave two very delightful readings.

Present at the banquet were:

Mrs. W. Barrington, Mrs. C. E. Archer, Mrs. W. Walker, Mrs. Rossendale, Cadomin, Alta.; Mrs. H. MacKinnon, Mrs. Sadie Meinyk, Cadomin, Alta.; Mrs. E. Sutherland, Mrs. J. A. Stinson, Mrs. W. Mr. W. R. Evans Is Named Chairman Of Accountants' Body

Mr. W. R. Evans was named chairman of a newly formed organization, the Edmonton Chapter of the Canadian Association of Cost Accountants and Industrial Engineers, at an organization meeting in the Corona hotel recently.

Meetings will be held from time to time, and one is planned for later this month. Dates of the meetings will receive newspaper announcement.

Complete slate of officers for the coming year named at the meeting includes the following: Chairman, Mr. W. R. Evans; vice-chairman, Mr. F. D. Sutcliffe; secretary-treasurer, Mr. Chas. Kohoe; directors, Miss Iva E. Crabbe, Mr. C. A. L. Barford, Mr. J. A. Tupper, Mr. Harold Fiarackerley, Mr. A. G. Reid and Mr. G. W. Andrew.

Recent Bride

MRS. WILLIAM M. BODINSON

who before her marriage in San Francisco on Saturday, April 1, was Miss Geraldine Mae Marks, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Marks of this city. Mrs. Bodinson, who has many friends in nursing and social circles in the city, is a graduate of the school of nursing at the Royal Alexandra Hospital and has for several months been on the nursing staff of St. Luke's Hospital in San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Bodinson will make their home at San Francisco, California.

Lodge Marks Occasion Of Birthday

Tiny candles in orange and scarlet tipped with points of flame, adorned the festive birthday cake members of the Queen of Alberta lodge, L.O.B.A., arranged for their eleventh birthday party one evening just past. The affair held in their lodge rooms was a happy occasion indeed and for the occasion several distinguished visitors were present.

CUT THE CAKE

Mrs. James Dawson, provincial grand mistress of the lodge cut the cake, which was served to the guests with their tea. Daffodils arranged on the table added a note of color to the table at which Mrs. D. Adamson and Mrs. J. L. Syme presided.

Mr. C. Storey was present and took his listeners on a word trip through the Old Country. He had views of the country places he visited to illustrate his talk.

SPEAKERS

Other speakers during the evening were Mrs. Dawson, Mrs. A. Gilfillan, Mrs. M. Mayson and Mrs. J. L. Syme.

HARDISTY—Third annual banquet of the Busy Bees club of Hardisty was a delightful affair recently and following dinner in the Royal cafe members were entertained at cards at the home of Mrs. J. Morrison. Honors went to Mrs. O. Wells and Mrs. J. Morrison.

Local Girl Is Married In California

News of great interest to many personal and family friends in the city is contained in the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred L. Marks of Edmonton, which tells of the recent marriage in San Francisco of their elder daughter, Geraldine Mae Marks, to Mr. William Mansil Bodinson, only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Bodinson of San Francisco, California.

The marriage was solemnized in the southern city on Saturday, April 1.

The bride is a graduate of the school of nursing of the Royal Alexandra hospital, class of '34, and has for the past few months been a member of the nursing staff of St. Luke's hospital in San Francisco.

The bridegroom is associated as technician with the Cutter Laboratories at Berkeley, California. Mr. and Mrs. Bodinson will make their home at San Francisco, California.

Heart-To-Heart Talks ---- By Kathleen Norris

When All Goes Wrong There's Still Happiness

I feel left out and lonely, carrying the business load, paying the bills, merely eating and sleeping at home.

SOMETIMES our lives get into such snarls that all the joy seems to run out of living. Every life is apt to have some such times. Happiness seems to run down like a spring that is weakened and spent; nothing goes right any more. All the plums and pleasures of living go to others; there seems to be no way of pulling things around into the old track of content and self-respect and pleasure.

When this happens to a woman it is usually her own fault. We are all ignorant creatures, milling about in the dark, and that we make expensive mistakes is not surprising. Our parents did the same, and theirs before them, and we inherit the fashion. Through stupidity or weakness or stubbornness or ignorance we involve ourselves in uncomfortable situations, and then discover to our pained surprise that the getting out is much harder than the getting in.

Here is the case of Eleanor, for example. It is one of many.

Eleanor was married eighteen years ago to a spoiled young man who wasted his fortune, idled, gambled, drank. From loving, loving patient, hoping and praying poor Eleanor sank into the state of a despairing scold. By this time she had two small boys.

Eventually she divorced Paul, who by this time had not a penny in the world and no job, and placed her sons with his mother, who had a nice country home. Ten years ago Eleanor married Dan. He was a real estate man, successful, devoted, popular, and for three years they were very happy. Then Dan was injured in an automobile accident, and Eleanor had to be the bread winner. She makes enough in an office to pay a woman to care for Dan and her little girl, Kay. Meanwhile Paul, her first husband, has died, and his old grandmother, who never would speak to him, has died too, leaving Eleanor's grandchildren rich. They live with their grandmother and a married aunt, whom they adore; are both doing well in high school, and to every way are safe and happy, but they live two hundred miles from their mother and see her only at rare intervals.

HER LIFE IS TANGLED

And Eleanor is discontented, tired, nervous, and doesn't know how to get her life straightened out.

"The woman I have caring for Dan and Kay is a kind, capable soul," writes Eleanor, "I pay her forty dollars a month, little enough for what she does! But she values the home and the way we treat her more than money. She starts the baby off for school every morning, cooks, gets the house in order, takes Dan the papers, plays cribbage and dominoes with him, works out puzzles with him; in fact they are very congenial.

"I am at the office from nine until sometimes after five. Often when customers are in town I have to take them about; I am away from home three or four nights in a week. My two hundred dollars a month is often more, for I have an expense account and commissions. But my work is responsible, difficult, and, in a word, I don't like it.

"Last summer I visited my boys in their grandmother's home. It was heaven! Little Kay adored her half-brothers, longed to stay; reminded me over and over again that she was asked to go back this summer. I can't go this summer. Besides the money I make we have a bare $2,000 a year, which must care for a nurse, an invalid, a child, a home and my expenses. I can't let go. But this is sheer drudgery, and everyone concerned seems to be having an easier, happier time than I. Dan has settled down comfortably into invalidism, Zoe spoils him and flatters him; there is no affair here, and no jealousy on my part as far as their friendship goes. She has two married daughters, and is ten years older than Dan. But I do feel left out and lonely, carrying the business load, paying the bills, merely sleeping and eating at home."

This isn't an isolated case, although the circumstances are a little unusual. Many and many a woman suddenly finds herself plodding along in a groove that is partly of her own choosing, largely the result of circumstance. Some are girls in offices, successful enough but wondering wistfully, whether this is all there is to life. Some are housewives, from whose once enthralling daily duties all the glamor seems to have dropped, leaving them bored cogs in a machine.

ALL LIFE CONTAINS JOY

When this happens, whether you are rich or poor, busy or idle, to blame or wholly innocent, the only thing to do is to dig into the inner woman; to plunge deep into your soul and find out what is there, and develop that, and all the rest will fall into line like magic. There is no other way. Some call this prayer, some meditation, some mental healing. You have a claim to happiness and serenity of spirit, and no matter what your circumstances are you can make it. For every life has in it the elements of joy and satisfaction, and in just the ratio that you don't find them you are failing yourself. No one else can rob you of them.

I don't know what would happen if Eleanor began to look within the deep places of her own soul. That is, I don't know what series of events would begin to move her world into a pattern nearer to her heart's desire. But I do know that the discovery of that woman, Eleanor, the study of her, the determination that whoever else failed she would not fail to live up to her highest possible measure of goodness and service, would change all the taste of life for her. Daily duties that are a drag would become a joy. New values would irradiate them. Just brushing her hair in the morning, just breakfast, and chatter with Kay, just letters to and from her boys would fill her with content. She would laugh more. She would give Dan and Zoe new interest in a thousand little things that pass her by unnoticed now.

And who knows? It might be that the boys would be moved to her town to school; it might be that their grandmother would want them to board with her for awhile; it might be that she could cut down her office hours to mornings, or to three days a week. She would have more time at home. There would be nothing extraordinary in any of these happenings.

MATERIALS FOR MIRACLES

The woman who finds her own soul can expect much more than this. She is dealing in new materials; the material of which miracles are made. And a woman whose radiant content in circumstances that seem humble and unexciting what her secret is, and will invariably answer that in the depths of some long-borne trouble or despair she discovered the power that are in us all, and she will follow this confession with the story of miracles that have followed the change in herself.

Begin at the beginning, with the minutes. Make every one ideal. Polish it like a gem. Live in the perfect woman who is hidden under this nervous scramble of surface cares and troubles, and everything in your whole attitude will shift and alter to follow suit.

A luncheon was given at the Assiniboia hotel in honor of Mrs. O. C. Edwards, provincial vice-president and organizer of the Local Council of Women. Mrs. Edwards who is on her return from Ottawa where she has been in attendance at the meeting of the national executive of the National Council, addressed the ladies on "The Topics of the Day of Interest to Women."—Medicine Hat News.

Professor W. H. Alexander spoke before the meeting of the War Savings committee on Thursday afternoon at the Hudson's Bay Company Palm Room.

The prizes for the best costumes in the riding pageant at the Spring Show last week are to be: Mrs. Thomas English and Mrs. Arthur Murphy, gold brooches made in the form of a horseshoe, with a horse's head in the center, and for the men, Mr. Mason and Mr. W. Howe, a smaller design of the same made into pins.

DOROTHY DIX Says:

DEAR MISS DIX—A young man with his first job, which I got for him, has stolen from his employer in order to buy a car, make presents and show a good time to a girl with whom he became infatuated and who made many demands upon him. This last comes from a fine family. Now the question is this: Shall he tell the car and take what money he can get to his employer and make a clean breast of the whole thing, trusting the employer to use the human side and keep him? Or shall he say nothing and take a chance on it coming out later?

Answer:

A weak boy infatuated with a greedy girl who wants what she wants and doesn't care how she gets it—how often are we called upon to look upon that black picture?

The boy has no excuse except the old Adamite one, "The woman thou gavest me, she did tempt me." But perhaps this is as good an alibi for succeeding as human nature ever conjures up. Only a boy obsessed by his first great passion, ignorant of women can know how much strength it takes to resist kissing lips and clinging arms, and the agonies and threats of what rivals can give.

It is no excuse, of course, for the boy, but since time began men have stolen and murdered to get gewgaws for the women they loved and with a favor they were attempting to buy. And many another lad besides this one has his fiery ordeal of wanting to get a tinted-fur fur coat for his girl and a car to ride around in and take her to night clubs.

He will have to take his chance with his employer, but the odds are that the employer will remember when he was young and girl-crazy and that he will either give him another chance or permit him to resign without making public the reason. And, anyway, I think that he would rather have back the stolen money than revenge.

Easter Sunday Dessert Needs Spring Coloring

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Easter dessert should be as gay as a daffodil. Make it yellow, if possible, and add a flick of natural green, using mint leaves or pistachio nuts.

MINTED PINEAPPLE SHERBET

(Serves 4 to 8)

One cup water, 1 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon gelatin, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon fresh lime juice, 1 teaspoon grated rind from mint leaves, 1 cup crushed canned pineapple, 1 egg white.

Combine sugar and water, stir until sugar is dissolved, then boil 4 minutes. Stand while gelatin softens in a little water. Then add to sugar mixture. Add lemon and lime juice, cut up mint leaves and crushed pineapple. Beat egg white stiff, then fold in. Freeze.

Place an Easter Bunny on top of each serving.

EASTER BUNNIES

(Make 6)

Six slices day old white bread, ¼ inch thick, sweetened condensed milk, shredded cocoanut, broken fine.

From each slice of white bread cut out a bunny with a cookie cutter, or make a pattern of stiff white paper and cut out bunnies with a sharp knife from the bread by the paper pattern. Spread bunnies on all sides with sweetened condensed milk, covering well. Then cover with shredded cocoanut. Brown under low flame. Stand one on each serving of sherbet.

FRESH PINEAPPLE CAKE

One small pineapple, 3 tablespoons butter, ½ cup brown sugar, ½ cup water. For cake batter: ¾ cup sugar, 2 eggs, ¾ cut water mixed with ½ cup strained pineapple juice, 1 cup flour, 1 tablespoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt. Cream, pistachio nuts.

In round straight edged baking dish, heat butter. Then add brown sugar. Stir until sugar has melted in dish. Then cover bottom with as many wafer-thin slices of fresh pineapple as possible. Add boiling water. Cover and cook until water is gone and pineapple transparent. Stand while preparing cake.

Cake. Sift flour, sugar, salt and baking powder. Beat eggs stiff. Stir water and pineapple juice into flour, then add eggs. Add almond extract. Pour over glazed fresh pineapple and bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for about 40 minutes. Turn out, upside down on your best cake plate and serve with very cold, slightly whipped cream in which you have scalloped ½ cup pale green pistachio nuts.

Tomorrow's Menu

LUNCHEON: Cheese soufflé, cole slaw, whole wheat bread, fresh dates stuffed with walnuts, tea, milk.

DINNER: Broiled liver and bacon, creamed potatoes, peas, lettuce and endish salad, fresh pineapple cake, whipped cream with pistachio nuts, coffee, milk.

Vibrations audible to the human ear range from 16 to 30 vibrations per second for the lowest tones, up to 30,000 vibrations per second for the highest pitched notes.

Minute Make-Ups

After you've given the front and sides of your hair a brisk slightly brushing, don't neglect the back. Bend forward till your head hangs as far down as you like. And brush the back vigorously. It's easier on the arms that way. And it reals the muscles at the back of the neck.

Raising A Family

I used to have a little neighbor who came in to visit. He was a "bold" child, so everybody said, and his mother thought so, too.

Jimmy would go through the house and ask for things. If he couldn't have them, I just said "no." If he could have them, then I said "yes."

What I liked about him was that it did not offend him in the least if I said "no" without any apologies or explanations. And he did show appreciation if he got his way.

His eyes were O. R. Barton big and frank. He had a very good opinion of himself and bragged a bit. But he never showed any jealousy of other children. When anyone could do things he could not do, he was filled with admiration.

He had a brother, Mark, who was winsome and lovable. People made a big fuss over Mark and said, "Isn't he the sweetest child—so polite, affectionate and modest, and different from his brother?"

Yes, he was all that. But, being of the introvert type, Mark made a point of getting things by personal attraction. There was nothing wrong with either of the boys. They were merely forged in different molds. Men liked Jimmy, but women found little in him to rave over. The feminine heart takes more easily to the dependent child.

You may have a "bold" child, or at least you may think his cocksureness is that. He won't pay so much attention to the diplomacies, and he won't be as "sweet". He will push ahead without waiting to be asked.

The introvert has his failings, too. He will fatten on praise but, on the contrary, he will be very sensitive to criticism. Furthermore, he may be inclined to jealousy, whether he shows it or not.

TWO CHILD TYPES

Here we have the two types. It seems unfair that one should be preferred above the other. They are what they are.

Of course, there are assertive children who deserve criticism, especially when they overstep the bounds of sportsmanship and decency, but the naturally aggressive child, unspoiled of secret emotions, is direct, honest and usually loyal and affectionate.

The bully type is a product, usually, of short pride, suppression and a feeling of inferiority. And he often resorts to deliberate meanness.

Only those people closely associated with the independent child will be able to tell the difference between the real bully and the purely aggressive type.

Actually the bully is an introvert at bay. It is our duty, if we have a steam-roller in the family, to try to understand him. If he is pure extrovert, we must not dislike him. He will grow gentle with the years.

If he is merely a resentful introvert, slung to a brash defense, we must try to restore his faith and confidence in himself. He, too, will improve with intelligent handling.

Grandma Showed Sense When Using Scents

By ALICIA HART

Grandmother had the right idea about perfume. You didn't catch her pouring on great quantities of it just before she left the house or, worse yet, never bothering about perfumery at all.

No, indeed, Grandmother may not have such fine perfumes as now are available to all and sundry, but the chances are ten to one that there always was a faint, nicely lovely odor of roses or lavende rabout her.

In the first place, grandmother kept tiny muslin bags of rose petals, lavender, or sweet clover, in her linen closet, in the wardrobe where she hung her clothes, in her handkerchief case, in the lingerie drawer of her dresser.

She used glycerine and rose water to keep her hands, and sometimes her face, soft. And, for a finishing touch, she had plain rose water to pat on her temples, the back of her shoulder and wrists.

She used her simple, rose-scented preparations day in and day out. She didn't save them for important parties.

Nowadays, it's even easier to achieve some kind of harmony in the business of being perfectly perfumed. And perfectly perfumed means subtly perfumed, of course.

For instance, instead of having bath oil, bath powder, toilet water and perfume in different odors, you might very well gradually try matching scents.

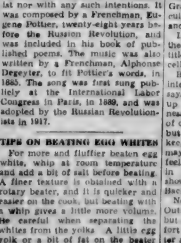

The odor of face powder, lipstick and the average hand lotion doesn't cling for any great length of time, anyway. So, to save confusion, you can forget about these.

Do resolve, however, that when your present bottle of toilet water has been used up, you'll replace it with one which matches or harmonizes with the perfume you expect to use all spring.

Incidentally, when all of your preparations are matching scents, you'll find that less of each item is required per application. The results of following grandmother's example will prove to be economical as well as more charming.

THE RUSSIAN INTERNATIONAL SONG WAS NOT WRITTEN BY A COMMUNIST

The "International" battle song of the Russian revolution, and now the national anthem of Soviet Russia, was not written by a Communist nor with any such intention. It was composed by a Frenchman, Eugene Pottier, twenty-eight years before the Russian Revolution, and was included in his book of published poems. The music was also written by a Frenchman, Alphonse Degeyter, to fit Pottier's words, in 1885. The song was first sung publicly at the International Labor Congress in Paris, in 1889, and was adopted by the Russian Revolutionists in 1917.

TIPS ON BEATING EGG WHITES

For more and fluffier beaten egg white, whip at room temperature and add a bit of salt before beating. A finer texture is obtained with a rotary beater, and it is quikker and easier on the cook, but beating with a whip gives a little more volume. Be careful when separating the whites from the yolks. A little egg yolk or a bit of fat on the beater will prevent them stiffening.

Long-Stemmed American Beauties

— By John Robert Powers —

On dancing feet it was that Barbara Lewis came to my office late one afternoon. A photographer had been her in a lovely ballet at a night club overlooking the Hudson and called me next morning to get her for a picture he had to do with a dancer poised on her toes. I called the club and when Barbara came in I was sure that Jimmy Gray had picked a splendid model—not only for ballet photography but for high-fashion modelling. In his ad she typified grace and lightness. And that is Barbara's outstanding quality in all her work.

In Fall River, Massachusetts, where she was born, she studied at the Dominican Academy and then came to New York where she is still studying dramatics every evening after working all day as a model. Strenuous, you say. Yes, it is. But most of my girls lead strenuous lives—for they are ambitious.

It was during a vacation at ancient Martha's Vineyard several years ago that Barbara was playing tennis in the first tennis shorts seen on that venerable, and conservative island. A house-guest sitting on the porch named Grey had picked a splendid model—not only for ballet photography but for high-fashion modelling. In his ad she typified grace and lightness. And that is Barbara's outstanding quality in all her work.

In Fall River, Massachusetts, where she was born, she studied at the Dominican Academy and then came to New York where she is still studying dramatics every evening after working all day as a model. Strenuous, you say. Yes, it is. But most of my girls lead strenuous lives—for they are ambitious.

It was during a vacation at ancient Martha's Vineyard several years ago that Barbara was playing tennis in the first tennis shorts seen on that venerable, and conservative island. A house-guest sitting on the porch named Grey was playing. Later that day the guest, a famous Broadway producer, was invited to tea at the local boat club. There he met Barbara and offered her a job. A month later Barbara was working for him in a play called Mamba's Beach, and soon afterward in the club on the Hudson where Jimmy Gray saw her. Strange and meritorious was her road to my office and her present fame as a model.

Last month Barbara was named the Posture Girl of the month. A little among so many girls of excellent posture is a great tribute. Barbara's secrets of posture are interesting. To walk properly she says that it is necessary to stand up very straight with no slouchiness at all. A slouch is indicative of carelessness not only in the body but in mind. Further, you must keep the stomach in. Although it may take time to achieve this and feel natural, it is worth the effort for improved posture. Then the shoulders must be carried Up and Back.

Next you must throw the chest Out. This may sound complicated but once you can do it without efforts you will look amazingly better and your clothes will really look like their designer intended they should. Now this next element may seem difficult to acquire but do it and see how much easier the whole position becomes. Push your head forward while doing all the above other motions. Finally keep one foot a bit ahead of the other. Now when you have done all this, begin walking with the feet straight ahead, parallel one to the other. Practice pointed in my office, but straight ahead. You will feel silly doing this at first, but keep at it for ten minutes a day regularly and soon you will do it all the time unconsciously and gracefully.

If you notice the picture, you will see that Barbara has a very narrow face that has been accentuated for width by the proper use of powder on the cheeks. For a New Englander Barbara has unusual taste in food. She is not at all interested in Boston baked beans, but is delighted whenever she can have such delicacies as asparagus, cream soup, crepes suzette and very light white wines. Perhaps, though, it is such delicacies that keep her figure so slender because she did confide to me that French fried potatoes and pies and butter are her mortal enemies professionally. And for the next four years, her career is more important than anything else.

What To Do

Will you please give in your column where to seat the guest of honor at a formal dinner? If it is a wedding party, who has the place of honor and in what order do the others come? Thank you.

A CONSTANT READER.

Answer—A woman guest of honor is seated at the right of the host; the most honored man guest is seated at the right of the hostess. The bride always has the place of honor at a wedding party regardless where she is. She sits at the immediate right hand of the bride and bridegroom are invited to the reception all may sit at one table. The bride's mother sits on the side at the head of the table, with the bridegroom's father at her right and the clergyman who performs the ceremony at her left. The bride's father at the other end of table at the host, with the bridegroom's mother at his right and usually the clergyman's wife or the next important lady guest at his left. At the side of the table the bride sits at the right of the bridegroom, the maid of honor at his left, at her right the best man. The bridesmaids and ushers are placed alternately around the table. When a large number of guests are invited to the reception and refreshments are served buffet only the wedding party sits down at a separate table provided for that purpose. In this case the bride and bridegroom sit at the head, and the maid of honor, best man, bridesmaids and ushers are seated as indicated above.

WINNIPEG BEATS AURORAS BY 49-36

Take 13-Point Lead Into Tonight's Game

LAUNCHING a sudden drive early in the second half that gained them a 10-point margin, Winnipeg St. Andrews took a 49-36 victory from the Edmonton Auroras at the Normal School gym last night in the first of the two-game, total-point series in the western Canada senior men's basketball semi-final.

By virtue of this victory, Winnipeg carries a 13-point lead into the second game tonight. It will get underway at 8:30 p.m. at the Normal School gym. The winner of this series advances to meet the British Columbia champions in the western final.

The first half was a wide open game with the lead fluctuating most of the time between the two clubs. The Winnipeg scoring drive in the first part of the second half piled up a margin however that Edmonton was never able to overcome. At the end of the first half St. Andrews were leading 22-19, the Auroras having staged a rally just before the bell that netted them three field baskets in a row.

CLOSELY MATCHED

There was not very much difference between the two clubs, but what there was gave Winnipeg an edge. The team that Coach Bert Oja sent out on the floor against the Alberta champions appeared to have more experience than the Edmontonians who are a first year club in this class of competition. The Auroras, however, were having a bad night so far as their field shooting was concerned.

Coach Arnold Henderson led the Aurora with 10 points while Shaw was next with eight. Jack Lees was held to five while Tomiek contributed an equal number of points.

CARMICHAEL TOP SNIPER

Carmichael despite the vigilance of the Edmontonians, got away for a total of 12 points to lead the Winnipeg scorers. Smith and Robinson each clicked for eight points, while Tomes contributed nine. Mc-Cance turned in an exceptionally effective game.

Eleven personal fouls were called against the Auroras while 17 were chalked up against the invaders. They were evenly distributed among the players, however, and one was benched for having four personals called on him.

SCORING

Winnipeg: Carmichael 12, McCance 5, Smith 8, Tomes 9, Milton 3, Robinson 8, Flower 2, Timlick 0 Total 49.

Edmonton: Campbell 1, Birch 3, Tomiek 5, Coutts 2, Olienik 0, Lees 5, Melnyk 0, Henderson 10, H. Martell 2, Shaw 8. Total 36.

The Payoffs

MONDAY starts the annual meeting of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association at Winnipeg and as usual, since Dr. Hardy rose to leadership, there will be a number of mighty interesting pieces of fat in the fire.

One item will be the formal ratification, or rejection, of the plan to form a pool of 10 per cent of the interprovincial playoff profits, and divide it among the clubs taking part in the said interprovincial games. The plan is to divide this money in proportion to the number of games played by each team and the distance they travelled. One pool will be operated for the junior division and another for the seniors. The idea was approved by all branches last fall, but must be finally sanctioned by the annual general meeting.

Another interesting item, of which little is likely to be heard just now, is a C.A.H.A. plan whereby professional clubs pay amateur clubs a "development" bonus for each player signed up to a pro contract. For example Dutton would be obliged under this plan to toss a few hundred into the Edmonton Athletic Club kitty if he were to an F.A.C. boy take up to the Amerks.

This arrangement must be negotiated with the N.H.L. at the annual pow-wow between that body and the C.A.H.A., which will come later on this spring. It has a good chance of being adopted, however, since a number of major league clubs now have junior incubator teams and no N.H.L. manager likes to develop a player for his rival's benefit without getting something in return. Limited reserve lists make it impossible for a major league club to carry all the promising material in its farm system. Some has to be left on the open market.

Some International Affairs

ANOTHER piece of important hockey business has to do in a way with our old friends the Amateur Athletic Union boys. At present the international governing body of ice hockey is the Ligue International de Hockey Sur Glace. The headquarters of this body is Belgium where hockey teams are about as plentiful as banana trees in Edmonton. How this organization got centered in Belgium is not very clear to any one.

However, the Hockey Sur Glace outfit has just informed all its affiliated bodies that henceforth the American Hockey Association must be declared an outlaw body and that they must recognize the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States as the proper body of control for U.S. hockey.

It so happens that the American Hockey Association controls all the best U.S. hockey, so the C.A.H.A. is not likely to take kindly to the dictum from Belgium. The British Ice Hockey Association is keenly interested in what Canada decides on this question and has sent its secretary, John Ahearne, to the Winnipeg meeting. There seems a strong likelihood that Canada, the U.S. and Britain will form a new international body of control and forget the boys in Belgium. Since Canada controls the world's supply of players, it holds all the trumps on this deal.

Junior Ball Talk Warms Up

WITH snow finally gone, we hope, baseball talk is warming up around the city. So far the most popular suggestion appears to concentrate all efforts on a strong junior league for a season or two and attempt to develop a new supply of players. It is the logical move at this time and the only type of ball that has a chance of operating this season without going into the financial red. I hear that there is enough material on hand for a six-team junior loop and that a number of sponsors are already interested.

All this proposed league needs, to get real results, is a man like Dick Speer to act as a coach for all clubs. He could early take a couple of teams for drill each night. Dirk will produce real class. He can get more out of kids than any baseball coach I ever saw. I believe that this veteran major leaguer could be coaxed back to Edmonton and he'd be a real asset to have around.

The Big Time Payoff

THE annual report of the U. S. treasury to the House of Representatives on salaries gives the pay that sport's big timers drew in 1937. Here they are: Mickey Cochrane, $36,000 plus $9,000 bonus; Lou Gehrig, $36,000. Carl Hubbell, $22,500; Hank Greenberg, $25,000; James J. Braddock, $51,953. Bill Terry, $30,000; Joe McCarthy, $27,500. Branch Rickey, $4,2340; Sam Breadon, $25,000; Connie Mack, $20,000.

KING'S PLATE DRAWS TOTAL 53 NOMINEES

100,000 Expected to View This Year's Running of Famous Stake

TORONTO, April 8.—Headed by the winter-book favorite, Archworth, 53 horses, cream of Ontario-foaled three-year-olds, were nominated Friday for the 60th running of the King's Plate at Woodbine Park here May 22.

The King and Queen will witness the event from the members' enclosure. Preparations are being made by the Ontario jockey club to handle about 100,000 persons, compared to the previous top of about 50,000.

ABOUT 15 STARTERS

A field of about 15 or 16 is expected to start in the mile-and-a-furlong race, open to Ontario-foaled three-year-olds which have never won a race other than those for juveniles. Owner of the winning horse will be presented with 50 guineas, donated by the King, a gold cup and the major portion of a $10,000 added purse. The King will make the presentation in the winner's paddock.

Seeking to retain the honors he won last year, Willie Morrissey of Toronto nominated Gas House to carry his colors. Bunty Lawles romped to victory last year.

The consensus among turfmen, however, favors Archworth, a chestnut colt owned by C. George McCullagh, Toronto newspaper publisher. Archworth started nine times last year and finished out of the money on only one occasion. Earnings amounted to about $7,500

HAS SIX NOMINEES

The powerful Parkwood stable of Oshawa, owned by R. S. McLaughlin, named three fillies and three geldings from which to select starters. They are: Colonel Bud, Donedna, Gallaikins, Pete's Lady, Rioting and Skyrunner.

The famed black and yellow colors of the Seagram stable, now managed by J. E. Prowde Seagram of Waterloo, Ont., will be carried by Young Man, Gold Fawn or Saragossa.

EMPIRE GAMES TO MONTREAL

Subject to complying with requirements, Montreal has been awarded the 1942 British Empire games, it was announced last night by John Leslie, secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada.

"The Amateur Athletic Union of Canada by a majority of the executive committee has awarded the venue of the 1942 British Empire games to Montreal, to be held in connection with its tercentenary celebrations," Mr. Leslie announced.

Opportunity Kid

No. 1 hero thus far in this year's battling for the Stanley Cup in the N.H.L. playoffs has been Mel Hill, completing his first year with the Bruins, shown here with Manager Art Ross, for whom he came through with three winning overtime goals in the Bruins' games with Rangers, to account for three of his team's four victories.

Spotlighting the Sport Girl

Since the Edmonton Rustlers quit playing hockey, we have the usual perennial Preston Rivulettes playing Charlottetown in the Maritimes over the weekend for the final dominion title. Of the recent semi-finals between Preston and Winnipeg, Alex Abbush writes: "If all the Preston hockey teams played the brand of hockey these two teams offered for entertainment there wouldn't be any dearth of spectators when the girls don skates and pads."

Montreal Olympic basketball team was defeated last Saturday in two games by the Rochester, N.Y. Flierets, 85 to 61 total score. The Olympics are Quebec senior champions while the Flierets, we understand, are scheduled for Edmonton this coming fall.

Miss Florence Walden, Columbus, Ohio, newspaper woman, took a new position this week with the American Basketball League. Her duties are to teach the members of our sex the fine points of the game and, incidentally, try to increase feminine attendance at games and present the many questions which the male fan hates to answer when focussing his own attention on the game itself.

Commentator Fitzgerald, of the Telegram, estimates that there are 5,000 badminton players in Toronto. The Canadian open championships, amateurs and professionals, in which Mrs. Watson, recently returned with England honors, appeared, drew an attendance of less than 400 in the final games. An amateur (?) hockey game drew 12,014 same date.

There seems to be some dissatisfaction existing over the eligibility rules of the basketball tournament held in connection with fair in Edmonton, as to entry of provincial winning teams. Several girls of various teams have told us that their teams would enter if some of the strong city teams were not allowed to enter as a unit, but, instead, split up their players and enter under other names. For instance, plainly writing, school teams are to the eligibility of Greatettes, who tried for but lost this year's provincial title. Will those players be allowed to enter? The query seems to be a fair one from their standpoint at least.

Stella Walsh and her Cleveland basketball girls, who last week defeated the Toronto Ladies' team 31-27 after a hurried auto trip, are asking Toronto track and field girls for a combined track meet this summer and have promised a good sized entry list from across the line if Toronto will stage the meet. Toronto officials are considering.

Incidentally, we wonder if our local as well as out-of-town athletes are keeping in mind and preparing for the track meet in conjunction with the Highland Games on May 24 at Clarke stadium.

Dr. Naismith, inventor of basketball, was a guest at a well attended dinner of girl basketeers in Tortonio, and has expressed some criticism of the new technical changes in basketball rules. Incidentally, we noted an item which stated women's ball was invented three years after basketball by William C. Morgan, who considered basketball was too strenuous a game for middle-aged men.

LOCAL CLUB HEADS EAST TO TORONTO

E.A.C. Party Leave Winnipeg for Final Series With Oshawa

WINNIPEG, April 8.—Powerful Edmonton Athletic Club, the west's junior hockey champions, headed eastward last night for the dominion final—the Memorial cup series—opening Monday night in Toronto.

From out of the west they battled through to beat Manitoba's Brandon Elks and now are prepared for a fast series with Oshawa Generals, winners of the eastern championship.

GROVE CONFIDENT

Coach "Lefty" Grove wasn't making any wide-open predictions as the eastern journey started last night. He was confident, however, his boys would keep the Memorial cup in the west.

And, he was sure the Roamers presented a stronger threat to the east than the 1938 Memorial cup winners, the St. Boniface Seals.

Billy Taylor, the Oshawa Generals' flashy centre, was considered "a real threat" as the Roamers got ready for the Toronto visit. He held the centre of conversation coupled with the happy thought that George Agar, their centre ace, will be back in the lineup Monday.

MORRISON GOES ALONG

E.A.C. are at full strength, 19 players making the trip east.

Various team was accompanied by Ike Morrison of Ardill. Sask., who will be the western official in the Toronto final.

MANY FORMER HOCKEY CHIEFS ATTEND EVENT

Silver Jubilee Banquet of Canadian Association At 'Peg Monday

WINNIPEG, April 8.—Eleven of the 13 former presidents of the Canadian Amateur Hockey association will be guests of honor Monday night at the silver jubilee banquet, premier event of the association's 25th annual meeting.

W. R. Granger, Montreal sportsman who held the presidency in 1921-22, is dead. Only other absentee past president will be F. E. Betts, of Saskatoon, unable to attend because of illness. He was president in 1919-20.

SIX OF ORIGINALS

Included among the guests will be six of that small group of farsighted men who attended the C.A.H.A. organization meeting at Ottawa in 1914. One is D. W. F. Nicholls of Windsor, Ont., who drew up the bylaws and constitution which still stand, with additions and amendments, as the basis of C.A.H.A. operation.

Others of the original delegates expected to attend are Dr. W. F. Taylor of Winnipeg, the first president; William Northey of Montreal, one of the original Allan Cup trustees; Claude Robinson of Winnipeg; F. H. Marples of Toronto, C.A.H.A. secretary, and Leo Dandurand of Montreal.

FOUR LIFE MEMBERS

The four life members will be present—Northey, Robinson, W. A. Fry of Dunnville, Ont., president in 1928-30, and Capt. C. T. Sutherland, Kingston, Ont., president in 1918-19.

Other former presidents attending and their years are: H. J. Sterling, Victoria, 1920-21; W. R. (Toby) Sexsmith, Portage la Prairie, Man., 1922-23; S. P. Quilty, Ottawa, 1923-26; Dr. F. E. Sanderock, Dunmellar, Alta., 1926-28; J. W. Hamilton, Regina, 1930-32; Frank E. Greenlead, Montreal, 1932-34; E. A. Gilroy, Portage la Prairie, 1934-36; and Cecil Duncan, Ottawa, 1936-38.

No business will be transacted Monday, first day of the annual meeting, but the 42 officers and delegates from all parts of Canada will get down to business Tuesday. Monday afternoon will be the presidents' reception with Dr. W. G. Hardy of Edmonton receiving.

GIRLS DECIDE FOR SOFTBALL THIS SEASON

Edmonton girls will stick to softball as a major diamond sport this season and not undertake baseball it was decided at a well attended meeting of girl players in the Civic block on Thursday night.

The meeting was called for the purpose of discussing the adoption of baseball this year in preference to softball. Claire Hollingsworth, along with Eddie and Harold Oldring, made an appeal to the girls to stick to softball, pointing out that few teams in the country played anything but softball and that trips to other points would accordingly be cut if baseball were adopted.

Chairman A. R. Lawrence asked that the softball enthusiasts retire from the meeting and an open discussion then took place on the two alternatives. It was finally decided not to organize a baseball league this season in order to avoid possible bad feelings and difficulties. The girls were all asked to co-operate with the softball league which is expected to be organized later on.

It is possible, however, that several baseball teams may be organized for the pleasure of the game although they will not operate as a league.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

DALLAS—Al Bernard, 156, Houston, Texas, and New York, knocked out Maxie Long, 157, Dallas (3).

Captain of U.S. Davis Cup Team Seeking Recruits

NEW YORK, April 8. — Walter Pate, the little man who brainwaved the Davis Cup back to the United States two years ago, has issued a clarion call for volunteers to lend a hand in retaining the silver trophy.

Pate is captain of the Davis Cup team; his task, in 1937 and 1938, just a breeze, is something else again this year.

In other days Don Budge would shuffle out on the court and blow down all opposition. Budge now is a professional.

Pate has no star pupil on hand to rattle around in Budge's brogans as the nation's first singles player. Nor has he a doubles combination comparable to Budge and Gene Mako. The list of possibilities runs something like this:

1, Bryan Grant; 2, Wayne Sabin; 3, Gene Mako; 4, Elwood Cooke; 5, Sidney B. Wood Jr.; 6, Bitsy Grant.

Riggs and Kovs are the best bets for the singles posts and Pate is toying with the idea of teaming Wood with Mako as a doubles companion.

Further Suspension Players Asked

TORONTO, April 8—Further suspension of the eight Ontario lacrosse players who defied the Ontario lacrosse association to go to California to play, will be asked by the provincial body, it was decided at the annual meeting Friday. Suspension of four games to Bill Curran, leader of the group, and two games to the others is planned by the Canadian Lacrosse association.

Texas produces from one-fourth to one-half of the pecan crop of the United States.

Vancouver Star Entered In Meet

TORONTO, April 8.—Bill Pedlar of Vancouver, Canadian and Ontario junior champion, is competing with many of Canada's top-ranking players and several United States stars in the Ontario invitation tennis championships opening here today.

Dominion Douglas Lead In Series

MONTREAL, April 8.—Dominion Douglas of Montreal staged a last-quarter rally to defeat Saint John's senior Y.M.C.A. 45-35 in the first of the eastern semi-final basketball two-game total-point series. The second game will be played here tonight.

Dunlop Tennis Tourney

TOKYO, April 8.—Jiro Yamagishi, national singles and doubles champion and Japan's outstanding Davis Cup star is retiring from competitive tennis to take a job in the navy department. The 26-year-old court ace, who graduates from Keio university this spring, has taken the examination for the post of naval paymaster.

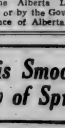

His retirement will leave Japan with only one experienced player, Furuitaru Nakano, available for the 1939 squad, which will meet the Canada-Cuba winner in the second round of the North American zone.

Pusie Lonesome, Heading For Home

ST. LOUIS, April 8.—Jean Baptiste Pusie, St. Louis Flyers star defenceman turned wrestler, decided suddenly to abandon his mat campaign and return to his home at Chambly Basin, Que.

The fiery French-Canadian, who pinned Joe Steeper of Boston in his wrestling debut Wednesday night, told friends he was lonesome and was going home to rest up for the next hockey season.

OSHAWA GENERALS CAPTURE EAST JUNIOR CROWN

O'Dowdy-Thomas Go Features Mat Card

WRESTLING promoter Mike Cutcher followed up last week's successful effort with another highly-entertaining card at the Memorial Hall last night.

The evening's jousting had everything necessary to satisfy the gallery critics and sent the capacity crowd home talking to its collective self. From the prelim to the main event, there was action aplenty.

The semi-windup between Soldier Thomas and the Portland Irisher, Patrick O'Dowdy, stole the show. The Soldier, making his first appearance here since last fall, took the decision after Patrick had been disqualified for ungentlemanly tactics at the 38-minute mark and the balance of time failed to produce an equalizing fall for the Irishman.

IN AND OUT OF RING

The bout opened in speedy fashion with Thomas pretty much in command. A series of punishing holds failed to make any impression on the durable O'Dowdy, who, after 15 minutes, retaliated by tossing the Soldier into the laps of some unfortunate ringsiders. The balance of the uproarious bout was fought both in and out of the ring and Thomas was awarded the first fall when O'Dowdy lossed both him and Referee Magirl out into no man's land.

After the interval, O'Dowdy tried his famous loose foot work to floor him for a count of nine before knocking MacRae through the ropes to finish the scrap. MacRae weighed 141 lbs.

The Calgary boxer backpedalled from a Thomson rush, slipped, fell, and his head collided hard against the floor just outside the ring ropes. MacRae struggled to his feet on the count of nine, backed from Thomson's swinging fists to the ropes on the other side of the ring where he was easy prey for blows that lifted him through the ropes onto the floor head first.

WAS REALLY 'OUT'

It took several minutes to revive the clever scientific Mackie, who earlier eluded the Black Diamond fighter's heavy blows. The winner's face was a mass of blood as he went to the corner in the 11th, result of MacRae's consistent left hook.

MacRae won the third, fourth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh of the three-minute sessions. Two were even. Thomson held an edge in the fifth.

Although ringside customers claimed Thomson had pushed MacRae to bring the 12th round fall, Referee "Kid" Lucas stated Thomson had connected with a blow at time.

Preliminary bouts resulted in two knockouts and a technical knockout.

Leo Janiten, 157, of Edmonton kayoed Billy Dempsey, 156, of Moose Jaw, in the fourth of a six-round affair. Janiten scored knockdowns in the first and third, for counts of six and nine, respectively.

Johnny Lofton, 160, Sask., finished Harvey (Flash) Bailey, of Edmonton, in the sixth of an eight-round affair. Bailey, at 132, seven and a half pounds lighter than the victor, went down for counts of six and nine before the end.

Young Joe Louis of Fargo, N.D. 155, scored a technical K.O. over Bobby Murdoch of Turner Valley, 156, in the third of a scheduled four-round bout.

GORD THOMSON REGAINS TITLE VIA KNOCK-OUT

CALGARY, April 8.—Gordon Thomson, the fighting cowboy from Black Diamond regained his welterweight western Canada championship last night by scoring an unusual knockout over Billy MacRae, in the 12th of their 15-round bout.

Thomson, 138-lb. western Canada middleweight titlist, after absorbing terrific punishment in seven of the first 11 rounds, caught MacRae in a seconds loose foot work to floor him for a count of nine before knocking MacRae through the ropes to finish the scrap. MacRae weighed 141 lbs.

The Calgary boxer backpedalled from a Thomson rush, slipped, fell, and his head collided hard against the floor just outside the ring ropes. MacRae struggled to his feet on the count of nine, backed from Thomson's swinging fists to the ropes on the other side of the ring where he was easy prey for blows that lifted him through the ropes onto the floor head first.

MAPLE LEAFS HOPE TO TAKE THIRD BATTLE

Scoff at Claim of Boston Manager His Team is "Best in 37 Years"

BOSTON, April 8.—Beaten in the Stanley cup opener, Toronto Maple Leafs scoffed all the same Friday at Manager Art Ross' oft-repeated declaration that the present-day Boston Bruins are "the greatest team I have seen in my 37 years of hockey."

The Leafs vowed they could catch up here Sunday night in the second game of the best of seven round for the world title if they could keep from making the mistakes they made as the series began Thursday night. The Bruins took the game 2-1 but didn't look like world-beaters in doing it.

"If that is the greatest team in 37 years, I'd hate to see the worst," said Manager Conny Smythe.

"BRUINS WEREN'T HOT"

"The first game would have been a nice one to snatch," declared Coach Dide Irvin. "The Bruins certainly weren't hot."

At the Bruins' down-town offices, Ross was telling newspapermen some of his reasons for placing great faith in his team when the interview was tailed off by a flare-up on the part of the club owner's young Weston Adams. The president told the writers to "get out, because we're tired of this sort of thing." Ross smoothed over the situation.

One reporter had mentioned that the Boston team of 1929-30, which lost only five games during the National League schedule, had to be considered in all time ratings.

NO WEAK CLUBS NOW

"Yes, but you must remember some of the opposition, like the old Pittsburgh team, wasn't very hot then," Ross replied. "There isn't a weak club in the league today."

"Here, if you want something to do, read these," shot Adams to the reporters. "These are our letters of complaint."

"There's one swell one here from a fan in the suburbs," said Ross, "it tells in detail how all the games of the Rangers series were fixed."

That was the sort of thing that inclined him to the belief he would need a rest-cure when the series was over.

Both teams blamed soft ice and wet atmospheric conditions for the game's lack of lustre.

NOT DOWN-HEARTED

If the Bruins leaders were weary after the victory, Smythe and Irvin were just about the opposite in defeat. Smythe, smiling, said he was determined not to be swayed by the officiating of Referee Mickey Ion, while Irvin said the string of bad breaks were bad disorganized his forward lines.

"I'd like to have two men like Cooney Weiland and Gordon Drillinger of the Bruins just to kill off penalties," Irvin said.

Nick Metz of the Leafs needed three more stitches to close entirely the wound he suffered from the tip of Bobby Bauer's stick Thursday night.

Believe It Or Not — — — By Robt. Ripley

"FAREWELL to SPORT" by PAUL GALLICO

SOMEHOW, my most vivid and pleasant memory of horse-racing is not the Kentucky Derby, or the Preakness, or the big stake races at Belmont Park, like the fifty-thousand Futurity, but the main street at Saratoga Springs, the little up-state New York spa just below the foothills of the Adirondack Mountains which for one month of the year—August—becomes a horse town. And just because it is a sleepy, and, except for the massive Victorian wooden hotels like the Grand Union, ordinarily ugly American country town, it takes on a life, a sparkle, and a coursing excitement that is completely fascinating.

I am thinking again, as I write, of that main street with its inevitable knot of standers-around outside the Western Union office, waiting for answers to appeals for more money—fresh scratch, as they call it—the touts and the chiselers and the hangers-on lingering around in front of the hotels; but most of all I remember the shops.

Here you will find transplanted a little piece of Fifth Avenue, New York, or Michigan Boulevard, Chicago. There are shops exhibiting lovely, expensive gowns, perfumes, jewelry, sporting jets d'art, and, above all, open-front stores through which the plate-glass windows have been swung outward and in which stand, half-encroaching on the broad, free-lined sidewalks, so that as you pass on a stroll you have to walk around them, the biggest, handsomest, shiniest motor cars in the world.

—Gallico

FOUR-WHEELED SIREN

There is nothing quite as alluring in a show window, unless it be beautiful furs or fur capes and wraps, as a cream-colored chrome-nickeled car with smooth, Spanish leather upholstery, black and silver dashboard dials and gadgets, wire wheels with crimson spokes, long shapely hood that promises power and smoothness at least, spare tires in cream-enameled, chromium-plated covers, smart trunk in the rear, and gleaming accessories. Heaven help you, now you want it! Nothing seems quite so thoroughly calculated to arouse cupidity and covetousness.

The inference, of course, is obvious. There it stands in the brilliantly lighted window, grinning at you, with the white incandescents gleaming from its lovely skin and beautiful ornaments, suggesting: Go on, make a killing tomorrow and drive me home. One good day at the track, buddy, and I'm yours paid for, to keep for yourself until I fall apart. You come back from the track tomorrow around six o'clock with five thousand dollars on you and you drive the right out of this store and get me in front of your house. I think I'd like you. You and I could be friends.

It might be seductive song to bum and millionaire alike. It recognizes no class distinctions nor any such thing as anyone too poor to buy. The cars along Automobile Row on Broadway are distinctly snobs and await their headlamps from the poorly dressed passer-by who presses his face hungrily against the plate glass of the show window for a moment and yearns for the beautiful luxury within. They know a prospect when they see one.

COME ON—SUCKER!

But at Saratoga everyone is a possible customer, a potential millionaire. The shiny cars talk the language. "What have you got on you, brother, a fin? That's enough. Five bucks buys me tomorrow night—if you guess right tomorrow afternoon. Or never mind the guessing. Just go on out there and be lucky. It may be your day. No work. No trouble. A ten-to-one shot in the first race gives you fifty for your five. Bet it back at eight to one and you've got four C's. Split the four hundred in case of accident and hit a five-to-one shot in the third race, and you've got twelve hundred. Skip the fourth race, which is too tough, but there's something pretty at five to one that ought to be even money running in the fifth. Shoot the grand. If he comes down in front, that's five grand, and I'm yours. Never mind those other races. Remember me. I'm waiting for you back here. Grab a cab and come on back to town. You've got the sugar in your kick. Hand it over, climb into my front seat and feel that cool, smooth leather. Custom-built I am. Listen to me purr. You'll have to strain your ears. I'm that silent. Okay, bother. See you tomorrow night. With the dough!"

It can be done. It has been done. That's what all those lovely, expensive things are there for, to excite cupidity and keep you from returning your money whence it came—the track. Turn your winnings into lovely merchandise, they say, that Paris evening gown, that chinchilla cape, that sapphire bracelet. By sundown you may be able to walk in and buy them. A little of the right information, a little courage, a little luck.

SOCCER MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

There will be a special meeting of the Edmonton Soccer association in the Memorial Hall on Monday night at 8:00 o'clock to arrange details for the opening game on April 15.

All teams in the five divisions of soccer are expected to take part in the big parade of players at Clark Stadium, and should notify Bill Wallis as soon as possible as to the number of players they will have in uniform for the parade.

CALGARY, April 8.—Dr. Frank E. Sandercock of Drumheller, past president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey association, and Miss Nancy Spence of Calgary were married here Friday.

Earn Right to Meet Edmonton Sextet

By DICK SHERIDAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, April 8.—Oshawa Generals reached the Memorial cup finals for the second year in succession when they turned back Verdun Maple Leafs 4-2 in the third and deciding game of the eastern Canada junior hockey championship series last night.

Generals, who lost out to St. Boniface Seals in the cup finals last year, will meet Edmonton Roamers for the historic trophy in a best-of-five series starting here Monday night.

Oshawa, who lost the first game of the series 2-1 in Montreal but came back to take the second game 6-1, were behind but for five minutes last night. Verdun scored in the last second of the first period and held their edge for five minutes of the second.

The classy red machine then tied it up and romped in three more goals before Leafs got their second tally at 15:39 of the third period.

KNOTT TOPS SCORERS

Nick Knott, lanky left winger, took the scoring honors with three goals but Billy Taylor, Generals' classy centre, drew an even higher rating with his brilliant playmaking. Taylor figured in three of the tallies and only the sensational work of Paul Bibeault in the Verdun net stopped him from scoring. Orv Smith got the other Oshawa goal.

Jacques Fillion and Jerry Walker were the Verdun marksmen. Walker and Paul Herbert figured in Fillion's goal while Ramsay and Fillion drew assists on Walker's tally.

GAME'S HIGHLIGHT

Knott's first goal at 14:30 of the second was the game's highlight. Taylor led the rush and passed to Norm McAtee as he crossed the blue line. McAtee held the puck at the boards for a second and then lifted a pass into the goalmouth. Knott, rushing in from way back, reached the crease at the same time as the puck landed and his backhander beat Bibeault cleanly.

Bibeault's work in the net was Verdun's big feature, and he took down the starring honors along with Taylor and Knott.

Captain Frank Eddolls played his usual strong game on the Leafs' defence and the team on the whole looked much stronger than in their previous games.

The paid attendance of 4,340 topped Wednesday's crowd by more than 1,000.

LINEUPS

Verdun: Bibeault; Eddolls, Fleet; Ramsay, Forget, Dupont; Subs: Herbert, Walker, Fillion, Bouchard, Trudeau.

TABLE TENNIS MEET ENTERS FINALS TODAY

Edmonton's annual table tennis championship tourney advanced to the finals of the two major singles events on Friday afternoon and evening, pitting Bollinger against McGillivray for the open singles and June Boyce against Mary Lou Ouellet for the ladies' singles. June Boyce is the provincial ladies' singles champion. Frank Dwyer, provincial men's singles champ, did not compete, owing to a nattack of the 'flu.

Bollinger won through to the final bracket by defeating Cabbiedick and White. McGillivray advanced with a victory over Peter Smith.

In the secondary singles, two juniors, Ken Crockett and Don Aitken, met in one semi-final bracket, while June Boyce has to play the winner of the Jack Strachan-John Taylor match.

Finals and remaining matches will be played this afternoon at the King Edward hotel club rooms of the Edmonton Table Tennis association.

Nudist Couple Will Wed Atop Mountain On Easter Morning

United Press
Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

DENVER, Colo., April 8—Colorado citizens apparently were a bit skeptical Thursday of the Rev. H. P. Feree's announcement in Vernal, Ut., Neb. that the scheduled Easter morning wedding of a nudist couple on a Colorado mountain peak had been postponed until June.

The press, which several months ago was advised by the Rev. Feree that he would perform the "Adam and Eve" ceremony atop an unannounced peak, merely took stock of his snowshoe equipment, its skis and its cameras and went over again the topographical maps of Colorado.

CAUSED FURORE

Feree's original announcement caused quite a furore among church people and ultimately the state attorney general, Byron Rogers, was called upon to rule on the legality of a wedding ceremony performed with bride and groom sans clothing. Rogers said that so long as the ceremony was "private" the principals and even the preacher could be naked.

On vacation from his Denver pulpit, Feree said in the Nebraska town that the prospective groom, a young Denver nudist, had decided to graduate from high school before taking a bride and that the ceremony would be held sometime in June instead of Easter. He refused to give the names of the principals in the storm, but said their identity was known to scores of Denver nudists.

BRIDE IS 18

The prospective benedict, he said, is 19, the prospective bride, 18, and beautiful.

It was believed here that the announced postponement was a ruse whereby the nudists hoped to comply strictly with the attorney general's ruling and keep the ceremony private.

Parliament's Perfervid Piper, Tom Reid, M.P., Is On The Warpath

By THOMAS WAYLING
Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

OTTAWA, April 8—Scots who has sporran had better look to them. Parliament's perfervid piper, Tom Reid, M.P., is on the warpath. Most of the officers and men in Canada's Scottish Regimenta "dae ne' ken hoo tae wear the sporran", says Mr. Reid.

The only unit he knows which wears its collective sporrans properly is the Seaforth Highland Regiment of Vancouver.

Mr. Reid feels very deeply about the whole affair. In fact he may bring it up on the floor of the Commons as a matter of urgent public importance."

"Whit will the King say when His Majesty comes to Canada and sees that we dae na' ken hoo could put on the sporran properly."

WAVE OF HORROR

Mr. Reid was recently smitten with a wave of horror when at an important function he noticed the Governor-General's military aide, who belongs to a Scottish regiment, wearing his sporran incorrectly.

In fact he wrote to Government House about it and in reply was informed that the aide was very sorry, it had been a mistake.

The proper way to wear a sporran according to Mr. Reid is for the lower tip to be parralel to edge of the kilt and not five or six inches above it as many Scotties wear it.

The Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa have aroused Mr. Reid's ire. Their sporrans are all wrong.

L. W. Smith Heads Golfers Of Trochu For Coming Season

TROCHU.—The annual meeting of the Trochu Golf and Country club was held in the committee room of the Yale hotel with a large turnout of enthusiastic golfers present.

Officers for 1939 were chosen as follows: President, L. W. Smith; vice-president, H. Turner, and secretary-treasurer, L. Waller.

A grounds committee was chosen to consist of W. Weicker, F. Dodd and M. Steinbach. P. T. Rutherford was elected to the tournament committee. J. Renn was again chosen as custodian of the sporty nine-hole golf course.

Local membership in the club is expected to be even larger than in previous years and 20 or 25 members are expected to enrol from Three Hills and others from Huxley and Linden.

No tournament has yet been planned as the opening date will not be set until the membership is settled. Golfers have already been over the course, however, and they report that it is in fine shape.

ANTI-COMINTERN PACT ADHERED TO BY SPAIN

BURGOS, April 8—Spain's Nationalist government last night announced its adherence to the anti-comintern pact of which Germany, Italy, Japan, Hungary and Manchukuo were previous signatories.

A foreign ministry note said that "having definitely conquered on the field of battle the Communism which started the civil war in Spain, the Spanish government, to confirm its defensive attitude before potential dangers, has given its adherence to the anti-comintern pact."

(DNB the official German news agency, said the Burgos foreign minister signed the pact March 27.)

(Germany and Japan were the original signers of the pact, against international Communism. International headquarters in Moscow. They signed Nov. 25, 1936, and Italy followed in November the following year. Hungary and Manchukuo announced their adherence last January.)

City Church Activities

HOPE MISSION DOES GOOD WORK

Hope Mission at 10519 101 street, has just concluded a highly successful year, according to a report released on Saturday. Under the direction of Rev. H. Edwardson, the superintendent, the work has continued with increasing success.

GOSPEL WORK

The anniversary year just ended has indeed been another year of opportunities. The services in the Mission Hall have been well attended.

The fellowship and co-operation of all those who have assisted as groups or individuals has been sincerely appreciated.

We feel assured that these gatherings have been a source of blessing to many, and some discouraged and defeated ones have found Christ as a personal Saviour, and have gone out to again face the problems of life with a new inspiration and hope. The number of meetings held is 307. Quantities of literature have been distributed, including Bibles and portions of Scripture.

RELIEF WORK

We are convinced that the need for well-directed voluntary relief work has not at any time been more urgent than it is today, in spite of the huge sums that are being spent by our governments and municipalities.

Unless one is in personal contact with the situation, it is difficult to realize the actual want experienced by many people who through unavoidable circumstances are compelled to appeal to the Mission for assistance to tide them over in time of emergency.

The circumstances necessitating this might be stated as follows: temporary unemployment, insufficient earnings, inadequate pension or relief in case of sickness or other emergency cases.

HOW INVESTIGATED

By personal calls on city cases if necessary, or on receiving information from other reliable sources.

Country appeals usually verified by either Teacher, Clergyman, Doctor, District Nurse, J.P., Postmaster, or R.C.M.P.

CHURCH PLEASED WITH NEW BILL

OTTAWA, April 8—Gratification was expressed today by Dr. J. W. Woodside, moderator of the United Church of Canada, that royal assent had been given to the bill which enables the Presbyterian congregations that withheld themselves from the Union of 1925, to use the name, "Presbyterian Church in Canada."

"This legislation reflects complete agreement and harmony on the part of both communions," said Dr. Woodside today. "It removes a source of irritation, while at the same time it does not prejudice the rights and claims of either church.

"The legislation was enacted at the request of the United Church of Canada. Under the union legislation of 1924 the church formed by the congregations that did not enter the union could not legally use the name, 'Presbyterian Church in Canada.' The right to the name has now been granted, at the behest of the United Church, by parliament."

JOINT SERVICE AT M'DONALD

On Sunday, April 9, at McDonald Baptist church, there will be a combined service of Shiloh and McDonald Baptist churches. Special musical numbers will be rendered, and Rev. H. Stibbards will be the speaker. The service will close with the observance of Communion. All members and adherents of both churches are urged to attend.

RELIGION SCHOOL BEING PLANNED

The Alberta School of Religion plans to establish a camp for 11 days at Camp Fairweather, a two-hour drive from Calgary, according to information received from Rev. A. H. Rowe of High River, with whom registration for attendance at the camp must be carried out.

Eleven days of delightful camping at The Alberta School of Religion, August 1 to 11 at Camp Fairweather, twenty minutes from the city of Calgary and two hours drive from Banff.

The camp is affiliated with the "Fellowship for a Christian Social Order" and invites the coming together of ministers and leaders working for a better society.

To listen to and camp with such leaders as Drs. Charles C. Webber, Methodist Federation of Social Service, New York; Clarence L. Stanley, Presbyterian Federal Council, Missouri; Charles H. Huestis, Vancouver, and Watson Thomson of Alberta University, Edmonton, is not an every day occurrence.

CHURCHES PLAN EASTER MUSIC

Easter Sunday will be celebrated in city churches with special services designed to commemorate the significance of the occasion. In churches of all denominations, there will be services all emphasizing the joy brought to the world through the events of the day.

In all music will play a prominent role, with favored selections from standard cantatas and oratorios, or other music appropriate to the occasion being featured.

Most of the churches are featuring two services during the day, at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. but some are varying the hours and number of services.

In connection with the services at Knox United church, which will be under the direction of the minister, Rev. G. A. Macdonald, the following music will be given under the organist and choirmaster, W. H. Mawer:

MORNING

Organ Prelude, "Easter Morning," Malling; anthem, "They Have Taken Away My Lord," Stainer; offertory, "Hosanah," Gramer.

EASTER

By GEORGE C. CRUX
Director British-Israel World Federation

THE Apostle Paul having been trained by the famous lawyer, Gamaliel, naturally looked at all things from the standpoint of the law. He gives us the legal aspect and significance of the sacrifice of Christ.

G. C. CRUX

We commonly hear it repeated that as Christians we are One in Christ, but St. Paul puts it much clearer for he says God hath quickened us together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." Eph. 2:6. Then after continuing his explanation he states "In whom (Christ) all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord: In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit." Eph. 2:21, 22. In this discourse St. Paul clearly shows that we actually become part of the Christ and as stated elsewhere constitute His body we like it the head, or using the building illustrations as above, He is the chief corner stone.

If therefore, we are members of the body of Christ or "One in Christ", then His sacrifice on the Cross takes on a far reaching importance and significance not usually stressed; for if we are "One in Christ" then we actually (from the legal standpoint) died in Him, and in Him legally experienced burial and resurrection.

It is often stated that Christ died for us, but, if we are "One in Him", then He not only died for us but also as us, and if He died as us then He was buried as us and also rose as us.

It is historically established fact that Christ died on Calvary and that on the first Easter morning He arose from the dead and came forth from the tomb and inasmuch as every Christian is part and parcel of Him, therefore, in the person of Christ every Christian has been buried and has risen to newness of life, and thus has become joint heir with Christ, who is the heir to the covenants made with both Abraham and David.

In our history there is an outstanding relative incident, namely the dedication of Isaac on Mount Moriah, in this sacrifice every son which we become the "Sons of God," and have "passed from death unto life."

Having shown a few significant details of this all-important event or events in the relationship between Christ and mankind, our study was dedicated to God and for His service. On this same spot, or very close to it, hard Jesus made the outstanding sacrifice of all time by tween Christ and the individual it is in order to refer to the national importance of the same events, especially when we consider the darkness of the hour this Easter.

NEW COVENANT

Many events a New Covenant became possible. The Old Covenant was made with the nation in Abraham and his seed forever. This is admitted by all. Logically then, the New Covenant must also have been made with the nation; if not, how could it be called the "New Covenant?" If it were made with the Gentiles or with the Church as Christians, then it could not be described as the "New Covenant" for that very term classifies it as being made by and between the parties of the Old Covenant. If this New Covenant had been made by and between other parties than those of the Old Covenant, then it could not be described as a "New Covenant" but must be described as an instrument or document, stating no relation to what is called the Old Covenant. The revised version changes the situation up wonderfully and tells us that the New Covenant was entered into with the nation that had received the former or old covenant. That nation is the nation of Israel. We are Israel.

Some 600 years before Christ, Jeremiah tells us that God intended to make a new Covenant with the House of Israel—Jer. 31:33; and Christ every Christian every one of Hebrews contrasts the two Covenants and quotes the very verse of Jeremiah above referred to, to show that the old Covenant made with the Fathers, including the promise of an earthly inheritance, which parties of this good, was "ready to vanish away" and be replaced by the New Covenant with the House of Israel. A Covenant must be subject to the former one, in that it included "an eternal inheritance."

INSEPARABLY CONNECTED

If you will carefully note all accounts and prophecies concerning the first Advent you will find that Israel and the Messiah are inseparably connected one with the other; hence it must follow that Israel is also inseparably linked with Him in His trial, death and resurrection, and is this not cause for unbounded joy and gladness, assuring us not only of victory over death and the grave but also over the disorder, want, sorrow, suffering and that terrible fear of war that now benights all Israel.

Let us one and all prepare for the second Advent knowing that the Scriptures cannot fail and they show his soon return.

SPIRITUALISTS GREET VISITOR

The City Temple of Spiritualism will be favored by a visit of Rev. A. Eshelby of Calgary, during this week-end and during next week.

Rev. Eshelby needs no introduction to Spiritualists or Friends of the City Temple, as she is well known for the high standard of her work conducted during her many visits here in past years.

She is an outstanding Psychometist-Clairvoyant, and in using the crystal the messages conveyed are clear and explicit, and has been the means of help and guidance being received by many desperately in need.

Those interested in obtaining proof of the "continuity of life after the change, so-called death" are advised to attend at the City Temple during the visit of this noted worker.

PLAN SERVICES AT M'DOUGALL

McDougall United church has planned very inspiring and impressive services of worship for Easter Sunday morning and evening.

In the morning at 11 a.m. there will be a great rally of all the members and adherents, and there will be a special welcome to visitors. The minister will preach on the subject, "The Darkness and the Dawn," dealing with the genuine joy of the Easter season as coming out of the triumph of trouble and sorrow and death of this life. There will be special music by the senior choir under the leadership of W. J. Hendra with Miss Helen Barbour at the organ. The junior choir will render two numbers, "In Joseph's Lovely Garden," by Clarence Dickinson, and "An Easter Song," by George Rathbone. Mrs. E. A. Reid will conduct.

At the evening hour of worship Cecil B. De Mille's religious film will be shown. It is a dramatization of the New Testament story of the Life of Jesus Christ that keeps true to the narrative throughout. The original film was silent but the reproduction in the narrow width has an excellently suitable musical accompaniment. Th total effect is deeply impressive and carries home the truth that was in Christ with power.

A very important congregational meeting for all members and adherents will be held immediately after the screening of the film. There is good news for the congregation in connection with the Victory Fund which has been a deeply religious effort of the congregation for the past fifteen months.

POLICE NOW ON TRAIL OF RACKETEERS

Drive Is Launched To Rid City Of "Confidence Men"

Reports of a group of confidence men operating in Edmonton have resulted in a police drive to rid the city of the gang, police said Saturday.

Following reports of a Sexsmith district resident who was "taken in" by a group of the men when he arrived in the city last weekend, and was relieved of $2,000, were followed by a report of O. C. Millham, of Hughenden.

He told police that he was approached by two men when he was leaving the Yale cafe Wednesday. The men said they were interested in buying land, and as Millham owns four farms he went with the men to a room in the Bradburn-Thompson block on 101 street to look at some land maps. He then went with the men to the land office, and arranged for a meeting with the men the next day.

The men, however, failed to show up as arranged. Millham then became suspicious and informed police.

Police said Saturday that no trace had yet been found of the men who obtained the $2,000 from the Sexsmith man, but that it was believed the gang were still in the city.

Spanish War Vets

H. Bouzallo, of Edmonton, former member of the Spanish International Brigade, arrived at Havre, France, Friday, from Paris, according to word received here Saturday morning. With him are 30 other Canadians, recently freed by General Franco. The group will be lodged in a camp at Havre for about a week before sailing for Canada.

Easter Holiday Observed Here By Government

Government buildings on Saturday continued cessation of business over the Easter week-end and will re-open at 9 a.m. on Tuesday. The provincial government offices closed at 5 p.m. on Thursday and will remain closed until Tuesday.

Civic offices were open on Saturday but will be closed on Monday in observance of Easter Monday. Courts, banks and local offices will close Monday, but stores will be open.

CHILD SUFFERS SERIOUS BURNS WHEN PLAYING

James Clyne, 3, Becomes Torch As Clothing Catches Fire

Seriously burned about the chest, face and head, arms and thighs, James Clyne, 3, son of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Clyne of 9337 107 avenue, is in the Royal Alexandra hospital as a result of his clothes soaked with cleaning fluid, catching fire when he approached a burning pool of the liquid in the lane behind his home shortly after 11 a.m. Friday.

Doctors attending the child said at noon Saturday that the boy was in a serious condition, the lower part of his head being badly swollen. His eyes are swollen shut. "It all depends on the amount of vitality he has to fight off the reaction of the burns," they said, "but so far he is holding his own."

Constable E. Forsland of the city police, investigating the accident, found that the little boy had gone with Douglas McArger, 9329 107 avenue, to the rear of the Dollar Cleaners, 9352 106A avenue, where there is a large tank of cleaning fluid outside the building.

DIPS FLUID

The McArger boy dipped gasoline from the tank with tin cans, and then the two boys started back to the rear of Clyne's house, James carrying one tin and his companion carrying two.

On the return trip, however, James stumbled and fell, saturating his clothing with the fluid.

Reaching the lane behind the Clyne home, McArger poured the two remaining tins of gasoline on the ground.

Joseph Keogh, 15, of 10739 95 street, admitted that he had struck a match and ignited the pool of fluid when walking by.

STEPS INTO FIRE

The McArger boy told police that young James had then stepped into the fire, evidently in an attempt to stamp it out, and was immediately enveloped in flames.

The little boy then ran in between two buildings on the lane and rolled on the ground in a frantic attempt to extinguish the searing flames, McArger said.

Harry Yaremchuk, 17, ground floor of 9337 107 avenue, said he was repairing a bicycle in the attic of the house when he looked out of a rear window and saw the Clyne child in flames.

MOTHER TO RESCUE

Calling to Mrs. Clyne on the second floor of the house, he rushed out to aid the child. Mrs. Clyne snatched up a coat belonging to James and when she reached her son wrapped his flaming body in the garment and rolled him on the ground, extinguishing the fire.

She then carried him to a car owned by a motorist who was visiting a house farther along the block and he was taken to hospital.

The underclothing the little boy was wearing was still soaked with fluid when he was admitted to hospital, police said.

City police and juvenile authorities on Saturday were investigating the circumstances surrounding the accident.

Daniel Declares Bloodless Revolt Brings Freedom

In one of the greatest bloodless revolutions the world has ever seen, women have found equality and out-casts respect, in India, Dr. O. E. Daniel declared at a missionary meeting in the First Baptist church Friday night. Dr. Daniel is a missionary of the Baptist church in Visagapatam, Madras province, India. He is making a tour of Canada, giving addresses on missionary work in India.

Edmonton All Set For Easter Parade In New Get-Ups

With fair and mild weather forecast, Edmontonians on Saturday laid last-minute plans to celebrate the Easter week-end. The week-end will be a mixture of events, widely varied in character and appeal. If the weather man runs true to form and to his promises, there should be a grand and glorious Easter parade with new bonnets, suits and gowns all on display under the most advantageous circumstances.

The week-end is deeply religious, although on account of the joyous occasion of the resurrection being celebrated on Sunday, the events on that day take on a note of religious jubilation.

Churches of all denominations are planning special ceremonies. Chancels will be decorated with lilies and other seasonal flowers. From the pulpits, ministers will deliver messages dealing with the significance of the occasion.

Choirs will provide special music, with cantatas such as Stainer's Crucifixion; Maunder's Olivet to Calvary and others being sung either in part or in their entirety with other suitable religious numbers also receiving their share of attention.

There will be activity in other lines, too.

In the realm of sport, there will be much to attract the attention. In the noonday school gymnasium on Saturday night, there will be an important basketball tilt, when Edmonton Aurorat tangle with Winnipeg St. Andrews in the second game of the interprovincial playdowns in the senior men's basketball championships.

Finals in the city table tennis tournament will be played at headquarters of the veteran's club, King Edward hotel.

On Monday, eyes of sports fans will turn toward Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto, where the powerful Edmonton Athletic Club squad, western champions and holders of the Abbott Cup, will meet the Oshawa Generals in the first game of the Dominion junior championship and possession of the Memorial

The Inquiring Reporter

The criminal code and motor traffic regulations provide punishments for the careless, incompetent, reckless and criminal driver. The forgotten man of motordom is the careful cool-headed and safe driver.

Should some method of reward be devised for him?" The Bulletin Inquiring Reporter queried today. Here are the replies:

JIM MORRIS, clerk: Unfortunately the careful motorist at present is penalized through the actions of the careless and reckless driver. Insurance rates fall on the just and the unjust. High rates covering loss of life and property have been made necessary by the reckless minority but they have been paid by the careful driver who has not contributed to the destruction.

JOE MONAGHAN, hospitalization board: A practical way to reward the careful driver would be to segregate the two classes and for insurance companies to discriminate between the responsible and the reckless driver thus making chronic offenders pay for their fun.

BILL KELLY, warehouseman: Application of the principle of bonuses for care in accident prevention would be a contributing factor to greater precautions by motorists and would result in a reduction in accidents.

PRIZE STOCK ON PARADE AT SPRING SHOW

Prominent Breeders Bringing Cattle and Horses For Exhibit

Cream of Alberta's livestock will be paraded at the annual spring livestock show sponsored by the Edmonton Exhibition Association starting on Tuesday next. From all parts of Alberta breeders are gathering at the exhibition grounds with their prize cattle and in the different classes.

Those who attend the show will see the cream of Alberta's livestock paraded before the judges and will see the advancement that has been made in the breeding industry, an advancement which has enabled Alberta breeders to win leading honors at livestock shows throughout the North American continent.

Alberta breeders will not have matters all their own way when the judging commences here on Tuesday. Entries from breeders in the western provinces and from Ontario will give them stiff opposition.

MUSICAL RIDE

Another feature of this year's show will be the famous musical ride performed by Lord Strathcona's Horse, a renovation at this year's show. This ride has been a major attraction at Calgary for several years and has been one of the most popular as well as spectacular acts ever presented at the southern city's spring event.

Brigadier G. R. Pearkes, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., officer commanding Military District No. 13, will give the show its official send-off when he declares it officially opened on Tuesday evening.

Tuesday will be Military night at the Arena, with members of the Canadian Legion, Canadian Corps, Army and Navy Veterans, Imperial Veterans, and garrison units on parade.

Famous Jumpers will perform each evening in the arena and the veteran Scotsman from the Belalta stable will be hard pressed to meet the challenge of horses trained in the Edmonton district when he invades the jumping ring here next week.

START MONDAY

Although the show does not officially get under way until Tuesday a start will be made in the judging on Monday afternoon when the children's judging classes will be adjudicated on under the supervision of W. J. Elliott of the department of agriculture.

Tuesday morning judging in the horse and cattle classes will start, while on Wednesday the auction sale of finished cattle will be held in the new sale ring. Thursday morning judging of the purebred bulls will commence with the sale of these animals set for Thursday afternoon.

A splendid program has been arranged for each of the evening performances commencing with Tuesday evening and concluding with a gymkhana program on Friday evening.

Here For Convention, Teachers Can't Find Enough Rooms

Presence of 1,000 out of town teachers at the 22nd annual meeting and convention of the Alberta Teachers' association which opens here Monday has created a serious accommodation problem, John W. Barnett, secretary-treasurer of the organization, said Saturday.

Total attendance at the convention, at which Edmonton's 550 teachers also will be present, is expected to touch the 2000 mark.

TWO IN ROOM

As hotel accommodation is limited, Mr. Barnett said "emergency measures to outlet delegates are being considered, including placing two teachers in each hotel room."

Edmonton teachers also have been asked to provide accommodation for some of the visiting delegates at their homes, he added.

The four day convention and general meeting of the association will be climaxed Thursday evening by a banquet in the Macdonald hotel at which Premier William Aberhart, minister of education, will be the special guest.

LAZERTE SPEAKS

Presidential address by Dr. M. E. Lazerte, director of the University of Alberta school of education, will be delivered Monday morning at the Macdonald hotel, at the annual general meeting of the Alberta Teachers' Association is convened. This meeting will be open to delegates only, officials announced.

Sessions of the general convention, which start Monday afternoon, will be held at the Macdonald, McDougall church auditorium, and McDougall church Sunday school hall.

THE USE AND VALUE OF GLASSES
By Jackson Bros., Optometrists

Everyone knows in a general way, by an Optometrist, without thinking that spectacles are worn to assist of the danger of thus treating an the sight, and there are a large organ whose mechanism is of the number of persons who know nothing more than they help the aged most delicate nature, and whose use to see to read, and the near-is almost as valuable as life itself.
sighted to see at a distance.

The common ignorance in regard to glasses and their uses has bred the idea, that persons can choose their own glasses; but the fallacy of supposing that the glasses that are the most pleasant for two or three minutes, are necessarily the best for years, is not so general now as formerly.

Experience has taught the public much in respect to the importance of the proper selection of glasses; but there are still many persons who would decidedly object to wearing ill fitting ready made clothes, who still do not hesitate, in the infinitely more important and delicate matter of selecting glasses, to purchase them in the old haphazard way without a measurement

Why not let the wearing of properly fitted glasses if they stop those headaches of yours; and at the same time improve your health and make you happier in every way.

If your are suffering from eyestrain, do not put it off, have your eyes examined right away. Our eyesight clinic is open every day except Sundays and Holidays, where you are assured of a thorough eyesight examination. If glasses are needed you will be advised of same. If not, we will give you good advice in regard to care of your eyes.

If you need glasses you can have the use of them while paying for them, by using our well established easy pay plan in weekly or monthly payments.

ACTIVITIES OF ALBERTA YOUNG PEOPLE

NEWS AND PASTIMES — Edited by Ken Metheral — CLUBS AND SCHOOLS

Two Youth Conferences Planned in June, July

More and more each year the youth of the world are stepping out to take their place in the business, political and cultural life of their respective countries. A main factor in this forward surge of the youth of the world are the growingly-popular youth conferences.

During the week announcement and plans of two conferences to be held during June and July reached The Bulletin. One will be held at Winnipeg and the second at Amsterdam, Holland.

Over 100 delegates are expected to represent youth organizations in Alberta at the fourth annual Canadian Youth Congress, scheduled for that city on June 30 to July 3. At Amsterdam, in the last week of July, will assemble the first World Conference of Christian Youth.

The Youth Congress at Winnipeg will be of great interest to all Canadian young people, both urban and rural. The congress will deal with agricultural conditions in the west and such subjects as health, education, conditions of and other topics. Information in re-workers in industry, world peace gard to program, transportation, etc., may be had by contacting Miss Mary Manton, suite 10, Powell block, Edmonton, or by phoning 73480.

Garth Walker and Jerry Huchinson will represent Edmonton at the Amsterdam conference. At present they are busy studying such materials as will be considered at the conference and meeting with various Edmonton Christian organizations in order that they may be fully qualified to voice the opinions of western youth.

They Direct Destinies Boys', Girls' Exhibition

Shown above are the young men and women who are guiding the destinies of the 1939 edition of the Boys' and Girls' Fair, which will be held May 10, 11 and 12. Seated in the front row is the executive, while grouped behind them are the directors. From left to right:

Front row: Pat Scott, secretary; Bob Torrance, manager of crafts, hobbies and pets; Al Collins, chairman of the finance committee; Myrtle Cameron, assistant managing director; Bob Macbeth, managing director; Harvey Porter, manager of advertising and publicity; Marjorie Metheral, manager of the department of fine arts; Louis Grimble, treasurer; Ralph Hollingsworth, manager of department of recreation, and Pauline Seiler, manager of entries.

Second row: Jack Caldwell, Denny Young, Dave Kushner, Jack Cook, Cliff Abbott, Bill Danyluck, Walter Bissell, Fanshun Taddy, Ralph Miller, Ray Toby and Fauntie Seward.

The booklet for the fair has already been printed. It is very attractive, having a gold cover, trimmed with blue and red in accordance with the Royal Visit, theme of this year's fair. Some 2,000 copies have been distributed among the schools. The books contain entry forms, but if additional ones are required they may be obtained in the fair office in the Y.M.C.A. building.

Photographic Masterpieces, Color To Feature 1939 Evergreen and Gold

"It won't be long now," two dozen university students sigh.

"It won't be long now," 1,500 students contemplate.

The object of the relief of the few, and the anxiety of the hundreds, is the annual year book of the students of the University of Alberta, the Evergreen and Gold. This $6,000, 200-page masterpiece of designing, artistry and printing, is each year the object of highest commendation throughout the length and breadth of the continent.

The reason for the restlessness and anticipation on the part of the students is the heavy cloak of secrecy that surrounds the book. The only people in on the secret of what it will look like this year are the designers and the printers—and they won't talk.

The only thing the producers will say is, "It's going to be bigger and better than last year." That's what they have said for many years, and curiously enough they've been right.

However a few facts have seeped out concerning this year's volume, and it seems the greatest change over last year's issue will centre around the color scheme. Formerly not more than three colors have been used, usually green and gold, the university colors, and black. This year the editors are apparently aiming to add a touch of color by using five colors.

The book is divided into several sections, each being separated by special art work and masterpieces of photography of campus buildings. These divisions carry the motif of the book and are usually the first hint of the entire production. It is in these division inserts that the editors intend to make their greatest use of color. As for the motif this year, it still remains a mystery.

The actual size of the book will be about the same as that of last year, but there will be an increase in circulation. More than 1,500 copies will be bought by university students.

City photographers have contributed some of their best efforts in the book this year, many pieces of which have been copyrighted. It is entirely produced in the city, with the exception of the cover, which is a padded leather job produced especially for the yearbook by a Toronto firm.

Last year's Evergreen and Gold, produced by Bert Swann, was rated by "Printer and Publisher" as being on as high a standard as any on the continent. It commented on the extremely large amount of pictures and finely executed art work, and the well balanced use of color. The art was done by Jack Bauer of Edmonton.

Those guiding the destinies of this year's Evergreen and Gold are Jim Corbet, law student from Calgary, who served as assistant director last year. This year's assistant director is Delmar Foote, also of Calgary. Two other guiding lights are Aylmer Ryan who serves in the capacity as editor, and George Mowatt, the business manager.

Then there is a staff of two dozen students who carry out the thousand and one details that such a book produces.

The 39 issue of the Evergreen and Gold is expected to be released next Saturday, April 15, if production continues without any setbacks.

Dainty Frock For Easter Parties

Junior Authors' Club

Hello Juniors:

The mailbag for this corner has been coming in very light during the past two weeks. In fact most days it has been plumb empty. However I expect that you have all been very busy cramming for Easter exams so you're forgiven. But I'm really looking for a lot of letters, stories and poems penned during the Easter vacation.

There are three letters this week one from a member in the city and two from the Aspeslet sisters at Bruderheim.

One of the best written little poems to be presented to this corner was a short little ode "To the Wax Candle" written by Thelma Mainhood of 10412-122 street in Edmonton. The poem came in just too late to be printed in last week's page.

The poem was written by the light of a tiny camp lantern recently when the electric light services failed in a portion of the west end of the city for almost two hours.

TO THE WAX CANDLE

Whatever you live, whatever you do,
Remember this poem as I tell it to you.
The city dweller may boast with pride
Of his lights that brighten the city wide.
But you can laugh and gently say
Remember big boy how they fade away
Leaving you parked in the inky black,
Hoping and praying the light to come back.
But the man who reads by a dimmer light
Needs not worry about such plight,
For he has always, close at hand,
The flickering flame of a little wax man.

The Candle.

By Thelma Mainhood.

Ruby Aspealet of Bruderhiem, wrote a dandy story about a brave little dog that rescued a child who had fallen into a deep pond.

I'm terribly sorry Ruby but there just wasn't any room to get your story in this week so it had to be left out. However it will be topping the list next week, so we will have something to look forward to.

Ruby's sister Sylvia dropped a little line to this corner, enclosing a short little poem called "Time".

TIME

The days are passing quickly
As if on winged feet.
The days, they pass so swiftly,
I've scarce time to greet a friend.

By Sylvia Aspeslet.

Don't forget Juniors, I'll be looking for lots of letters in every mail during the next week.

The Editor.

HONEYMOON BRIDGE CREATES LIBRARY

There may not appear much logical connection between the destruction of a great bridge and the creation of a public library, but took Scouts to discover it. When an ice jam last winter wrecked the famous Honeymoon Bridge over the Niagara river, and attracted throngs of visitors, Rover Scouts of the historic nearby village of Queenston pitched a tent at the scene, borrowed a stove, and sold "hot dogs," in a few hours netting $125. With this fund they created a public library in their headquarters "den," and at its recent formal opening displayed a selection of some 700 volumes, organized and catalogued on standard library lines. Rovers in Scout uniform act as librarians at stated hours.

C. G. I. T. TO HAVE SPECIAL BLOCK AT ROYAL VISIT

The Girls' Council decided to hold a "Day at Camp" in place of the annual track meet this year at the April meeting of the council held recently. It will be held May 27 at Victoria Park. The May meeting will take the form of a hike to be held May 6.

Miss Sutcliffe announced that a special block of seats will be reserved for the C.G.I.T. during the Royal Visit procession, but only girls wearing correct uniform will be allowed in the stands.

The Easter Vesper service will be held on Easter Sunday, April 9, in First Baptist church at 8:30 a.m. The Girls' Council will form the choir.

Two groups united at Garneau to hold their tea recently, the Lovelight group and the Crusaders. The Lovelight group presented their leader, Mrs. Cooper, with some roses as she is going away.

The Jolly Juniors at Wesley are putting on a play at the mother and daughter banquet to be held Thursday, April 13.

Snapshots Corner

By CAMFAN

Last week we mentioned, among other items, a contest for amateur photographers. There are many reasons for making photographs—to show an absent person the appearance of an object; to refresh the memory after a lapse of time; to stir the emotions or to derive pleasure from the creative processes involved. Skill is acquired chiefly through practise and its degree measured by comparison—so we have photo-competitions, exhibitions and salons.

Every picture should tell a story—and interestingly. Can you tell an interesting story in one picture? One method is through the use of silhouettes. Those are made by having the subject between the light and the camera—for example: against a window from indoors or against lake water or the sky outdoors. By this means a picture may be made very simple and therefore more forceful if carefully arranged. Try this during April and the best three pictures sent in will receive prizes of photographic supplies.

Rules For Silhouette Contest

1. Send in a silhouette picture as described above made since the beginning of this year which tells its own story clearly.

2. On the back of the picture paste a piece of paper on which you have written your name, address, the kind of camera and kind of film used. If you want to tell more about the picture all right.

3. The pictures need not be large —postcard size is big enough. No pictures will be returned but the best three pictures will receive prizes and be displayed in a store window.

This contest closes April 30 and another topic will be assigned for May.

BEGINNER'S DEPARTMENT

The speed of a camera depends on the amount of light passed to the film—the brightness of the image formed by the lens.

Most camera lenses have an adjustable diaphragm or a strip of metal with several holes of different sizes which control the brightness of the image. This depends on the size of the hole and its distance from the film. Thus a ½ inch hole four inches from the film is equivalent to a one inch hole 8 inches from the film. In each case the aperture is marked "f/8" which merely means that the diameter of the hole is one-eighth its distance from the film. Any two cameras at the same aperture require the same shutter speed. Both apertures and shutter speeds are commonly quoted at the next position. The numbers of the "Uniform System" show this:

U.S. 1, 2, 4, 8, 16, 32, 64
f: 4, 5.6, 8, 11, 16, 22, 32

Of course these may be extended to longer faster than f/4. This is readily done by squaring the "f number" and taking the square root after dividing by two. Thus lenses are now available as fast as f:1.5 (equal to U.S. 2) for miniature cameras.

Shutter speeds show parts of a second of time and are marked to give half or twice the exposure provided by the next position of the pointer. To get the same amount of light action in the camera the shutter must stay open twice as long when the hole is one size smaller.

CAMERA CLUBS

Officers of the "Telos" Camera club at the Y.M.C.A. are Lloyd Loveseth, president; Earl Taylor, secretary, and Gordon Cobusa, treasurer. They meet every Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. for an evening in their darkroom.

Eastwood High school boasts a camera club headed by Newton Van Allan, president, and Pat Blackie, secretary. They meet at noon on Fridays.

The Edmonton Camera club will meet Tuesday, April 11, at 8:00 p.m. in the office of the Gillespie Grain Co. Ltd. in the McLeod building, first floor. The chief event will be a photo question bee.

Next week: Twin-lens reflex cameras.

Who's Who

A. M. PARKER

Widely known for his devotion to stereophotography is A. M. Parker of 11623-88 street who has designed and built his own cameras. His Parker special takes either two pictures 2"x2½" at one time or the regular 2½"x4¼" on 616 film. The change is made by a sliding lever and lens-front. His mechanical ingenuity is matched by his skill in the hand-coloring of prints.

COMMISSIONER WOODS GIVEN SILVER WOLF

One of the most interesting Scouting ceremonies of the year was conducted on Saturday in Calgary when His Excellency the Rt. Hon. Lord Tweedsmuir, G.C.M.G., C.H., Governor-General of Canada and Chief Scout for Canada, presented a Silver Wolf to Provincial Commissioner J. H. Woods, C.M.G. The citation was read by Mr. W. J. Dick, provincial president, and included a summary of Mr. Woods' long service in the provincial Boy Scout organization. Colonel Woods first entered Scouting in 1911.

The St. Faith's Second Edmonton Sea Scouts, in conjunction with the Second Edmonton Troop of Boy Scouts will present a play entitled "Quiet Jones, Bryant Quinlan, Roy Grout, Kenneth Lawrence, Vernon Lawrence; proficiency badges. Torsten Jones, Normand Christensen, laundryman; Kenneth Lawrence, leatherworker; Vernon Lawrence, leatherworker; Bob Jamha, carpenter; Bob McPhie, laundryman, carpenter, handyman, fireman; Metro Bezuk, laundryman, fireman, handyman; Albert Laing, healthyman, laundryman, handyman, public health, fireman; Gordon Parker, handyman; Harry Paterson, fireman; Ernest King, carpenter, handyman, fireman; Cecil Cramer, leatherworker, ambulance

Edmonton High School Students Are Bulletin Correspondents

WESTMOUNT

By Bert Nightingale

The Westmount Pioneer went on sale Thursday, the last issue of the year. The magazine this month has adopted a more serious trend than usual, with the generally journal Inquiring Reporter asking the question now current in Canadian politics: "Do you think we should have compulsory military conscription?" The majority of those questioned were against the idea, a few for it and one or two were indifferent.

Nolan Henderson, in a well-written article, described the sweet-and-swing strokes of music.

McDONALD COMMERCIAL

By Dorothy Robb

A great deal of the school's interest was centered on the bowling alleys this week. The "Happy Gang" from Commercial and the "Head Pins" from Vic started the play-offs with a bang, the winner to play the "Alley Cats" from Victoria for the bowling cup. Commercial holds this trophy at present.

The results of the three games last Wednesday showed Commercial credited with two of them so they will compete next Wednesday with the "Alley Cats."

Each player on the winning team will receive a prize as well as the cup. There was also prizes for high average, high triple and high single. These went to Mary Baldwin, Doris Tumley and Dorothy Robb, respectively. The prizes will be presented at a banquet and dance the bowling teams are having.

VICTORIA

By Gordon Brown

Easter exams are now all over except for the reports as far as Victoria High students are concerned. This week saw those bother-some formalities disposed of and students managed to get in a little activity other than study.

Monday, April 10th at 9 p.m. will see this school's alumni and students fraternize in the annual Easter dance. Always an outstanding event, the dance this year promises to be better than ever.

The Invicti, Vic's starry table tennis aggregation, started out the play-offs with a burst of class this week by blanketing the Smithies, also of Vic, 16-0 in the first round.

EASTWOOD

By Ronald Jeffeis

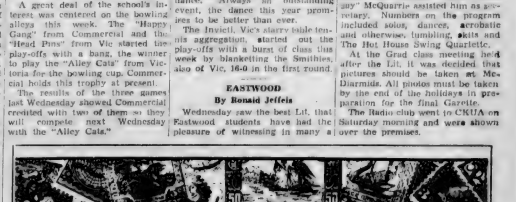

Wednesday saw the best Lit. that Eastwood students have had the pleasure of witnessing in many a long day. It took the form of a mock screen test with Brian "Sammy" Goldfish" Jennings as the talent scout. Miss Barbara "Gotta Lotsa" Mcquarrie assisted him as secretary. Numbers on the program included solos, dances, acrobatic and tiddlywink tumbling acts and The Hot House Swing Quartette.

At the Grad class meeting held after the Lit. it was decided that pictures should be taken at Mc. Diarmids. All photos must be taken by the end of the holidays in preparation for the final Gazette.

The Radio club went to CKUA on Saturday morning and were shown over the premises.

Page Sworn In As Successor To Premier Lyons

SYDNEY, Australia, April 8—Sir Earl Page, deputy prime minister and minister of commerce, was sworn in today as prime minister of Australia, succeeding Premier Joseph Lyons, who died yesterday. Sir Earl said he had been commissioned to form a government because there was no deputy leader of the late Prime Minister's United Australia Party. Sir Earl heads the Country Party with which Mr. Lyons formed the previous coalition government.

Crerar Tells Value Of Canada's Western Northland

Yellowknife Site Shows Great Gain Minister Declares

By HON. T. A. CRERAR
Minister of Mines and Resources

It is almost impossible, without the aid of a map, to visualize the extent of that part of the Dominion known as the Northwest and Yukon Territories. This area, often referred to as "Canada's Western Northland," occupies approximately two-fifths of the Dominion. It stretches westward from Hudson Bay to Alaska, and northward from the northern boundaries of the Prairie Provinces and British Columbia to the Pole.

This vast region of approximately one and a half million square miles—more than fifteen times greater than that of Great Britain—is directly administered from Ottawa by the federal government. In the case of the Northwest Territories the government is carried out by a commissioner, deputy commissioner, and five Councillors appointed by the governor in council. In Yukon Territory, the Dominion government is represented by a controller who is assisted by an elected council of three.

Although the scene of many of Canada's romantic explorations and of a thriving trade in furs since the seventeenth century, the area is today, geographically, one of the least known parts of Canada.

LAND OF MYSTERY

Until the advent of the airplane the western northland remained a land of mystery attracting only the more intrepid explorers whose activities were confined largely to the great rivers and lakes. Its every contact and association with the white man pulled all but a few resistant tribes of primitive Indians and Eskimos with fluttering fists of fur bundles and moccasins for the parade of the trader.

True, the discovery of placer gold in the Klondike area in 1896 directed a world-wide attention toward Yukon. But when the rich and more easily accessible gold-bearing gravels were worked out interest declined. However, it was revived by the discovery of oil at Norman on the Mackenzie river in 1920. Ten years later a new impetus was given to the opening up of the north by Gilbert LaBine's discovery of rich radium-bearing ore on the shores of Great Bear Lake. These discoveries were to bring about a new conception of our northern domain. Prospectors found in the airplane a new mode of rapid transportation and exploration. An ever-widening search for minerals began. Gold was found at Ontario Island, Great Slave Lake in 1934; at Yellowknife Bay in 1935; and at Gordon Lake in 1936.

By the summer of 1938 the supernorth of Great Slave Lake had become one of the busiest areas of prospecting and mining enthusiasm in the country. More than 4,000 claims were staked and recorded bringing the total number of claims in good standing to over 7,000. These claims are located on both sides of Yellowknife river for thirty miles up from its mouth on Outpost and Wilson islands in Great Slave lake, at Gordon, Moberly, Pensive, Thompson, and Wray lakes, and along Beaulieu river. Last year no less than 60 well-financed and well-organized companies and syndicates were active.

At Echo Bay on Great Bear lake, the scene of the original uranium discovery, the property has been opened up to a depth of over 900 feet and new ore reserves are being steadily proved up. New equipment has increased the capacity of the mill to between 100 and 125 tons daily. In keeping with this, the capacity of the company's refinery at Port Hope, Ontario, has been enlarged to a potential annual production of 126 grams of radium.

The effect of the discovery and development of these pitchblende deposits has been to reduce the price of radium from $70,000 a gram to $25,000. At the same time a new source of supply has been placed at the disposal of medical science for the relief of human suffering.

Apart from silver, a number of other important by-products are obtained from processing the silver-pitchblende ore. Chief among these is uranium oxide. Recently this new Canadian mineral entered world markets, which previously had been supplied almost entirely by Belgian producers. Other by-products include radioactive lead and polonium, both of which are now being used in industry.

FIRST GOLD BRICK

Another milestone in the mining [illegible] was reached last year when the first gold brick was poured at the mine near Yellowknife Bay. Since that time the mine has produced gold to the value of more than $550,000. One [illegible] the property in Yukon Territory is being treated at the Camp mill. At the Negus mine a 50-ton mill has been operating for some time and in February of the first gold brick was poured.

Of outstanding importance to mining activity in the Territories has been the development of the oil wells at Norman. Last year approximately 750,000 gallons of fuel oil, and 55,000 gallons of gasoline were shipped.

A large part of the Northwest [illegible] a succession of rocks of Precambrian age similar in other parts of Canada, have given us the great mining camps of Porcupine, Kirkland Lake, and Sudbury. In these districts there are known deposits of minerals which at present are not economically mined for commercial development. Among these might be mentioned the copper in the Coppermine river, Bathurst inlet, and Bloody river districts; the lead-zinc deposits on the south shore of Great Slave Lake; the large coal deposits on Bear lake; and the iron ores on the Belcher islands in Hudson Bay. A search is going on for placer gold along Liard and Nahanni rivers in the southwestern part of the Territories.

Production of the Canadian glass industry in 1937 amounted to $14,-[illegible],230, the highest since the record year of 1929 when the value was $15,567,442. The 1937 total was 50 per cent above the 1936 figure while its turn was 11.7 per cent higher than 1935.

3,000 NATIVES IN NORTHWEST FIGURES SHOW

Government Supplies Medical Assistance At Many Places

The present population, apart from Indians and Eskimos, is estimated to be 2,000 in the Yukon and approximately the same number in the Northwest Territories.

Notwithstanding the difficulties presented by the widely scattered population, every effort is made by the government to provide the native and white inhabitants with medical assistance and educational facilities and in other ways to look after their welfare.

ASSISTANCE GIVEN

Departmental doctors are stationed at the principal centres of population, and assistance is given to religious bodies in the maintenance of hospitals and day and residential schools.

Because of the pioneer conditions in the Territories, too rapid an influx of population is not desirable.

ONLY STRONG WANTED

Only those who are strong, healthy, and imbued with a hardy pioneering instinct, or who are assured of permanent employment should think of going into these regions.

New Alloy Found

Discovery of a new group of copper alloys containing uranium is announced by P. R. Mallory and company, of Indianapolis. The new materials which result in a suitably-hard copper are reported to give improved performance and longer life to current-carrying or heat-carrying members of electrical machinery. Besides high conductivity, it is stated, these new alloys have unusual resistance to a wide range of corrosive gases and liquids.

It's O.K. Everywhere

Even in the north the Indians have learned to make use of the white man's luxuries—and they have learned to demand the best. The above picture was taken at Fort Chipewyan and shows a group of treaty Indians just after they have spent their annual $5 treaty payments. Looming large among their purchases—and apparently one of the most important ones—is a large tin of Burns' "O.K." lard.

SILVER PRICE BIG PROBLEM YUKON MINERS

MAYO, Y.T., April 8—"The silver situation is at a critical stage as far as the Mayo camp is concerned," Livingstone Wernecke, general manager for the Treadwell Yukon Corporation stated on his recent trip of inspection and supervision of his company's operations in this district.

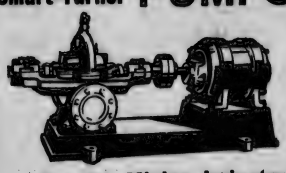

Until something definite is known regarding the future price of silver the T. Y. Corporation plans no new developments in Mayo for the present, he said.

The Silver Purchase Act in the States expires June 30 this year and it remains to be seen what effects the expiration of this act will have on the silver price. Until the silver issue is determined the Treadwell Yukon will continue operations in Mayo on its present scale.

The company, which is the largest silver-mining concern in the district employing 180 men, expects to ship 8,000 tons of concentrates this coming season.

Although the general fur catch this past winter has been poor, trappers throughout the north expect a good muskrat season.

Fur Trade Is Still Important Business In Territories

$1,500,000 Yearly Is Estimated Take Of North Trappers

Closed Seasons and Hunting Preserves Established to Conserve Wild Life For Future Generations

The fur trade of the Territories had its beginning when the Hudson's Bay Company received its charter from Charles II to trade into these northern regions. Today, nearly two hundred and seventy years later, furs are still one of the important products. In 1937, the last year for which returns are complete, 284,000 pelts valued at $1,200,000 were exported from the Northwest Territories. In the same year Yukon produced furs to the value of $350,000.

Ten years ago the annual yield of fur exceeded $2,000,000 in value. The reduction since then has been caused by a decline both in the price of fur and the number of pelts taken. The Dominion government is studying the cycles of abundance and scarcity and is endeavoring to ascertain the causes of these fluctuations.

The trapping of fur-bearers is the principal source of revenue of both Indians and Eskimos and in order to protect their interests the government has restricted the issue of trapping and hunting licenses and has set aside certain areas as native game preserves.

CLOSED SEASON

Closed seasons have been established for the more valuable species of wild life. Reserves totalling approximately 600,000 square miles have been set aside for the exclusive use of the native population.

The Thelon Game Sanctuary, northeast of Great Slave lake, of 15,000 square miles gives complete protection to the few remaining herds of musk-oxen to be found on the mainland of Canada.

BUFFALO PROTECTED

Wood Buffalo Park, part of which lies in Alberta, provides protection for the herds of buffalo and, incidentally, a hunting and trapping reserve for the hunters who were making their living there when the park was established.

Dip Needle Said Useful To Miners

Used extensively by mining men for the location of magnetic ores, dip needle surveys can be carried out rapidly at relatively low cost by untrained operators. The process consists esentially of taking measurements of the dip at intervals of from 25 to 100 feet along parallel lines traversing the area under investigation. Whenever the dip needle gives definite indication of the proximity of a disturbing body the readings are then taken at closer intervals, the spacing depending somewhat on the depth of the overburden.

TESTS INDICATE GOOD PROSPECTS LUNDMARK CLAIM

Thompson-Lundmark Gold Mines in Yellowknife has carried its incline shaft to a depth of 150 feet on the slope and cross-cutting to the main Kim vein is now proceeding. Only 30 feet of crosscutting will be necessary to reach the vein, it is reported.

The shaft is located approximately in the centre of the best shoot which, sampled at surface across a length of 450 feet, averaged $20.73 across an aggregate quartz width of 25.8 inches.

Drilling north of this shoot under quartz ground indicated an additional 500 feet of length, which gave the Kim vein a total explored length of 1,750 feet.

The distribution of gold in this vein is rather erratic and, as a result, no averages could be worked out for the drill intersections. Altogether, 16 drill holes probed this vein to a depth of 400 feet.

Surface sampling indicated other shoots on the vein, the best one being 125 feet long and $55.30 grade across 12.2 inches. The average of sampling the quartz only from one end to the other was $21.35 per ton.

To Aid Eskimo: Reindeer Herds Show Increases

Noteworthy progress has been made in the development of the reindeer herd in the Mackenzie River delta. The original herd of 2,370 has increased to over 4,500, and a number of Eskimos are being trained in the art of reindeer husbandry.

Recently a herd of 900 was turned over to the care of Eskimos in the Anderson river area, 150 miles east of the main herd.

The reindeer have been lent subject to a herd of the same size being returned eventually and the department reserves the right to reclaim the deer if there is any reason to suspect that they are not being properly managed.

Empire Exchange Is Headquarters For North Trade

For 20 years the Empire Exchange, situated at 10250 101 street, just opposite the Royal George hotel, has served the miners, trappers, traders and prospectors who going north from Edmonton, made the discoveries which have made the new territories so important today.

When Max Weinlos started the business in 1919, in the same store in which he carries on business today, most of his trade was with trappers and traders.

For 20 years he has sold guns ammunition, tents, camping supplies and prospectors' requirements, and his proud boast is that all his customers are satisfied customers. His name is known throughout the north, and his store is the rendezvous for northerners when they are in the city.

Sportsmen will find the Empire Exchange willing to serve them and ready to fill all their requirements, for they carry a full stock of sporting goods and supplies.

Canada Is Now Major Source Uranium Metal

Uranium, "mother of radium," is, from the standpoint of tonnage, the chief product of the radium industry, At Eldorado's Port Hope refinery, uranium production is three to four tons for each gram of radium and Canada is now one of the two major world sources of the element. Heaviest element known, it is produced only as a compound, not in pure form.

Eldorado produces uranium oxide, nitrate and compounds with sodium, which are in constant demand by the glass and ceramic industries as colors. Research has been conducted for some time, according to officials of Eldorado, into the alloying possibilities of the material.

Both ferro-uranium and cupro-uranium, the forms in which it would probably be used in alloys, are now being produced in the United States.

Poisoned Bait Takes Big Toll Of Yukon Dogs

MAYO, Y.T., April 8 — Three highly-prized huskies, two stray Indian dogs and a coyote was the toll taken here overnight in the canine ranks as a result of poison bait placed around town.

Lance-Corporal A. Mason-Rooke, R.C.M.P., is endeavoring to trace the person who placed the poison in meat ball cunningly planted along the main streets.

The three huskies were valued at $75 apiece. The dead coyote was found on the main road, half a block

155 Gold Mines Show Results In Canada Last Year

During 1938 a total of 155 gold minues were in production in Canada, not including base metal mines, many of which obtained considerable revenue from gold output.

Thirty-five new gold mines started production during the year and in 1939 at least 21 more are expected to be added to the list. In addition, 35 companies were producers of other metals.

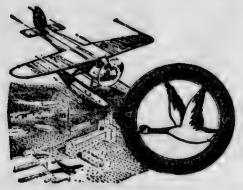

Altogether, there were 1,404 mining organizations active in 1938, including holding corporations. Companies not in production but actively engaged in the search for minerals totalled 1,010, of which 223 performed underground development, while 796 confined their activities to surface exploration and diamond drilling.

During the year 386 new companies were formed and started operations, while close to 100 older corporations which had been temporarily inactive were revived.

Northwest Still Dependent Upon Water Transport

Mining and other commercial activities in the Northwest Territories are largely dependent upon water transportation for the movement of freight and supplies.

The principal inland water route is provided by the Mackenzie river and its tributaries. It is one of the finest natural waterways in the world and extends with only one interruption for 1,600 miles from the end of steel at Waterways, Alberta, to the Arctic coast.

HAVE YOU FREIGHT for the NORTH?

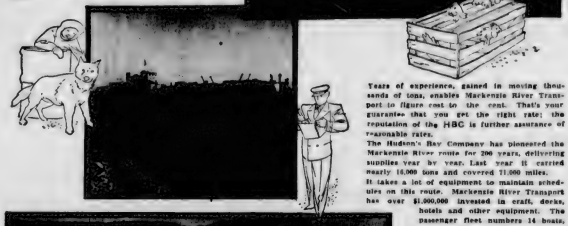

When sending goods into the North two things are important:

(1) What is it going to cost?

(2) Will the goods get in as promised?

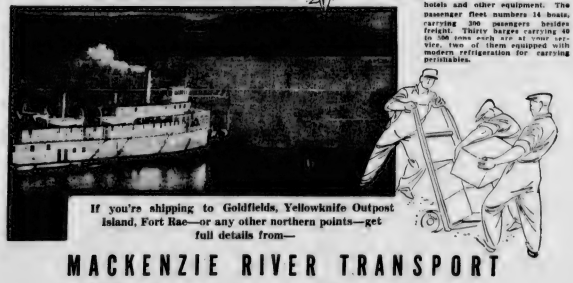

When transport is mentioned to those who know the North Country, they instinctively think of the Hudson's Bay Company's Mackenzie River Transport.

Years of experience, gained in moving thousands of tons, enables Mackenzie River Transport to figure cost to the cent. That's your guarantee that you get the right rate; the reputation of the HBC is further assurance of reasonable rates.

The Hudson's Bay Company has pioneered the Mackenzie River route for 200 years, delivering supplies year by year. Last year it carried nearly 16,000 tons and covered 11,000 miles.

It takes a lot of equipment to maintain schedules on this route. Mackenzie River Transport has over $1,000,000 invested in craft, docks, hotels and other equipment. The passenger fleet numbers 14 boats, carrying 300 passengers besides freight. Thirty barges carrying 40 to 500 tons each are at your service, two of them equipped with modern refrigeration for carrying perishables.

If you're shipping to Goldfields, Yellowknife Outpost Island, Fort Rae—or any other northern points—get full details from—

MINING PAYS HUGE RETURN FIGURES SHOW

Dividends Total More Than Billion Dollars To End Of 1938

Dividend payments by Canadian mining companies reached a total of $100,148,000 in 1938, which compares with a record total of $106,783,000 in 1937. The figures do not include dividends paid by holding companies, nor do they include stock dividends.

Total dividends paid by Canadian mines to the end of 1938 amount to approximately $1,045,000,000, or to about 23 per cent, of the total value of Canadian mineral production to the end of that year.

BASE METALS

According to records compiled by the department of mines and resources at Ottawa, dividend payments by metal mining companies in 1938 amounted to $93,776,200, of which the base metal producers contributed $54,600,000, and the gold producers $39,000,000.

Producers of coal, petroleum and natural gas contributed $4,281,000, while dividend payments by producers of the industrial minerals amounted to $2,000,000 in 1938.

LARGE PAYMENTS

International Nickel company of Canada, limited, was far in the lead in 1938, its dividend payments amounting to $31,102,000, and was followed in order by Noranda Mines, limited, with $8,993,000; Consolidated Mining and Smelting company of Canada, limited, with $8,164,000; Lake Shore Mines, limited, with $8,000,000; Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines, limited, with $4,920,000; and Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting company, limited, with $4,137,000.

NEW PROCESS GOLD REFINING IS IMPORTANT

American Engineer Finds Way To Treat Low Grade Ore

An amazing prospect for Canadian gold mining looms following an announcement made recently at the closing sessions of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers in New York.

A new process which, it is claimed, makes it possible to recover gold from low-grade ores formely considered worthless was explained by Dr. Thomas G. Chapman, head of the Department of Mining Engineering, University of Arizona.

PROCESS PATENTED

The new process, Dr. Chapman declared, is the product of more than five years research and has been tested in the field. Kept a close secret until its announcement at the meeting, the process is said to be patented for almost every country.

If it lives up to the implications of the claims made for it, the process opens up a vast future, especially for Canada. Though mining is still relatively young in this country and much has yet to be learned about tens of thousands of square miles of attractive prospecting ground, the process has much immediate interest.

Most of the great pre-Cambrian belt immediately offers interesting prospects if the new process can successfully tackle really low-grade ores. A very real revival in prospecting in Canada is just one likely result if the new process is as great as it sounds.

The new process consists of the simultaneous dissolution of gold from the ore by cyanide and the absorption of the dissolved gold on activated charcoal in ore pulps. This is followed by recovery of the charcoal by the standard flotation method. Charcoal is the new idea in the process.

U.S. Navy Plans Two World's Biggest Warships To Smash All Records

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

WASHINGTON, April 8 — The navy's projected two new 45,000-ton battleships—the world's largest warships—also may smash armament, speed and cruising records for their category, it was learned.

Carefully-guarded plans for the two "super-ships," to cost about $95,000,000 each, are being drafted in the Bureau of Construction and Repair. Informed quarters indicated that each probably would mount 12 sixteen inch guns, three more than carried by each of the six new 33,000 ton battleships being constructed. They would be capable of a 30 knot speed, and would carry fuel supplies for tremendous cruising range.

It also was learned that the navy has considered mounting 18-inch guns on the new battleships.

Canadian Mines Handbook for 1939 which has just been issued, is considerably larger than any previous edition, running to 415 pages and reviewing 5,526 companies. This all-time record compares with 5,319 companies covered last year, 4,714 two years ago and 3,744 in 1936.

The uranium content of newly-developed copper materials varies from a small fraction to twenty per cent, as well as unspecified amounts of such other elements as cadmium, zinc and magnesium.

For the first time in 10 years, the waterfowl outlook in Canada shows improvement, it was reported Saturday by chief federal migratory bird officers of the mines and resources department who conducted a recent survey.

Pilot Exams For Heart Trouble Is Now Recommended

MONTREAL, April 8 — Recommendation all civil aviation pilots be forced to take electro-cardiograph examinations was made by Dr. Rosario Fontaine, medical-legal expert.

The death of three men in an airplane crash near Lasalle-La Cesne, Que., on March 5 possibly were caused by a heart collapse of Pilot Oscar Therrien, Dr. Fontaine said in a report forwarded to aviation authorities.

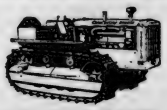

Dr. Fontaine said the pilot had been suffering from hardening of the heart artery. Possibly it caused him to collapse and lose control of the plane.

Increased Activity in Northland Expected This Year

New Discoveries Over Wide Areas Add to Interest

Miners and Prospectors Are Already in Field Awaiting For Warmer Weather To Melt Snows

Providing there is no major international upset this coming summer will be one of the most active and spectacular in the history of northern prospecting and mining development, according to observers from eastern Canada.

Already many prospectors have drifted back to headquarters at Yellowknife and some have even left that town for their headquarters in the bush in order to be on the spot to begin their summer's prospecting as soon as longer days and warmer weather clears the snow from the rocks which hold the keys to fortune.

Success of the Consolidated and Negus Mines, already in production, has stirred mining men in all parts of Canada and in the financial centres of the United States. The result is that some properties, such as Slave Lake Gold Mines, will reopen their workings on Outpost Island. B.E.A.R. are actively engaged both at Contact Lake and in the Yellowknife.

POSSIBLE PRODUCERS

Thompson-Lundmark are prospecting their claims which produced such spectacular grab samples last fall and it is probable that they will be into production before next winter. Other properties in the Pensive, Prosperous and Hidden Lake areas are also being considered as possible producers.

Spectacular discoveries in the Wray Lake area northwest of Yellowknife late last fall has considerably widened the field and led geologists to proclaim that the entire country is underlaid with gold.

Dr. John A. Allan, of the department of mining and geology at the University of Alberta, at a meeting of the Prospectors' Association this winter, advised miners and prospectors to be on the look-out for other metals as well as gold.

OTHER METALS

He pointed out that such rare metals and rocks as andalusite, beryl, ipodumane, amblygonite, tantalite and tourmaline have been found in pre-cambrian areas. Such minerals were of great value to many modern manufacturing processes, he stated, and might yet prove to be of greater actual value than the gold which is now the centre of attraction.

Norman oil wells and McMurray tar sands were valuable in themselves and might be an indication of other deposits of petroleum in the north, he stated. Gypsum deposits along the Peace River will some day become the centre of commercial activity, while coal from the valley of the Liard may well be used throughout the north before many more years have passed.

Leader

JOHN MICHAELS

Is better known throughout the north—and in Edmonton—as "Mike." A firm believer in the future of the northern mining areas, he has taken a leading part in the development of Yellowknife. The north has an stauncher champion.

Gold Shows Loss

The average price of gold, in Canadian funds, for the month of February, 1939, was $35.194 per fine ounce, as compared with $35.298 in January, 1939, $33.28 in December, 1938, $33.00 in February, 1938 and $35.01 in February, 1937.

Air Mileage

The total mileage of the aerial routes during the first year of scheduled operations, 19 years ago, was 3,000 miles. Today, according to the latest figures, the world total is now approximately 330,000 miles.

Credit for the rapid development of Edmonton as an air transport centre must go to the ability and courage of the men who fly the planes, which, from their Edmonton bases, carry passengers, mail, and express, to and from all ports of the north—the mining areas, the Arctic islands, and the Klondyke gold and silver mines.

The chief executives of the three major companies, Canadian Airways, Mackenzie Air Service and Yukon Southern Air Transport, are W. R. "Wop" May, Leigh Brintnell, and Grant McConachie. Their pictures have graced the pages of this paper on many occasions and they are well known to all northerners.

Field supervision for these companies, however, is in the hands of the men pictured above—who still sit in the pilot's seat and guide their planes to the outlying posts. Farrell is assistant-superintendent of Canadian Airways, McMillan is vice-president of M.A.S., and Field, chief pilot for Yukon Southern.

Burns Build Cold Storage In Mine Area

With the establishment of their modern cold storage plant and wholesale branch house at Yellowknife last year, Burns & Co. Limited again justified their reputation as the pioneer meat packers of the Canadian west. To have fresh foods available any day and every day was another milestone in the progress of the north and a boon to the residents of this rich mineral area.

A full and complete stock of choice beef, veal, lamb, pork, hams, bacon, lard, shortening, butter, eggs, cheese and poultry together with a full line of Burns' famous canned meat products are now available for the needs of those now residing in the famous mineral area. In addition to meat products, a supply of fruits, vegetables and confectionery is carried in stock.

The most modern and latest type of automatic electric refrigeration equipment is installed, which ensures proper temperatures for carrying these food products at all times. The frozen meats are carried in insulated rooms at a temperature of zero to five degrees below zero.

A special room is provided for eggs, where the temperature remains constant at 32 degrees. Special storage rooms for canned goods, lard, cheese, fruits and vegetables ensure their keeping quality at all times.

Even in the very farthest north gasoline and other products of petroleum find their way. Northern mine development would have been impossible without the aid of crude and gasoline to supply power.

WINTER ROAD BEING BUILT TO NEW AREA

Work Already Under Way On Overland Route To North

Due to the increased mining and other activity it has been found necessary to provide more adequate transportation for heavy freight during the time when water navigation is closed.

With this in view the federal government and the province of Alberta are, by agreement, constructing a winter tractor route, 330 miles long, from Notikewin, 70 miles north of Grimshaw, to Hay River Settlement on Great Slave lake, with probable later extensions to Providence and Yellowknife.

GOVERNMENT PAYS

The Dominion will defray two-thirds of the cost of the Alberta section and the entire cost of the 80-mile portion within the Northwest Territories.

The new route will provide a means of transporting agricultural produce of the Peace River district into the mining fields and of bringing out ores and concentrates to the railway at Grimshaw.

OTHER ROADS

Winter tractor roads have also been provided in the Yellowknife area to Gordon and Thompson lakes.

Transportation and Supply Depot for the Northern Mining Fields

Edmonton's Municipal Airport

- One of Canada's finest Airports with complete facilities for landing, refueling and repairs. Continuous plane service to the North by Three Commercial companies.
- Seaplane Base at Cooking Lake (30 minute run from Edmonton) on gravelled road for summer flying with floats.
- Railway facilities connect with boats and planes transporting passengers and supplies to the Northern Mines.

PRODUCTION OF THE NEW WEALTH from the Northern Mines means much to Edmonton in stimulating business and employment. The City of Edmonton has therefore provided every facility for the convenience of mining companies, prospectors and shippers using this city as a transportation and supply base.

Strategic Location

From the earliest days of the missions in the far North, Edmonton has been the supply centre due to its proximity to the great rivers and lakes which exist in the Yukon and Northwest Territories. The advent of the railway and the airplane, and elaborate boat services on the rivers and lakes, have but accentuated Edmonton's position as the logical supply centre for the whole Northern area.

Edmonton's trade in mining supplies, food, clothing, etc., with the far North has grown with leaps and bounds with the growth of mining development.

The city is equipped with wholesale and supply houses who have an intimate knowledge of Northern conditions and cater especially to mining companies operating in the North.

Marshall Comes to Defense of Edmonton

Business Sending Ambassadors Into North Mine Areas

Citizens Complimented on Foresight on Building Civic Airport—Future of City Looks Bright

The fact that more than $3,500,000 worth of consumable supplies, exclusive of mining and mill equipment, were shipped from this city to the new mining areas around Yellowknife and Lake Athabasca has justified our claim to the title, "The Gateway to the North," R. C. Marshall, president of the Alberta and Northwest Chamber of Mines, told The Bulletin in a recent interview.

President

prominent Edmonton businessman and president of the Alberta and North West Chamber of Mines. He is firmly convinced that in northern mining development lies the key to Edmonton's future prosperity.

"Edmonton citizens have been accused of being slow to grasp their opportunities in the north by not going out and getting after the business of the miners and mining companies and the prospectors. But I believe that such charges are unwarranted.

"Edmonton business houses are sending representatives into the north to meet the men who are developing that country on their own ground, to talk over their problems with them, and discuss prices, and the question of delivery," he said.

AIRPORT IS BEST

"What is far more important, however, is the fact that Edmontonians have uncomplainingly spent thousands of dollars developing and improving their civic airport until at the present time it is one of the best in the country. When you consider that the advantages reaped from this expenditure by the average Edmonton taxpayer are indirect, you must realize that it is unfair and incorrect to state that Edmonton is not interested in the north.

"As far as investing in mining developments and exploration projects is concerned, one can hardly blame them for being cautious. Most Canadians, and Edmontonians are no exception, own at least a few shares of oil and gold stock which is not worth the paper it is printed on. People who have been stung once are slow to make mistakes again.

"This is particularly true of people, like the bulk of our population in this city, who have to work hard for their money and are therefore particular how they spend it. They aren't going to throw a lot of money into speculative stocks without some reason for believing they will get a return for their money.

INVESTORS AIDED

"This is where the Chamber of Mines comes into the picture. L. E. Drummond, our secretary, keeps in close contact with the development which is taking place in the north. He learns quickly what companies have real properties and which ones have not, and can in a position to offer advice to prospective investors.

"The knowledge which he has, combined with the natural carefulness of our people means that money will usually be forthcoming if a property has promise, while there is really no reason why anyone should suffer loss by investing in worthless properties.

"In the long run I believe that this policy of caution will work out for the best interests of both the north and Edmonton. Slow development is usually sound development, while booms are often only flashes in the pan. Now that there are two producers in the field I am sure that it will be easier for deserving persons to obtain the necessary financial support.

HE HAS FAITH

"I have faith in the judgment of Edmontonians. Men and women who were foresighted enough to vote expenditures for a civic airport long before it became apparent that it would prove to be an asset to the city, will not be slow to see what development of the north will mean to this city. I expect the coming summer will be the most active yet," he declared.

$2,000,000 ANNUAL VALUE OF YUKON GOLD

Reserves Sufficient To Keep Dredges Busy For 15 Years

In Yukon Territory, the famed Klondike gravels still produce some $2,000,000 annually in gold. The industry is in the hands of large operators using dredges operated by hydro-electric power.

It is now known that the Klondike contains much larger reserves of gold-bearing gravels than was formerly regarded as probable. From the results so far obtained in the Klondike it is certain that there are sufficient reserves to keep the dredges now working in operation for over 15 years.

As there are large areas still to be tested it is expected that placer gold mining in Yukon will continue to be an important industry for many years to come.

Production of silver-lead ore from the mines at Mayo has increased steadily in recent years. In 1937 the ore and concentrates marketed had a value of over $2,000,000 and the final returns for 1938 are expected to show an increase. Coal occurs in several localities, but as yet only local requirements are supplied.

BOAT BUILDERS NOW TURN OUT AIRCRAFT SKIS

Of the many Edmonton firms which are interested in the north probably none have played a more important part in the development of these new mining areas nor is closer to the older fur trade interests than the Alberta Motor Boat Company, Limited, in Edmonton.

For more than 30 years they have supplied trappers, traders and more recently, miners and prospectors, with the means of travelling through the sub-Arctic territories.

As the name implies, they were founded originally as a boat building concern, and boats that they built—running all the way from canoes to schooners—still ply the waters of the Mackenzie system and the Arctic seas.

Their toboggans and dog-sleds have been used in all parts of the north for more than a quarter of a century and when old timers want a good sled they insist on having one made in Edmonton by the Alberta Motor Boat Company.

In more recent years they have turned their experience to the making of airplane skis. And today many of the planes operating on Western and Northern Canada do their winter flying on skis made by the Alberta Motor Boat Company.

The founder of the company, J. M. Hutchman, died last summer, but the work is still carried on by his partner, J. W. Weir.

Due principally to increased Canadian output world production of platinum increased by 20,000 ounces to 460,000 ounces during 1938. Canada's lead in production of platinum metals is ascribed largely to recovery of the precious metal from International Nickel company's copper-nickel ores at Sudbury, Ontario.

Reward of Toil

Price Goes Up: Copper Output Shows Decrease

The Canadian production of copper during January totalled 48,257,538 pounds compared with 49,520,452 pounds in the previous month and 52,454,135 pounds in January, 1938, according to a statement just issued by the Dominion bureau of statistics at Ottawa. Blister copper output amounted to 41,303,435 pounds in January; a year ago, 43,463,442 pounds were produced.

The average price of copper on the London market in January was 10.174 cents per pound, in Canadian funds; based on this price, the month's output in Canada was worth $4,900,722. In December, copper quotations averaged 10.31 cents per pound and the value of the Canadian production was $5,105,550.

Spring Is Near In Yukon Area: Signs Are Out

MAYO, Y.T., April 8—What with old Sol climbing higher and higher into the northern skies, spring gives every hint of being somewhere just around the corner in the Yukon. Following a heavy snowfall the weather has grown exceedingly mild, with above-zero temperatures every afternoon.

Other signs: Down in Mervyn's hotel the pinochle players are thinning out . . . Mayo homebodies are writing out their seed orders, property owners are heaving tons and tons of snow off the roof-tops and no electric lights are needed now at supper time.

Canadian Girl Said Another Galli Curci

HOLLYWOOD, April 8—Movie producer Sam Goldwyn says he has discovered a nine-year-old Canadian girl singer whose voice compares favorably with that of Galli Curci in range, timbre and quality.

His press agents described the discovery, Jacqueline Nash, as "Galli Curci of the fifth grade" and "prima donna of the auto camps."

Agreement Signed For Administration Of Pacific Islands

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The United States and Great Britain have signed a 50-year agreement for the joint occupation and administration of the islands of Canton and Enderbury in the Pacific, for use as transoceanic air stations.

The islands, considered highly important to the airline between North America and Australia, lie half way between Hawaii and Australia.

The First Question Is . . .

POWER

Electric Power was the magic key that unlocked the vast mineral resources of Eastern Canada - - - a dominant factor in their economcial and profitable development. The fast-moving, fascinating picture of Alberta's Natural Resources, from the Turner Valley Oil Field in the South to the new Mining Empire of the North, constitutes a challenge to the Power Resources of this Province.

Calgary Power Company is sparing no effort to respond to the call for Electric Power Service wherever possible.

Drummond Explains Procedure in Mining Development

Progress Marked By Three Phases: Stupendous Tasks

Amazing Advancement Noted on Many Properties in Spite of Almost Impossible Handicaps Expert Declares

By L. E. DRUMMOND

The progress of every mine is marked by three more or less distinct phases. First the discovery, with its purely superficial indications; second, the investigation to ascertain geological conditions, the continuity of ore bodies, and the structural characteristics.

This investigation requires trenching, surveys, and diamond drilling, which provides the information which must be obtained to guide the engineer in his decision whether the proposition warrants the third stage, viz., a large expenditure for plant developments and possibly the installation of a mill.

In the development of the great hinterland to the north of Edmonton, we find discoveries have been made followed by the investigations necessary for this second stage of mine progress. The third stage of development is now in progress. It is possibly interesting to note that the heavy equipment must be transported in summer time by steamers from the terminus of the railway, following the rivers and lakes to the northern distributing centres.

TWO YEARS AHEAD

From there it is transported the following winter by tractor inland to the site of operations. Hence it is evident that orders must be placed sometimes two years before the equipment is delivered to the mine site for setting up. This delay must be recognized to appreciate how long it requires to bring a mine into production.

In spite of these handicaps within two years the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company have erected buildings to house their men and equipment, installed a mill, which is a great credit to their ability and resourcefulness. Within a mile of their camp the Negus Mines have erected buildings and a mill and have brought it also into production, deserving the greatest commendation for quick development. This has all been done, as mentioned above, within two years and already about 20 gold bricks, with a value of $600,000, have been shipped from these two mines to the Canadian mint.

Another factor which is very important is the time period required to block out sufficient ore which will justify the expenditure of from half a million to a million dollars for the construction of a mill. The reserve tonnage must be assured to repay the capital cost of the mill and provide an adequate profit on the investment.

CREDITS PIONEERS.

The organization of these remote mines and the transportation facilities have been a stupendous task, a great credit to the pioneers of northern mining. This year we may expect two or three additional mines which will be brought into production, creating a further rise in the outbound gold shipments.

This will give confidence in the field and when the European problems, which are now prejudicing investment, have become settled, we may look forward with assurance that the field will secure attention, not only from many Canadian mining groups, but also from others in the United States and Britain. The outlook for mining work in the north is very bright and all those who have followed recent developments are confident that this will be one of the greatest fields in Canada.

Watchful

L. E. DRUMMOND

secretary-treasurer of the Alberta and North West Chamber of Mines, who keeps a watchful and discerning eye on the development of northern mining properties. Through the co-operation of the airways companies he visits the scene of activity regularly, and his reports on the various properties are read and respected by investors and mining men throughout Canada.

The North's First Airliner

Distinction of being the first to use a modern twin-motored, all-metal airliner on north service out of Edmonton, goes to Yukon Southern Air Transport, Limited. Pictured above is the first of a fleet of three Barkley-Grow skyliners which will be put into service between Edmonton, the Peace River country, the Yukon, and Vancouver. The one in the above picture has been named the "Yukon Queen." The second, "Yukon King," arrived from the east Thursday. These planes have a cruising speed of more than 200 miles per hour, and, in case of emergency, can fly with one motor, fully loaded. They provide comfortable accommodation for eight passengers and a crew of two.

Fire Insurance Is Cancelled At North Mine Town

GOLDFIELDS, April 8 — Word has been received here by holders of fire insurance with Lloyd's of London that their policies have been cancelled, taking effect at once. Cancellation is explained as "in accordance with the statutory conditions," but no reason is given.

Fire losses have been heavy in Goldfields during the past year and a half, and it is surmised that the insurance company, represented in Canada by a Toronto underwriting firm, has found the risk too high, this being the probable reason for cancelling policies. Excess of paid premiums has been refunded.

The town has no fire-fighting equipment except the fire ranger's hose and engine, which are available in summer but which were in use during the winter for flooding the rink.

The brown trout was brought to the United States from Germany.

Leather fire hose was invented in 1672.

MINES CHAMBER HAS LEAD ROLE OPENING NORTH

Taking a leading part in the arousing of interest in the development of the north is the Alberta and North West Chamber of Mines, with headquarters in the McLeod Bldg., Edmonton.

They maintain a full time secretary-manager to keep close watch on the development of the north, and the chamber has been responsible for several worthwhile reforms in northern administration—such as the reduction of freight rates to the north and the beginning a dredging program on the Athabasca and Clearwater rivers.

Honorary advisory council includes:

Luger Pistol Finding at Crash Site Brings Theory Of Mad-man in Pilot Seat

United Press
Exclusive to EDMONTON Bulletin

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 8—Finding of a rusted Luger pistol near the spot where American Airlines plane "Southerner" crashed at Goodwin, Ark., three years ago spurred a new investigation into the accident which killed 17 persons.

The gun was found last week by a negro farmhand three miles from the scene of the crash and at a spot over which the the plane had flown just before it went into a power dive and crashed into a swamp.

The gun was being held by a Memphis newspaper which planned to trace numbers on the pistol and determine whether one of the passengers on the ill-fated airliner was the owner.

Finding of the pistol gave credance to a theory advanced at the investigation of the crash. This theory was that one of the passengers had walked into the front of the ship, used a pistol to "interfere" with the pilots, and then hurled it from the plane a moment before the crash.

Eugene L. Vidal, head of the Bureau of Air Commerce who conducted the inquiry, found that there had been no explosion or fire, no structural defect, and that both motors were functioning smoothly as the big plane powered-dived into the swamp. His findings appeared to bear out the contentions that "interference" with the pilots was the cause of the crash.

The plane crashed in perfect weather over level country about 30 minutes after leaving Memphis on the night of January 14, 1936.

England's Man Of Mystery Wields Tremendous Might

By CHARLES A. SMITH
Edmonton Bulletin Foreign Staff Correspondent

LONDON, April 8.—Introducing Sir. Horace J. Wilson, England's man of mystery and the nearest approach in English post-war politics to the famed Colonel House of the Woodrow Wilson era in the U.S.

He is not in the cabinet. He is not a junior minister. He is not even a member of parliament. He is just a civil servant bearing the somewhat ignoble title of chief industrial advisor to the government.

In reality, however, he wields tremendous power and influence. Standing always at the elbow of Premier Neville Chamberlain, the most powerful boss English politics has seen for a quarter of a century, he is in effect deputy boss of England.

His advice extends far beyond industry. It embraces foreign affairs. It takes in its stride military strategy. It covers imperial defense, armaments, general European politics, and world affairs.

INDISPENSABLE TO PREMIER

His enemies call him the "office boy" but others put that title in the appellation. They insist it is not a true description. For Premier Chamberlain is Wilson's devoted adherent. He listens to him and agrees with his decisions, uses him to carry out his plans.

The world at large first became aware of Sir Horace during the important conversations that preceded Munich. Afterwards, he was seen everywhere with Premier Chamberlain, accompanied him on his famous aerial jaunts to Germany, and even became a special messenger for the premier when it became necessary to convey urgent letters to Hitler.

Yet Sir Horace has long been reckoned as one of the most powerful men behind the scenes in England.

Premier Stanley Baldwin liked him, and frequently consulted him on many matters other than industrial affairs. When Chamberlain succeeded him, Baldwin recommended Wilson as a man worth leaning on.

$15,000 ANNUAL SALARY

Sir Horace draws a salary of $15,000 a year. Pale complexioned with mild blue eyes, he is clean-shaven and dark haired. He walks with a stoop, dresses unobtrusively, and altogether is the perfect illustration of the better paid English civil servant. Usually he looks his full 56 years.

Married, with one son and two daughters, he made his mark at the ministry of labor, where he was principal assistant secretary from 1919 until 1921, and permanent secretary from 1921 until 1930, when he was created chief industrial advisor to the government.

He spends most of his time in London, and when not in Whitehall lives in quiet De Vere Gardens, in the Kensington district of the capital.

Occasionally, at week-ends, he drives down to a private cottage he owns in the Chailey district of Sussex county. The cottage is furnished like an office, with files, desks, and telephones. As soon as he arrives there, Sir Horace begins his week-end of relaxation by sitting down and starting work again.

When he finds time he likes to travel. It is only natural that his one club should be the travellers and his sole hobby work.

Easter Recalled As Grim Battle At Vimy Ridge

Easter of 1917 is recalled by many ex-servicemen as the occasion of one of the grimmest battles of the Great War when, at the third battle of Arras, Canadian soldiers took Vimy Ridge on April 9 and 10.

There were 2,000 Edmonton men in the battle, of whom 1,000 were in the 49th battalion. British troops killed in the engagement numbered 146,000.

Commanding the 49th battalion at the engagement was Maj. Gen. W. A. Griesbach, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., and among the late Col. G. Y. Wesver, D.S.O., V.D., was second in command.

Students Start To Write Exams Late Next Week

Last week of lectures before final examinations begin will start Monday at the University of Alberta. Final examinations start next Saturday.

Engineering and architecture students finished examinations this Saturday and next week will begin five weeks of field survey work.

There are between 450 and 500 students writing for degrees while the rest of the 2,000 students are writing examinations of the undergraduate years.

Annual convocation will be held in McDougall church when the convocation address will be given by L. W. Brockington, K.C., chairman of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Most students will seek summer employment and the university is helping to place a number of them.

BURMESE WOMEN RISE TO ARMS

RANGOON, Burma, April 8.—Home-loving women of Burma have, for the first time, entered politics by forming a Burma Women's Freedom League.

Under the leadership of Daw Thet Su, wife of a prominent Burmese leader, they met and passed resolutions urging boycott of foreign goods and the discouragement of intermarriage with other races.

The meeting resolved also to wreck the present coalition government by non-violent methods and called on the members of the legislature supporting the coalition to resign.

Nazi Leader

Pictured above is Arthur Greiser, Nazi leader in the free city of Danzig, which belonged to Germany before the treaty of Versailles. News that Memel had been returned to Germany spread quickly through Danzig, and rushed hopes of hundreds of thousands of Germans there that reunion with Germany might be only a short time off.

Appeal Court Cases Whittled By Chief Justice

The appeal court list for the April sittings, which open here Tuesday, was whittled down Saturday morning when Chief Justice Hon. Horace Harvey sat to arrange the order of hearings.

Nine criminal appeals were set over until the next sittings of the court, on the application of counsel. The adjournments were granted for preparation of appeal books.

Heading the list for this court is the appeal from the provincial government for leave to appeal to the Privy Council against the Alberta court's decision in declaring the Provincial Securities Interest Act ultra vires the provincial legislature. Six appeals from conviction and sentence on criminal charges and three civil appeals are also listed for hearing.

Former Edmonton Resident Passes

David Hamilton "Hammy" Kelley, 39, former well-known lacrosse and hockey player in western Canada, died in the Aylmer, Quebec, on Saturday. He conducted a business for several years in Edmonton, returning to Aylmer eight years ago. His wife died two years ago.

The nasturtium is named from the Latin words nasus, meaning nose, and torquere, meaning to twist, due to the plant's pungent odor.

KING, QUEEN WILL LIKELY SEE NEW YORK

May Spend Few Hours In City Proper London Paper Says

By RICHARD McMILLAN
British United Press, Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

LONDON, April 8.—The gossip writer of the Evening Standard reported that the King and Queen now plan to spend at least a few hours in New York city proper when they visit the World's Fair in May.

The writer said the change was largely due to representations made to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain by Roy W. Howard of the Scripps-Howard newspapers. The writer said:

"Originally it had been intended that after seeing the World's Fair outside New York, the Royal party should enter immediately for the President's home at Hyde Park.

HOWARD RESPONSIBLE

"The change in plan is largely due to Mr. Roy Howard, the American newspaper proprietor. When he was in London recently, he had an interview with the Prime Minister.

"Mr. Howard told Mr. Chamberlain that the people in New York city, which always has taken a particular delight in the reception of celebrities.

I gather that the Prime Minister was impressed by Mr. Howard's representations, and suggested that the plans should be revised. As a result, the King and Queen will be assured of a traditional New York welcome, accompanied by miles of ticker tape, which Wall Street always hoards for such occasions."

GOLDEYE CLICKS WITH COCKTAILS

NEW YORK, April 8.—Clementina Paddleford, cooking expert on the Herald-Tribune, praising Winnipeg goldeyes—peculiar to Lake Winnipeg and the Red River—slipped up a little when she called them "rich" for they are a species of herring. However, to New Yorkers they taste very good under any name.

"A fairly smoked delicacy, something even more exclusive than smoked turkey, to serve as a cocktail or cocktails. A shipment arrived by plane. Each fish, the color of red Christmas foil, weighs about half a pound and costs 75 cents. The flesh, tinged with pink, is moist and soft, almost like a sweetbread, and delicate of smoke."

BREAKFAST SAFE FOR JOHN BULL

LONDON, April 8 — Plans for war-time control of supply and distribution of wheat, flour and other cereals by a special committee are announced by the Board of Trade.

In peace time the committee will be an advisory board to which the cereal plans now being made will be submitted for consideration. In event of war, the committee will be converted into a cereal control board which will be responsible for the supply, control and distribution of all cereals in the United Kingdom.

Report from the Edmonton stockyards for week ending April 8:

Receipts:	Cattle	Calves	Hogs	Sheep
Week	637	206	618	33
Saturday	243	101	134	33

The market has been active on all classes of butcher cattle under very light receipts. Prices have held steady to firm with a decidedly improved undertone at the close. Salesmen finding no difficulty in cleaning up all offerings. The export market appears stronger and prospects are for firmer values. The following are the quotations.

Good to choice fed calves $6 to $6¾, good to choice steers $6 to $5½, fair to medium $5 to $5½, common to fair $4½ to $5, good to choice heifers $5½ to $6, fair to medium $5 to $5½, common to fair $4 to $5, good cows $5¼ to $4, odd tops $4¼, common to medium $2¾ to $3¾, canners and cutters $2½ down, bulls $3 to $4.

Stockers and feeders steady and in demand. The bulk of the better kind selling from $4 to $5, with good quality shortkeeps up to $5½.

Hogs remained firm throughout the week, with off-truck bacons selling at $8 per cwt. Selects bringing a premium of 50c per cwt. and butchers discounted $1 per cwt. Latest Canadian bacon quotations 79 to 83 shillings per cwt.

Sheep and lambs: Insufficient to establish a market, prices quoted steady. Top lightweights $7½, yearlings $4½ and ewes $3 down.

BRITISH MONEY FOR ALBERTA'S OIL HOPED FOR

MONTREAL, April 8.—Hope that the British Admiralty's interest in the oil supplies available in the Alberta fields would make it possible to obtain British capital in the building of the proposed 1,200-mile pipeline across the prairies to the Head of the Lakes was expressed Friday by Hon. N. E. Tanner, Alberta minister of lands, forests and mines.

Mr. Tanner was on his way to England with W. S. Campbell, president of the Wainwright Gas Company, and Mrs. Tanner and Mrs. Campbell. They left last night for Halifax to sail on the liner Duchess of Richmond.

"We've had no official word from the British government that it would be willing to undertake the building of the pipe-line," Mr. Tanner said, "but we've had a number of agents of the British government in Alberta recently, and we're extremely hopeful that something can be done now."

He said estimates of the cost of the line vary, but "we favor a 12 inch line, and we believe this will cost about $32,000,000." He considered it would be "a very good investment for the British government, and certainly of great benefit to the development of the Alberta oilfields."

U.S. Production Of Wheat Short Of Former Yields

CHICAGO, April 8—A survey of the United States winter wheat belt today showed that although favorable weather has revived farmers' hopes of harvesting good yields from their reduced acreage, production will fall far short of the crops of the past two years.

Efforts to reduce the United States' surplus took definite form last fall following the harvest of 931,000,000 bushels in 1938, largest crop in seven years. Producers planted only 46,173,000 acres to winter wheat compared with 56,353,000 acres the previous season.

As a result, current prospects indicate a crop estimated at 524,000,000 to 550,000,000 bushels compared with last year's harvest of 687,000,000 bushels.

STEPHEN LEACOCK

Stories Here and There From His Books, Lectures and Conversations

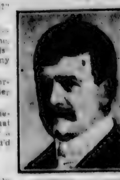

INFORMATION WHILE YOU DRINK

AMONG the figures of the vanished past whom I regret, is the old time bartender,—I mean, the bartender at his best. There he stood behind his bar, mopping up the foam, urbane, polite, neat in his wicker sleeves and with his hair flattened with oil, courteous, obliging, tireless.

He never drank. "Have one on me, Billy?"

"Thanks, I'll take a cigar."

But his especial forte was information—the latest horse race, the coming ball game, the time of all the "shows" and the "records" of the sprinters and scullers,—in short, all any "sport" could need.

STEPHEN LEACOCK

Beyond that he handed out general information, and beyond that conversation to order as desired.

Vilhjalmur Stefansson informs us somewhere that Esquimaux always tell you what they think you want to hear; they answer a question according to what they think you'd like.

Well, the bartenders were like that.

"Fine day, Billy!" "It sure is."

"Looks like rain, eh, Billy?" "It certainly does."

But I am thinking here of a specially illustrative case of bartenders' information that happened within my own experience. It was in Montreal away back in 1902 or 1901,—at any rate in the year, whichever it was, when Emile Zola died. I had gone into the bar of the old Prince of Wales hotel to get a drink before dinner, and stood reading the evening paper while I drank it.

My eye suddenly caught a news item and I looked up,—forgetting in my surprise just who I was talking to,—and said to the bartender:

"Billy, you don't mean to tell me that Emile Zola's dead?"

Billy shook his head sadly and went on wiping the bar with his cloth as he said:

"I think he must be. I ain't seen him round anyway for a week or more."

HEAVY EXPORT BOOSTS WHEAT

WINNIPEG, April 8—An export business in Canadian wheat estimated at nearly 750,000 bushels, together with renewed uneasiness in Europe, brought gains of as much as two cents to Winnipeg wheat futures prices today. Operations moved briskly and at the close values were 1⅜-2 cents higher, May at 61⅜, July 62½-⅝ and October 63⅛.

DOGS

by P. Hamilton Goodsell

THE PUG

With the present revival of interest in things Victorian it seems quite natural a breed of dogs that were so popular along with cosy corners, lambrequins and bustles should now be staging a fairly successful comeback. In many homes of the late '70's and early '80's the Pug was as much a part of a well-regulated household as was the 'fringe' of its mistress.

Whether their appearance appeals to one or not, it cannot be denied that, given sensible care and treated as a dog should be and not as an animated toy or accessory to one's costume, a Pug need take no back seat in popular estimation. It has the sterling canine qualities of loyalty and devotion and is particularly noted for minding its own business and for its singleness of devotion.

The breed probably originated in China, and in the sixteenth century was introduced into Europe where it became very popular, especially in Holland. Some authorities claim this was due largely to the fact that a Pug, a pet of the great William of Orange, frustrated an attack on that Prince's life by a would-be assassin, Julian Romero. Early in the eighteenth century the breed became very popular in England where it had been brought from the Netherlands. It possesses tremendous forbearance, and shows to a marked degree an utter lack of resentment. It is exceptionally clean in its habits, and, if not overfed, is healthy, gentle and affectionate. A few years ago the Pug Dog Club of America was revived, largely through the efforts of its present secretary, Dr. Aristine P. Munn, of Long Branch, N.J.

BILL OF RIGHTS

The city council in Gilroy, California according to newspaper dispatches, has passed a bill of rights for dogs. Under its provisions any dog charged with being a nuisance will have the right of trial before a police magistrate with its owner present, the right to have witnesses called in its defense, etc. The only right not provided is jury trial. When a dog is found guilty of such a misdemeanor as barking at night, unreliability, etc., its license will be revoked and thereafter it will be unlawful for the offending dog to remain within the city limits.

Once more I must remind my readers that although I am always glad to answer specific questions of a general nature. For example, how can I adequately reply to a request such as this: "I have a young puppy, and as I know nothing about dogs, I am writing to ask if you will tell me how to feed and train him." It is manifestly impossible to please tell me how to feed and to compress into one letter the myriad important details to be said on such subjects, particularly when, as in this case, there is no mention of age or breed.

Mr. Goodsell will be glad to answer letters about dogs, exclusive of those dealing with sicknesses, if you will write him at Tenacre, White Plains, New York. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

Our Old Country Letter — By J. E. Norcross

CLITHEROE, Lancs., Eng.—(By Mail.)—If memory serves it was Ruskin who said that the true reward of work well done was being given more work to do.

I was forcibly reminded of this the other evening when, having taken the course of instruction for air raid wardens, having passed through the gas chamber, and having gone through the ordeal of an oral examination, I attended at a gathering of other neophytes in this air raids precautions business to receive my silver "A.R.P." badge.

J. E. Norcross

I was under the impression that now I was all set in case of an air raid and could rest on my oars until there seemed to be some sign that one might be impending when I should be ready to put on my gas mask and step out to soothe startled people and help to prevent a panic.

But Sir John Simon, the home secretary, it appeared, had other ideas. "You are only beginning," our head constable told us. "Next week we start first aid classes and after that there will be training in dealing with incendiary bombs and getting people out of wrecked homes. Sir John is very particular about this."

What is going on in this little town in the Pennines is going on all over the country. And we wardens and others enrolled for special services are not the only people who are being trained. The whole population is being taught what to do when the bombing planes come.

We have not had an imitation air raid here in Clitheroe yet, but Oldham, 30 miles away, a great manufacturing town, was thrilled one night last week by a most realistic—so far as it could be realistic without casualties—air raids precautions exercise.

The King's visit to the big new munitions plant at Buxton, Lancashire, has been postponed to the end of the month and it will not be surprising if, when the American newspapers arrive, we learn from the other side of the Atlantic that it is because, in view of the bomb outrages, the authorities are afraid to let His Majesty undertake the trip.

There is no truth in this. The Lancashire police are quite capable of giving the King adequate protection. But it is feared that the heavy sentences passed on the Irishmen convicted at Manchester of complicity in the explosives campaign may provoke reprisals in the form of attempts to blow up important works.

It is therefore necessary for the present to mount guard over electric plants, reservoirs, docks and other vulnerable structures, and this duty is occupying so many police officers that it would be difficult to detach the force needed for supervising the Royal visit.

No official reason, however, has been given.

"Lucio," the brilliant columnist of the Manchester Guardian, has found a parallel to the Monmouthshire case of a youth of 18 who had been kept by his parents in one room for two years. The magistrate gave the couple a taste of their own medicine.

"Lucio" writes: "An even longer confinement came to light in the middle of last century, after a wager between Lord Cecil and an American named Walter Hastings.

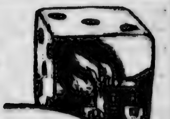

"They had been arguing over the effect of solitary confinement on the human mind, Hastings inclining to the view that it was not such a terrible punishment as many people supposed. Lord Cecil, however, refused to agree with him and jokingly offered $50,000 to any man who would submit to voluntary confinement for a period of ten years.

"Hastings immediately took him at his word and allowed himself to be imprisoned in a small room at Lord Cecil's home on May 2, 1860. He was supplied with candles, books and writing materials and fed at regular intervals by servants whom he was not allowed to see.

"Hastings kept his bargain, emerging from his improvised cell exactly 10 years later, but although only 35 he looked like a man of 70.

"He duly collected his $50,000 from Lord Cecil and returned to America, where he died four years later."

BARRYMORE TO APPEAR HERE FOR TWO DAYS

"Whiteoaks" Will Be Presented At Empire Theatre This Month

Edmonton will shortly see one of the "Royal Family of the American stage" in person. Ethel Barrymore in "Whiteoaks" will highlight the dramatic season in Edmonton with a two-day engagement at the Empire theatre Tuesday and Wednesday, April 25 and 26.

"Whiteoaks" is the drama of the famed in fiction Canadian family of that name celebrated in Mazo de la Roche's series of novels known as the Jalna books. Mazo de la Roche also made the dramatization which ran for 865 performances at the Playhouse in London, England, and on which Miss Barrymore is now touring following a highly successful season in New York.

BEST SELLER

"Whiteoaks of Jalna" published in 1929, topped the list of best sellers for that year, while the other four books of the Jalna series are still among the most popular in the literary history. The Whiteoaks are the clan of hardy Canadians who are individually and collectively, no less fantastic than the Barrymore family of The Continued Nonsense, including all of them, of course, as Grace Ardelina Whiteoak Ethel Barrymore. With the generosity of her Methods, she wields them into a united force. Sometimes she bangs them to smithereens by testifying them. Again she summons their fierce pride of family, but always she commands.

OUTCAST BOY

The play employs fragments of the several Jalna novels, but it stems chiefly from "Whiteoaks of Jalna." This is the story of young Finch. The boy, an outcast in the home of horse lovers and hard drinkers furtively devotes himself to music. Only Grace gives sympathy to his ambitions, and it is she who shields him from the rough resilery of his brothers Renny and Piers, and the younger half-brother, Wakefield.

Victor Payne-Jennings, who produced the play both in London and New York, has retained virtually all the New York cast, including Harry Ellerbe, Robert Shayne, Wyrley Birch, Reynolds Denniston, Lenore Chipperdale, Peter Fernandez, Joseph Roeder, Audrey Ridgwell and Martha Hodge, for a tour of the larger American cities.

afternoon will be Dr. Howard Lane, professor of education at Northwestern University; Dr. Frederick Redefer, executive secretary of the Progressive Education Association, New York; and Dr. Alice Keliher, instructor at New York University.

Dr. Keliher also will be the main speaker Monday at 7.30 p.m. in McDougall Church auditorium when she will discuss "Basic needs of youth in modern education". Chairman will be A. E. Ottewell, convention registrar.

All sessions of the convention, as distinct from the association's general meeting, are open to the public, Mr. Barnett explained.

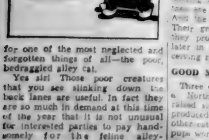

Delegates will represent departments of education for the four western provinces, Edmonton and Calgary normal schools, provincial institute of technology and art, and the University of Alberta.

Watch Stolen

A woman's vest watch valued at $25 was the only article missing from the home of J. Higgins, 9537 75 avenue, which was entered by thieves Friday evening, police said Saturday. Entrance was gained through the back door and the house was ransacked.

New Use Now Discovered For Prowling Alley Cat: Can Nurse Young Foxes

Somehow or other the world has found a use for most everything. Scientists took old rags and turned them into shiny new paper, wool can be made out of milk and the way mother can "doctor" Big Bill Williams' discarded suit into a smart outfit for little Johnny really ought to be classed as the eighth wonder of the world. But it takes Old Mother Nature to find a use for one of the most neglected and forgotten things of all—the poor, bedraggled alley cat.

Yes sir! Those poor creatures that you see slinking down the back lanes are useful. In fact they are so much in demand at this time of the year that it is not unusual for interested parties to pay handsomely for the feline alley-dwellers.

WHELPING TIME

This is whelping time on the fox ranches and therein lies the value of the cat. On a ranch that has anywhere from 100 to 500 female foxes raising young foxes, it is not unusual for one or two litters of new-born "pups" to be left motherless. Nor is it unusual for the female fox to turn against her young and destroy the pups unless they are taken away from her.

Under such circumstances the ranchers endeavor to procure a cat some where to take the kittens away from her and substitute the young foxes. And in nearly every case the foster mother gives her foxlings just the best of care, feeding and protecting them until they are old enough to be weaned. Then the young foxes thrive on it. Their growth is not stunted and they produce equally as fine fur later in the year as the pups reared by regular attention.

GOOD MOTHER

Three or four years ago a cat on a North Edmonton fox ranch raised silver fox pups that later produced pelts worth $500 and another cat on the same ranch raised pups worth over $200. So it is little wonder that the cats are worth a goodly sum. Appeals for cats have been broadcast by frantic ranchers faced with the loss of valuable litters.

MISS ANNETTE LEMIEUX

The artistic study pictured above was one of four photographs made by Hollywood's Geertz Edmonton artist, which were accepted and hung in Buenos Aires's Salon of Photographic Art in England, recently. There were 264 exhibitors from all parts of the world, but Mr. Geertz led the lists with four prints accepted. Other prints made by Geertz which were accepted were "Just Me," study of a little colored girl, "Mista Jim," and "Chinese Gentleman." The model for the photo shown above was Miss Annette Lemieux, Edmonton.

Mayor and Council to Wear Morning Clothes When Majesties Visit

Toppers and cutaways will be the dress for officialdom when Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth visit Edmonton on June 2.

The mayor and aldermen were kept in suspense for some weeks on details of the reception and correct attire for this occasion, but they have been advised that formal morning dress will be in order.

Silk hats, cutaway coats, gray striped trousers, white spats, gray gloves, pearl ties and furrdown collars are on the order paper. There is still some doubt, however, as to whether aldermen who do not own morning clothes will be required to obtain them.

A few members of city council possess "mornings," but the largest number do not. Though there have been no conferences on the subject there is speculation as to whether the expensive dress will be strictly adhered to.

The same dress will be the order for the lieutenant governor, premier and cabinet ministers, all of whom will be presented to Their Majesties.

Dress for women has not been announced in detail, although it is learned that floor length or street length dresses will be worn, together with white gloves.

Man Attacked With Knife In Robbery Try

Two men who approached Joe Studnotne, Cassie hotel, when he was eating in a 101 street cafe at 11 p.m. Friday, and asked him to step outside for a moment. When they reached the street, the man asked him for money. He refused the request, and the two men then kicked and struck him, trying to get into his pockets.

When he was dragged into a doorway, he struck out at one of the men, and the other assailant bit him with what appeared to be a knife, cutting one complete lapel off the front of his coat.

The two men then ran west on 103 avenue.

Studnotne called police, and went with them on a search of the district, but no trace of his attackers could be found.

The north's youngest pilot, Mickey Found, of Mackenzie Air Service, arrived back in the city from a flight to Coppermine, on the Arctic coast, Friday. With him he brought Mrs. "Slim" Semmler, and a trader named Lickard, and several stories of things in the north past.

He reported that Constable Doug. Nunn of the R.C.M.P. there, had left on a dog-team patrol that will take him 350 miles across Arctic ice to Cambridge Bay. Constable Chilley flew to Walker Bay with Louis Bisson in three and one-half hours—a trip which took him more than a month by dog team in the winter.

• • •

The epidemic which wiped out the dogs in the north has now been checked, and the police have a name for it—"mush" I'm damned if I could pronounce it let alone spell it," says Mickey.

• • •

He took Franz Johnson, well-known Canadian artist, through to Coppermine, where he will spend some time. He took 20 pictures on the way out, and the last I saw of him he was preparing for a 15-mile trip out across the ice to get some pictures of sealing operations.

• • •

Meanwhile Rudy Hesse, of Canadian Airways, has hopped off from Coppermine for Reid Island, where he will pick up a sick native and bring him through to Fort Smith for medical attention.

FORGER GIVEN 103 YEARS IN POLICE COURT

Sentences totalling 103 years in prison were passed on Stuart Jacobs, 23, when he pleaded guilty in police court Saturday to 21 charges of forgery, uttering forged documents and false pretences.

The sentences are to run concurrently, however, dating from his arrest in March, and the maximum sentence given him was six years. Jacobs is one of four men who flooded the province last fall with "company cheques," purporting to be wage cheques paid by various construction companies.

Also sentenced Saturday was Cecil McDonald, 36, who was described by his counsel, Hugh Calais MacDonald, as the "stooge" who dressed in workman's clothes and passed the cheques after Jacobs had forged them. Pleading guilty to six charges of uttering forged documents and one charge of false pretences, he was sentenced to five months in jail on each charge, the terms to run consecutively. He will serve the 35 months sentence in Fort Saskatchewan jail.

The remaining two members of the gang of cheque artists are serving jail terms now, one having been sentenced to three years in Prince Albert penitentiary, and the other to 10 months when he was tried in Wetaskiwin recently.

Acton, a section of London which once contained more than 300 laundries, now has 270 factories engaged in other businesses. Action once was called the "laundry of London".

CITY READY FOR EASTER STYLE MARCH

VIMY RIDGE FETE

Sunday will see the Canadian Corps Association gather at the Cenotaph at 2.35 p.m. to commemorate the 22nd anniversary of the Battle of Vimy Ridge, which was fought on Monday, April 9, 1917. The colorful ceremony will attract many Corps Association members who will wear berets, arm-bands and medals.

The Easter week-end is active in other respects.

Hot cross buns have been enjoying a tremendous popularity. For the last several weeks bake shops and restaurants have been featuring this seasonal delicacy and an unofficial computation is that the week end will see a total of 200,000 hot cross buns consumed, thus establishing a new peak hereabouts. On this basis the per capita consumption—if you like per statistics with your hot cross buns—will be 2.25 buns. Some are chiselling, as here is one, who already has exceeded his per capita quota. But it's an ancient custom. The Greeks had a name for it and they and the Egyptians made a habit of consuming these buns. Early Saxons introduced the buns to Britain.

Florists are doing a rushing business in lilies.

ROUND THE CORNER

Now that spring has turned the corner, this city likes to forget the winter as rapidly as possible and the lilp is one way of doing it. Consequently florists report a bang-up demand for this sweetly perfumed, ever-welcome flower. Bermuda and Japan gave the lilp to the world. Bulbs come here in the fall and grow in the winter. The six varieties of the flower are all popular here.

And what of the Easter parade, with the women's smartly tailored suits and dashing, devastating hats placed at a rakish angle?

Well, it should not be missed. It promises to be a "wow."

Suits are smart and trim with jackets cut more along the lines of standard male attire. Skirts are neat and trim and designed to show off the form of the wearer to best advantage.

Hats as usual are many and varied. They are of all shapes, colors and designs. If the right girl gets the right hat, she will "go over the top" in big style. If not, then why not?

Fritzi Scheff used to sing a song in "Mlle. Modiste" — yes, yes she sang "Kiss Me Again" in that opera, but she also sang a song called "Make the Woman."

Spring coats for women are more on the mannish order than usual, but they too, show off the fair wearers to advantage if properly selected.

There are some terrific new styles for men. The most "impossible" combinations of a few years ago, seem to be more or less of the standard type today. There are large-checked pants matched with light green coats and many other pairings of colors that would have caused a man to turn and bolt for the wide open spaces a few years ago. But no doubt, many of the new-fangled fashions will appear in the next day or so. So be prepared for the best—or the worst, dependent on how you view it—as the Easter Parade gets under way with a bang.

Through The Mill

Small satisfaction was derived from his brush with the law by a man who appeared in city police court Saturday on a charge of theft. The pair of shoes he stole from a city clothing store weren't even mates, and the reward he drew for lifting the merchandise was a jail term of six months. He is the possessor of a fairly lengthy record.

Something similar to the asp that stung Queen Cleopatra when she tucked the venomous creature in her bosom is the young man who is charged with theft of a typewriter. The accused met a traveller on a train bound for Edmonton, and when the pair arrived the traveller decided he liked his companion and allowed him to share his hotel room. The guest reciprocated the trust by walking off with his host's shiny new typewriter and selling the machine for $22.50.

He was sentenced to three months in Fort Saskatchewan.

A painful souvenir of the party that resulted in him being charged with intoxication was the battered and swollen nose displayed by a man in the dock. The magistrate added to the pain of the injured nasal equipment by fining him $20 and costs. Another man who likes to look upon the wine when it is red went to the pen himself to the tune of the usual $20 and costs.

Session Prorogues

FREDERICTON, April 8.—The fourth session of New Brunswick's 38th legislature was prorogued by Lieutenant-Governor Murray MacLaren Thursday. The session opened Feb. 16. For the first time in years there was a military ceremony at prorogation.
